Gov't In CUPE Row

The provincial government's labor department has stepped into the municipal labor dispute.

Tom Smith, area representative for the Canadian Union of Public Employees was approached by a member of Labor Minister Bill King's department Tuesday and asked whether CUPE would consider the establishment of an industrial inquiry commission in an effort to settle the dispute.

Smith dispatched a reply to King by had saying that CUPE would agree to a non-binding industrial inquiry.

His actions were ratified unanimously today by CUPE's bargaining committee.

In a bulletin sent out to all union members, the committee said that third-party assistance could be of great help in solving the situation.

It was up to management now to co-operate, the bulletin said.

All CUPE locals will hold general meetings within the next 48 hours.

CUPE spokesman John Marshall said if a one-man commission is appointed this could be done in two or three days and a report, with recommendations, be made available within seven to 10 days.

He said all CUPE members would be given the opportunity to vote on the commission's recommendations.

Jim Campbell, spokesman for the regional employers' bargaining group said King contacted him today and asked to meet the group at 2:30 p.m. today in King's office.

An hour later, however, King's secretary phoned and asked for the meeting to be delayed for 24 hours.

"We have no idea what King wants," Campbell said, "But I feel he should have approached both parties at the same time. All we know we get from CUPE."

Meanwhile Greater Victoria School Board chairman William Ross said today the board hopes to make an announcement soon that schools will return to a full-time basis.

He said the plans are being developed but the board has some serious problems to solve first before the schools can return to normal.

CITY PREPARING BYLAW

Firetraps Facing Axe

Victoria will strengthen its fire prevention bylaw to force owners of older hotels and rooming houses to upgrade their fire protection standards — even if that results in the closure of some buildings and the displacement of low-income tenants.

On Tuesday, city council instructed city solicitor Jakob de Villiers to prepare a bylaw amendment giving the beefed-up powers to the fire department.

At the in-camera meeting Fire Chief Eric Simmons gave council a list of buildings — 11 hotels and 13 apartments, all in the downtown area — requiring fire safety upgrading.

Under the amendment to be introduced at next week's council meeting, the fire chief will be able to enforce, through threat of closure, compliance with the fire safety requirements of the National Building Code.

The powers will embrace all multiple-occupancy buildings, including hotels, rooming houses, apartments, hostels and private hospitals.

Where any building does not conform to the code the fire chief will notify the owner to that effect in writing. The owner will be allowed six months to fix up the building, and the notice will warn him that if he hasn't done so by that time "no person shall use or occupy the building for any purpose."

De Villiers explained today that the owner can apply to council for an extension of the six-month period of grace, or alternatively the fire chief can apply to shorten the period if he deems it an emergency situation.

Simmons said some of the improvements that might be required would include provision of fire alarms with two power sources, to replace old battery alarms; direct egress to exits, so that occupants don't have to scramble through adjacent rooms to reach the fire escape; fire-separation floors; and in some cases sprinklers.

Ald. Malcolm Anderson, chairman of the fire prevention committee, said today there was no building in the list which was of an "absolutely must do right now situation," but another source put it differently.

He said some of the deficiencies mentioned "read like a horror story."

Anderson admitted the requirements of the fire chief could prove so expensive to some building owners that they would be tempted to close or demolish the buildings in question, thus displacing a number of tenants.

"But it's a risk we have to take, and it could be that we would find a way of relocating those people," he said.

Sources commenting on Tuesday's meeting said there was only one dissenting vote when council instructed the solicitor to prepare the bylaw.

"The consensus was this is an intolerable situation and council has a duty to act, regardless of the consequences," said one.

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Judging by their cheery hellos, goodbyes and see-you-tomorrows, almost every passenger on the bus seems to know everyone else.

Normally their conversation on the journey would concern the things commuters tend to chat about: the weather, the cost of living, kids, gardening, health, hobbies.

But these days there's really only one topic — the bus itself, and whether it will still be running next week between Victoria, Happy Valley, Metchosin and Rocky Point areas.

Mixed in with the speculation are roughly equal parts of optimism and pessimism, of indignation and concern.

But no one will know for sure what's going to happen until Friday at the earliest. That's when the B.C. Motor Carrier Commission holds a public hearing to consider the application by South West Coach Lines Ltd. to discontinue its service.

The commission's decision may be handed down that day or, if there's heavy public representation, it may be deferred a few days to allow commissioners to study the transcripts of all submissions.

One rural route less for bus driver Clar Thomas?

In either case it appears to be a foregone conclusion. In a series of Times interviews, all concerned expressed the view — company officials confidently, passengers resignedly—that the application will be approved and South West will be allowed to abandon the poorly-used rural route which it claims to be an economic disaster.

But in that case, will the NDP government, with its transit philosophy of service before profit, step in and direct B.C. Hydro to maintain the transportation link with the western community, as a logical extension of its capital region transit system?

If so, when? Could there be an interim period of irritation, inconvenience and even hardship for those who depend on the buses to get to work or to the stores, to see their doctor or visit friends?

Provincial officials either cannot or will not answer such questions — at least before Friday's hearing.

Victor Parker, head of the provincial bureau of transit, said any statement from him could well influence or prejudice the outcome of the commission's deliberations.

All he would add, cautiously, was: "In general terms it's fair to say the government is concerned wherever a loss of service is taking place."

But, in fact, according to Leo Richards, president of South West's parent firm, Watson and Ash of Courtenay, discussions have been going on with Parker for almost a year on the possibility of handing over the "total transit operation" for integration in the Hydro network.

NEW FERRY DELAY

Transport Minister Bob Strachan admitted to the legislature Tuesday that specification changes have delayed the completion of three B.C. ferries under construction on the mainland.

He was responding to a charge from Oak Bay Tory Scott Wallace that construction has been held back by the government's decision to use a Seattle design for the two passenger vessels and a truck ferry.

The original designs failed to provide for heavy enough drive shafts and bearings in the new mid-engine ships, Wallace said.

The problems, said Strachan, were not noticed until after the ferries were put to tender and, "Yes, there is additional cost."

Wallace said he was disappointed in the minister for not answering a similar question two weeks ago. "Then he simply said no, there was no extra cost."

"We were told last year that we had to go to Seattle because ships of that design were already in existence and it would cut short the construction time," Wallace said outside the house.

But there's a basic problem in the design that can't be passed off as technical aberration, said Wallace, and the ships won't be ready until next spring.

Turner In Bribe Incident

HALIFAX (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner, then a minister without portfolio, was mentioned in an RCMP report on an allegation that a bribe was offered to a salvage company in connection with the Irving Whale which sank off Prince Edward Island in 1970, according to the CBC.

It says the report followed a complaint by a salvage company executive that he had been offered a $50,000 bribe to raise his firm's bid.

The CBC, in the Halifax television news program Here Today, said the RCMP report included a recommendation that a vice-president of Foundation Co. of Canada and a vice-president of Acres Consulting Services of Toronto be prosecuted for "conspiracy to commit a false pretence" in the alleged bribe.

The CBC says the report noted involvement of three politicans, including Turner, in efforts by two Canadian firms to secure the contract and says Turner had been involved in a previous incident which could have worked to the benefit of Foundation Co.

The RCMP report said the previous incident involved plans to salvage the vessel LeeCliffe Hall in 1965.

A tender was offered on this salvage job by a British firm by the name of Risdon Beazley, the report said.

The CBC quotes the report as saying:

"Other pressures were obviously applied and we see at one point that the Hon. John Turner, then minister without portfolio, took a great deal of interest in wanting to see the tender documents and, later, the possible exemption which might be granted a foreign vessel of Risdon Beazley's on the LeeCliffe Hall."

The CBC said federal authorities later ruled a foreign vessel could not handle the job on the LeeCliffe Hall.

Indians Slash Fishnets

Indian fishermen of the village of Yuquot at Friendly Cove, 80 miles northwest of Port Alberni slashed the nets of non-Indian commercial fishermen who entered the cove Tuesday.

Members of the west coast district council of the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs are meeting in Gold River today to plan what action to take to protect their traditional fishing rights.

(See Indians Seize B.C. Land Page 55).

Chief Philip Paul confirmed today that 30 non-Indian fishermen had entered Friendly Cove Tuesday, which for as long as Indians can remember has been their traditional gathering place for herring roe.

The UBCIC has sent a brief to Ottawa, requesting that the gathering of herring roe, on which the Nootka band at Friendly Cove depends, be protected.

A spokesman said today that they had not received any official reply to their brief but it had been intimated that granting of licences for gathering herring roe was at least a year away.

Instead, the fisheries department has started to issue licences this year.

Up until this year, he said, there had been no non-Indian commercial fishing for herring roe that is either naturally deposited on kelp or on artificial substates.

Saigon Crumbling . . . Peace Talks Rumored

SAIGON (UPI) — More than half a million refugees fled five South Vietnam provinces today in a desperate search for safety in a shrinking Vietnam. Two northern provinces near the border of North Vietnam appeared in danger, and there were reports in Manila that South Vietnam was seeking a ceasefire.

South Vietnamese Deputy Premier Phan Quang Dan appealed to Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos today to help bring about a ceasefire in Vietnam, the Philippines government announced in Manila. Dan is on a visit to Manila.

President Nguyen Van Thieu met with Premier Tran Thien Khiem and Gen. Cao Van Vien, chief of the joint general staff, in a lengthy session today. There were strong recurring rumors that South Vietnamese, Viet Cong and U.S. officials were involved in negotiations somewhere outside Vietnam.

Vietnamese political and military observers said there could be no other explanation for the sudden evacuation of five provinces without substantial government resistance. There were strong indications that a Communist guarantee of an unresisted passage for the refugees was still holding firm.

The government already had told 250,000 residents of the Central Highlands provinces of Kontum, Pleiku and Darlac to flee to the coast. More refugees were fleeing from Dalat, the capital of the Central Highlands province of Tuyen Duc, northeast of Saigon. Today officials urged more than 300,000 civilians to flee the former imperial capital of Hue, in Thua Thien province 400 miles north of Saigon.

President Nguyen Van Thieu already had stripped Da Nang of a division of paratroopers and ordered them flown to Saigon to bolster the defences of the capital. Government sources said he had done so also in case dissident generals opposed to abandonment of the Central Highlands took matters into their own hands.

Meanwhile, in Cambodia, government paratroopers and T-28 bomber planes today attacked Communist-led insurgents operating across the Mekong River from Phnom Penh in a new threat to the capital. In Phnom Penh, there was new opposition ot President Lon Nol from students and young politicians and generals.

Filed reports said Hue radia Tuesday broadcast a first appeal to the people to flee, and that thousands of civilians began moving down Highway 1—the blood-stained road the French called The Street Without Joy.

Canadian Envoy Shot

BEIRUT (Reuter) — A Canadian diplomat and a woman companion were injured by machine-gun fire as they were driving in the suburb of Hazmiyeh early this morning, police sources said.

They said Michel Adrian Ritchie and Claire Albert Hayte were taken to hospital.

ANDERSON 'SNOB'

The opposition attack on Resources Minister Norman Levi for accepting a $200 political contribution flared again Tuesday in the legislature.

Several times Premier Barrett got into angry exchanges with government critics and in one outburst called Liberal Leader David Anderson "an insufferable snob." He later withdrew the remark.

Socred Hugh Curtis offered "new evidence" to the House — a letter from Joe Hargitt, donor of the $200, to Gary Bannerman, the Vancouver talk show moderator who first aired the transaction.

Barrett dismissed Curtis' evidence as "nothing new."

$200M Needed For B.C. Courts

The provincial government will have to spend $200 million within the next five years to provide adequate court facilities in B.C., the attorney-general's department annual report says.

Only 7 per cent of court facilities in the province were considered suitable in 1974 and an estimated 27 per cent of the space could be renovated, says the report tabled in the legislature Tuesday.

Last year the courts were hearing cases in 125 facilities at 82 locations, and occasionally at another 40 locations.

But the space shortage is expected to be compounded within the next three to five years because most of the municipalities require the space occupied by the courts for other uses.

The provincial government, since it assumed total responsibility for courts, will be required to replace nearly all of the municipal court offices.

Priorities in the replacement include a provision that all courts where possible be housed in the same facility, separate from police and other government offices, and at locations assuring equal access to the public.

"It is estimated that 64 new buildings, 17 courthouse renovations and 16 other renovations at a total cost of some $140 million would be required. In addition to this amount $60 million is to be spent on the new Vancouver courthouse."

The document, which outlines in depth all areas under the attorney-general's jurisdiction, also reports a decline in the ability of provincial courts to resolve claims and administer justice which is hindering the efforts of police and corrections facilities.

"The public and corporate and union clients become discouraged from relying on the courts to resolve their cases."

It notes a flagging public respect, particularly among those who have been exposed to the criminal court system, either as accused or witnesses.

"Unless the courts are given the resources necessary to provide adequate justice services, more people will seek alternative means of resolving conflict and respect for law will be reduced."

Gov't Zeroes In on Shoddy Big Business

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Fly-by-night operators are the first target of the provincial Trade Practices Act but some of the largest companies in British Columbia will be next to face charges, says Bill Neilson, deputy minister of the department of consumer services.

He said the department is beginning investigations into a wide range of practices by big companies and it would press charges where violations occur.

"We are giving advance warning that we intend to be fair — but we intend to be tough," he said.

He said there has been a high level of co-operation from businessmen generally during the early stages when small operators engaged in dubious practices were under the gun.

"It remains to be seen how much co-operation we will receive when we go after the big companies. However, we will not let that deter us."

The department was hopeful the high level of co-operation would continue.

He said the main aim of Consumer Affairs Minister Phyllis Young is to get the active co-operation of businessmen so the Trade Practices Act could be enforced without going to court.

At the heart of the program is the agreement of voluntary compliance, Neilson said.

This is similar to the consent order common in the United States but new to Canadian court actions.

In the event a company appears to be violating the Trade Practices Act, the department will press charges. However, the charges are dropped if the company agrees to sign an agreement of voluntary compliance.

By signing the agreement, the company does not confess to any guilt but says it will amend its actions in future and make any restitution agreed upon between the department and the company.

The advantages, says Neilson, are many. The deceptive practice is halted immediately, it will not be repeated and victims receive immediate redress.

The alternative is further court action. This could take months or even years to resolve. Sometimes it is impossible to get an injunction to halt the practice pending the trial.

And the adversary action in court is not the best way to get active co-operation from businessmen.

While preparing cases against large companies, the department at the same time is carrying out a massive education program so merchants will become fully aware of the requirements under the Trade Practices Act, Neilson said.

Meetings are under way with merchants, individually and in groups. A series of seminars on the act is being conducted by University of B.C. commerce department and sponsored by the department of consumer services.

"The minister (Phyllis civil prodeedings in the larger courts is the most critical and difficult problem in the area of court administration.

"Unreasonable delay almost invariably means injustice," says the report. "In a civil law suit, where the time to trial ranges from one to four years, delays are due not only to outmoded administrative procedures but also to questionable procedural formalities."

The Justice Development Commission, now assessing existing services, sees the main problem as basically outmoded methods of court administration.

Recommendations receiving department scrutiny include establishment this year of "an efficient, well-trained staff in each court registry . . . capable of using modern management methods in the administration of justice."

The report also says that about 80 per cent of minor court cases were tried without benefit of a court or electronic recording.

"Budget considerations keep the Official Court Reporter Branch woefully understaffed."

Current objectives are expansion of the branch so all proceedings will be recorded verbatim and by the year's end the objectives were "broadly speaking, being met."

There is one reservation, however, "as soon as a fair balance between reporters and volume of court work were achieved the workload and pace of the court work are stepped up."

The report says the role of deputy sheriffs' service may be expanded to free the police from their duties in the holding of accused persons for trial. The next step, the report says, would allow sheriff services to operate lock-ups now being operated by the police.

That concept is under review and recruiting and training of deputy sheriffs for these positions will start late this year.

Improved legal services for people in lower income and middle income groups, the report says, have resulted in increased provincial contributions to $3 million from $1 million in 1974.

The provincial contribution for Legal Aid services jumped from $830,000 in 1973 to $2 million in 1974.

Big Business Firms Face Charges

Young) wants to carry out a dialogue with businessmen. She wants them to know what to expect so there will be no surprises."

Education has a high priority for the consumer services department because the act is so new.

It was proclaimed in July and studies began into trade practices in the province. Only two AVCs were signed in 1974. In the first two months of 1975 an additional four were signed and two firms were petitioned into bankruptcy by the department of consumer services so customers could recover some of their losses.

First target in 1974 was the fly-by-night operator whose practice was questionable. These were mainly some small car dealers and health spas.

"Some of these people left the province soon after the legislation was proclaimed (in July)," Neilson said.

However, investigations are continuing and the department has made no secret of the fact its present target is the tax rebate shops where customers regularly get only about half the money due them from Ottawa. The tax rebate shop keeps the other half in return for instant cash payment.

At the same time the department is proceeding with its rogram of preparing advertising guidelines so that the concept of truth in advertising is maintained.

In addition, regulations will be added to the trade practices act by May which will affect practices involving price quotations and estimates.

The regulations will assure that there is a close relationship between the estimate and the final bill for such things as repairs for cars and appliances.

The department will have at least 25 investigators in the field at any one time assuring that the regulations of the trade practices act are being carried out.

In addition, some groups are being paid to assist with various monitoring projects. One of the more interesting ventures is the hiring of hospital patients to check advertisements for deceptive advertising.

And the public education program has a high priority — so businessmen will know what to expect and consumers will know what their rights are.

Quadruple Donations To World Food Program

ROME (Reuter) — Canada announced Tuesday it will quadruple its contribution to the World Food Program for 1975.

A Canadian delegate to a meeting of the program's governing body said he could not give a monetary figure for the supplementary pledge but that an announcement will be shortly made by his government.

The existing Canadian pledge is $20 million.

The delegate, Frank Shefrin, said the increase will be in the form of grain, other mainly high-protein foods, and cash.

reaction. They say 'sure, we will take it over,' but that's as far as it goes," said Richards. "No indication of when, no commitment."

As an example of the bureau's procrastination, he said one letter from Parker dated Oct. 21 last year was in reply to a letter he (Richards) had written July 29. And three attempts at setting up exploratory meetings between himself, Parker and A. R. Fitch, superintendent of motor carriers, had been called off because Parker could not attend.

Watson and Ash purchased the company in October, 1973, and with it the contractual obligation under the Motor Carriers Act to run buses to the Sooke, Langford and Happy Valley-Metchosin-Rocky Point areas.

Richards said the Sooke and Langford services catering to growing communities are not making money but at least they are not running at a loss, and will therefore continue operating.

The third route, however, has done nothing but lose money during a period when operating expenses have risen by 25 to 30 per cent, including higher fuel, wages and maintenance costs.

South West manager Ralph Plumridge estimated the service providing two round trips daily is losing about $3,000 per month. Average daily revenue, he said, is about $20, "which isn't enough to pay the driver's wages, let alone upkeep and overhead."

Starting from Rocky Point, the bus calls at Pedder Bay, along Metchosin Road from Jenkins Store, loops over to Happy Valley via Latoria and then from Glen Lake along the Sooke Road to the Trans-Canada Highway and so into Victoria.

The morning departure at 7:50 a.m. gets into town at 8:50. A reporter who boarded that bus at Glen Lake one weekday last week found seven other passengers aboard. The evening return trip that day, leaving downtown at 5 p.m., started off with 24 passengers but almost half of them disembarked at Colwood Corners and only nine passengers were still aboard after the Sooke-Jacklin stop in southern Langford.

How many passengers, regular or occasional, would be left without public transport if the service was discontinued?

In the "very low hundreds," Plumridge guesses, and both he and Richards point out that the Sooke bus will still be operating, so passengers from the affected areas can either walk or perhaps get a lift to the pick-up points on Sooke Road.

But that notion isn't too easy to swallow for people of an independent turn of mind, who don't like to rely on the goodwill of neighbors.

One such person is 81-year-old Kenneth Glyde, who lives alone at 4556 William Head Road, and who needs to travel into Victoria at least twice a month.

Glyde said he has lived in Metchosin since 1938, and the service was better and more reliable years ago than it is today. As it is he often has to resort to a taxi — at $8 or $9 for the single trip.

Lack of reliability is an oft-recurring complaint among regular passengers.

Regina Ternus, a Pedder Bay resident who uses the bus daily to attend classes at a Victoria business school, said: "A lot of former regulars don't come at all now because the buses are so unreliable. Two weeks ago the bus didn't run at all for four days."

Another disgruntled customer, Audrey Stickle, 3186 Wishart, summed up her frustrations more bluntly: "They (South West Coach Lines) can go with my blessing."

Mrs. Stickle was one of several passengers interviewed who believed the rural service would be far better patronized if arrival times in the city coincided more closely with office and business hours.

Others asked why the company had not experimented with running mini-buses, in an effort to trim operating costs.

But manager Ralph Plumridge shrugs aside such suggestions as not worth consideration.

"People are so car-oriented that they would not use the bus even if it ran every 10 minutes," he declared.

As for mini-buses, he said they would reduce the capital outlay per vehicle but would do little, if anything, to bring down operating costs.

Most passengers, while gloomily admitting that the company will be able to argue a case for discontinuing the run, insist the government through its crown corporation has a responsibility to maintain at least a basic service to the areas that could be otherwise deprived.

Said Kathleen Hall, 4823 Rocky Point Road: "Surely we who have been paying our taxes all these years deserve some consideration. They have B.C. Hydro services running all over town so it doesn't seem much to ask for just a few buses a day to serve our area."

John Waterman, president of the Metchosin Ratepayers' Association, one of the groups which will be represented at Friday's hearings, believes it's almost an anachronism for small, privately-operated bus companies to be in the rural transit business. Such firms "don't give a damn about day-to-day service" and are obsessed only with obtaining licences for profitable charter business into the U.S., he said.

Similar comments came from some passengers, but Leo Richards of Watson and Ash replies that the charter trade is not profitable enough to offset a heavily-losing transit operation like the Metchosin-Happy Valley service.

(South West has no charter licence for operating in the U.S. but Richards admitted the company does have such an application before the Motor Carrier Commission. He said he believes it has been held up mainly due to a "backlog" of similar applications awaiting approval).

Esquimalt MLA Jim Gorst, who has asked Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer to extend the capital region transit system to Colwood, Langford and Metchosin, said it's an interesting philosophical question to ask whether a company should be allowed to "grab the lucrative charter business when it has dumped the public."

The public hearing Friday will be held in room 204 of the Law Courts, 850 Burdett Street, starting at 10 a.m. South West Coach Lines is required under the terms of its licence to continue operating the threatened service until the commission's ruling on the matter.

Richards, for one, is fairly confident about the result: "The Motor Carrier Act is explicit on this — no one can be compelled to continue a service which is a financial disaster . . ."

the weather

Little change in the over-all weather pattern for B.C. is expected for today as a large low pressure area north of the Charlottes continues to give a southewesterly flow of moist unstable air to the west coast. Mainly cloudy skies will persist with occasional rain-showers along the coast turning to occasional light snow-flurries over the northern interior. Skies will start to clear from the west Thursday afternoon and evening as slightly warmer more stable air approaches.

Season Open 2 Days: Five Boats Sunk

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

With the herring season only two days old five B.C. Packers Ltd. fish boats loaded with catches have already sunk.

The latest went down at 8:14 a.m. this morning about two miles off Bordelais Island in Barkley Sound.

A Pacific Co-ordination Centre spokesman reported the men were spotted by the lifeboat crew as they were towing another herring boat the 55-foot gillnetter Seaforth into safety with her crew of five.

"She had been heading for Vancouver and had broken down south of Pachena Point," the spokesman said.

"They spotted the other boat foundering and saw the men getting into the liferaft. They went over and picked them up."

The spokesman said the weather was not severe at the time. The wind was blowing about 15 knots.

"The trouble is herring is like having a bunch of water aboard," he said, "It's not like salmon that you can pack tight. Herring slosh around."

The 95-foot Ernest Todd also sank today about 6 a.m. two miles off Pachena Point with a full load of herring aboard.

The five men aboard were rescued by two other fishing vessels in the area, the Cape Mark and the Cape Bathrust. Owned by Todd Fishing Co. of Vancouver, she was also fishing for B.C. Packers.

There is still no sign of the Steveston man and his two sons who have been missing since their fishing vessel the Lady Sylvia was found capsized four miles off Nootka Island. The vessel is now beached at Cachalot Inlet in Kyuquot Channel.

The first sinking occurred Monday shortly after the herring season opened at 2 p.m. Five men were rescued when the Vampe went down off the Queen Charlottes.

Five men were also rescued when the Royal Princess foundered in Barkley Sound Tuesday.

Mines Lose Round One

VANCOUVER (CP) — A British Columbia Supreme Court judge dismissed an action Tuesday brought by 18 mining companies challenging the legality of the province's Mining Royalties Act because they sued the wrong party.

Mr. Justice D. R. Verchere said the proper defendant in the case was "Her Majesty the Queen in the right of the Province of British Columbia." The suit named the attorney-general, the minister of mines and petroleum resources, the administrator of mineral royalties and the assessor of the mineral land tax as defendants.

Three Escapers Guilty

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three prisoners who escaped custody Nov. 28 at Cassidy Airport near Nanaimo were convicted of three counts of attempted murder, wounding and forcible seizure Tuesday in B.C. supreme court.

Richard Dale Beeman, 25, Robert Moyse, 19 and Claire Daniel Wilson, 24, will be sentenced Friday by Mr. Justice A. B. MacFarlane.

After a nine-hour manhunt, the three men were caught when a police vhicle rammed the car the prisoners were riding in.

They were charged with attempted murder of deputy sheriff Gilbert Perry, RCMP constable Paul Cloutier and farmer Ben Dixon of Cassidy. They were also charged with wounding deputy sheriff Jerold Ockey and with forcible seizure of Frances Dixon.

School Classes

that schools return to a full-time basis because the board has failed to justify the present curtailment program, despite the strike of janitors.

Ross said the board is concerned about three major problems in connection with opening the schools on a full-time basis.

—The use of volunteers to clean schools during teaching hours could come into conflict with policies of the British Columbia Teachers Federation that teachers will not assist or work beside strike breakers or volunteer labor during a labor dispute. Co-operation with teachers so far had been excellent but the use of volunteers could precipitate new problems.

—Full-time teaching would mean a great increase in garbage because many students would bring lunches.

—It is difficult to obtain voluntary clean-up help in evening hours. If school was on a full-time basis it might be difficult to find sufficient help to clean buildings after school.

"However, these problems are not insurmountable and we may have something to announce in a few days."

Meanwhile John Wood, lawyer for the school board, will appear in B.C. Supreme Court at 10:30 a.m. Thursday to ask for an injunction against mass picketing of schools. Writs have been issued and affidavits filed for the court action.

The board wants to limit the number and location of pickets around schools.

At the same time, lawyers for the transport ministry, city of Victoria and private industry today are seeking grounds for a possible Supreme Court injunction to reopen Johnson Street bridge to marine traffic.

In a hard-hitting speech to a chamber of commerce meeting at The Empress today, president McHaffie said schools should be re-opened on a full-time basis, despite the strike by janitors.

Record U.S. Deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States closed out last year with the biggest three month deficit on record for its basic balance of payments, the government reported Wednesday. The commerce department said the balance was in deficit by $5.9 billion in the last quarter of the year, a deterioration from $3.9 billion for the previous quarter.

Ottawa Holding Back On $1 Million Payout

Times News Services

Payment of more than $1 million in shipbuilding subsidies to a Quebec company is being withheld by Ottawa while legal officers study whether the payments should be made in light of the dredging scandal.

Payment to Marine Industires Ltd., will be held back until a legal opinion is received, Industry Minister Alastair Gillespie said Tuesday.

Marine Industries was among 13 companies charged last week with conspiracy to defraud through dredging contracts.

It also is charged with income tax evasion in Toronto and with tax conspiracy in connection with harbor dredging in Hamilton.

Gillespie thus came a long way from March 6 when he and Mitchell Sharp, acting prime minister, said there was no connection between subsidies and investigations into dredging contracts.

Jean Simard, relative of Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa, meanwhile appeared in an Ottawa court today to be indicted on five counts in connection with the dredging scandal.

Simard, cousin of Bourassa's wife, is vice-president of Marine Industries Ltd. of Sorel, Que. and a director of J. P. Porter Co. Ltd., two of the companies charged with conspiracy to defraud.

On his return to the Commons Tuesday, Labor Minister John Munro was not asked about the Hamilton affair, which has developed since 1972 from allegations of local corruption to charges last week that 13 companies and 14 individuals conspired to cheat taxpayers of more than $4 million on dredging contracts.

Questioning in the Commons Tuesday about the Hamilton harbor scandal or the dredging charges was the lightest it has been recently. Most of the questions involved Munro, although none were directed to him.

Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau did not reply to a question put to him by Pat Nowlan (PC—Annapolis Valley) concerning Marine Industries.

"In trying to clarify this matter I would like to ask the prime minister if he is confident that no minister of the government was aware of possible wrongdoing, or allegations or suspicions of fraud or irregularities regarding Marine Industries contracts prior to the complaints in the fall of 1972?" Nowlan asked.

He pointed out that Monday in the House the Prime Minister had been asked whether the government knew about a "possible massive fraud prior to the fall of 1972."

The reply by the Prime Minister Monday was "I am prepared to say that certainly no one in the cabinet knew."

Blaze in Chamber Fatal to Diver

NANAIMO — A professional diver burned to death in a flash fire in a decompression chamber in Nanaimo Tuesday.

The man, whose name RCMP have not released pending notification of next-of-kin, was employed by Can-Dive Services Ltd. of North Vancouver.

He had just surfaced after working at a depth of more than 200 feet repairing boyancy apparatus for a new effluent pipe being installed at MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. Harmac pulp mill.

Supervisor of the diving operation Phil Newton said decompression was normal and rouine after a dive of such a depth.

"We've done it thousands of time before without mishap."

He said the cause of the fire was still under investigation but conjectured it could have been set off by static electricity in the diver's clothing.

Strachan Dials Information

One thing can be said for the British Columbia Telephone Company — it has a lot of brass. Only a few months ago the Canadian Transport Commission rubber-stamped a 4.7 per cent increase in the average basic residential bill plus a 9.5 per cent increase for primary business service, not to mention hefty installation and service charge increases. Now the company is asking for another 20 per cent increase on interprovincial long distance rates to finance a $255 million construction expansion program.

In approving the last increase it is interesting to note that the CTC, citing a government survey on completed calls in the B.C. system, said it "... did not indicate a high standard of service with respect to the particular calls made." But with the cosy logic the public has come to expect from the CTC it added that the survey "... does more to support the application than defeat it." In plain words, the CTC ordered B.C. telephone subscribers to pay more for a communication system, despite some evidence that it is an inefficient operation. With this kind of history what can the public expect from the CTC in the face of the proposed 20 per cent increase?

Provincial Transport Minister Robert Strachan's demands that the CTC stall consideration of the rate increase following an inquiry into the corporation deserves support. In his statement Strachan posed some interesting questions: has B.C. Tel been buying the best or second-best equipment and services from its affiliates? Has the quantity of these purchased goods and services been justified? Have the prices paid by B.C. Tel for these goods and services been economical or excessive? As the minister noted the government will keep an open mind on the increases but it needs these vital facts before it can endorse such a large increase. As a five per cent shareholder in B.C. Tel, whose nominees to the board of directors were recently rejected, the government has a special interest in knowing these facts, not to mention its basic duty of acting in the public interest.

Another question: why should a company which made a profit of at least $19.1 million in the nine months preceding last Sept. 30 ask the public to underwrite its expansion plans? If B.C. Tel wishes to expand it should go to the money markets like any other corporation, rather than asking the telephone users of this province to pay more for a service that may not be up to snuff. Perhaps the increases are deserved. But unless an inquiry is undertaken, as Strachan suggests, the public — the people who may be forced to shell out in the form of higher rates — will once again pay for a pig in a poke. The CTC cannot be counted on to protect the public interest. Now it's up to the federal government to answer Strachan's demands. With any kind of luck, the federal-provincial connection will be better than some the public of B.C. has to suffer after dialing into static.

Gilding the Maple Leaf

If the House of Commons was as zealous about legislating economic independence as it is about gilding the nation's maple leaf this country would have far fewer problems. A bill to make it illegal to degrade, mutilate, desecrate or insult the Canadian flag must rank as one of the worst excesses of nationalism in Canada's history. Yet this strange piece of legislation enjoys all-party support and will become law if it passes committee study, third reading, Senate approval and finally royal assent.

Our neighbors to the south became upset at flag desecrations during the Vietnam war protests and angrily threw flag mutilators in jail, only to be brought up short by the U.S. Supreme Court which ruled that citizens in a democracy have the right to do what they wish with their flag. If approved, the Canadian bill would see flag burners punishable on summary conviction. No penalty is outlined, but summary convictions usually mean sentences of less than two years in jail. This is an incredible bill for a Canadian law-making body to be so complacent about. If the American example doesn't fail to dissuade the Commons, then common sense should.

Our maple leaf flag, which was officially raised 10 years ago last month, is only a symbol of Canada, not an icon to be treated with fear and respect under penalty of law. While it is hoped that most Canadians do respect the maple leaf flag as a symbol of Canada, that should not prevent an irate citizen from mutilating it as the symbol of his protest against a real or imagined injustice. To carry the argument to its ultimate absurdity perhaps the Commons should make trapping beavers illegal. These large rodents are also a symbol of Canada yet we trapped, killed and skinned about 500,000 of them last year. In this sense, mutilating a beaver presents an awful kind of heresy, too.

From the civil liberty standpoint, flag mutilation would also be a convenient charge to slap on embarrassing demonstrators who had committed no other infraction of law in legal assembly. This country is confusing its values when it attempts to canonize in law what is essentially a piece of cloth. Our country is many fine things, both tangible and intangible, to all of us. But there is something distasteful and militant in surrounding the flag with legal imperatives.

The bill should be scrapped. Canada's flag is in no danger, but we cannot say the same for the muddle-headed values displayed by most Hon. members.

RICHARD GWYN

Only Italy in a Worse State

OTTAWA — Most Canadians, as they wonder what has happened to their mail, to their airports, to their schools, are convinced that Canada's strike record is the worst in the western world. They are quite wrong. We are the second worst.

Italy saves us from the booby prize. Even the Italian supreme court has gone on strike. The authoritative British magazine The Economist rates Italy's 1975 labour prospects as "appalling". The Canadian outlook, says the Economist is "grim". For each thousand workers, we have lost 1,724 days, compared with — Italy's 1,912 days lost and the third-from-last India with 1,264 days lost.

(The Economist survey excludes 1974, when strikes in Canada hit a record of over nine million man-days. If that year is counted we might indeed be at the bottom of the list.)

This is sheer madness. We are marching head up, eyes shut and whistling down the same road that has taken Britain to industrial stagnation and social disorder.

We're Like U.K.

The parallel with Britain is so close that it hurts. Illegal strikes in which firemen set their own fires and teachers abandon their students. A productivity performance — difficult to measure accurately, admittedly — that is one of the poorest in the western world.

Evidence grows that Canadians do want to turn the corner. The federal government has endured three weeks of rotating strikes by 19,000 blue-collar workers rather than raise its 25-per-cent pay increase offer. Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey, known as a friend of labor, has become so enraged by post office sitdowns and walkouts that he has announced he will ask for legislative power to fire workers for such activities.

As one small sign of the public's mood, a recent column in which I argued that only price and income controls could prevent social chaos as each group tries to grab whatever it can from an economic pie that has ceased to grow, inspired a half dozen letters from readers.

That kind of response always tells a columnist he has hit a nerve, whether the right or wrong nerve being quite another question. Typical of readers' views was that of Jim Perrie of Toronto:

"People are growing more anarchical and vengeful . . . drastic regulations are needed to prevent us going into a depression."

ITALIAN STRIKERS
. . . Canada comes a close second

The risk now is that governments and the public will make unions the scapegoat. Not only is that wrong — management stupidity is as much to blame as union selfishness — but, much more important, it will make the situation worse by exacerbating labour hostility.

The real problems, I believe, go much deeper. Two opinions seem to me to be particularly apt:

"We have always treated unions like outlaws and now we are paying a heavy price for that attitude," McGill university economist Jack Weldon told me in a recent interview. Weldon, clearly, is right.

Unlike West Germany, Sweden and Yugoslavia where innovations in "industrial democracy" are common-place because unions are an accepted part of the social order, Canadian management always has patronized unions as an irresponsible adversary. Treat a group as irresponsible and it will behave irresponsibly.

The other comment that goes to the heart of the matter was made by John Crispo, dean of management studies at York University. "our whole hierarchical system is breaking down," he has said. "The assumption that a rough relationship existed between education and salaries is no longer accepted, and we have nothing to put in its place."

Controls Not Answer

To diagnose is one thing — to prescribe remedies is quite another. Controls certainly are no panacea, though Crispo has proposed an alternative to them in an independent tribunal with binding authority to rule on income and wage claims.

The real change has to come in attitudes, toward the role of unions in society and toward pay increases, however deserved, that any group can take for itself at the expense of others.

"In all our societies with industrialization and urbanization, the laws more and more are not being respected," Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau told reporters while in Europe. "It is important to create a new social contract, a new definition of the values which unite a country."

Trudeau is saying the same thing as Jim Perrie of Toronto. The difference being that one is a pensioner and the other the prime minister. What Canada needs is not the "contractual relationship" Trudeau has sought in Europe, but a contractual relationship by Canadians with each other.

JAMES GRAY

Boring Alta. Voters to Death

CALGARY — As the Alberta provincial election campaign meanders aimlessly toward its conclusion on March 26, the electors are being treated to a replay in living orange and blue color of the Nixon-Trudeau double play with Tory premier Peter Lougheed in the starring role.

Richard Nixon in his 1972 campaign perfected the duck-out-of-sight technique of politicking. He refused to hold press conferences, completely avoided discussion of issues in any form save in pronouncements from well-guarded podia. He avoided all contact and confrontation with opposition groups.

Last October, Liberal leader Pierre Trudeau adopted the Nixon formula and improved on it. He added the multi-million dollar project a day promise as he flitted back and forth across the country. Peter Lougheed is making the Nixon-Trudeau franchise his own in this election.

Eyebrows Raised

Nixon campaigned not as the Republican party nominee but as the flag-bearer of the Committee to Re-Elect the President. Lougheed has out-Nixoned Nixon in submerging his party in favor of self-glorification. Alberta is papered over with orange and blue map-shaped signs dominated by two words — Lougheed, and in smaller type, Leadership. Off to the side is a third word, the name of the local candidate. The entire Tory publicity campaign is focused on Lougheed and the studied ignoring of everybody else.

All this has caused a mild raising of pundits' eyebrows and wonder is expressed how his cabinet and party leaders could be conned into such complete suppression of their personal roles in government. There is a simple answer. The Tory party in Alberta is Peter Lougheed's party. He did it himself.

Lougheed took over when there was no Conservative party. He put it together, ferretted out candidates, stumped the province, did the fund-raising and most of the thinking for it. And he got it elected.

In the last legislature Lougheed had an attorney-general, a minister of energy, a minister of finance, a minister of inter-governmental affairs. But when the important issues arose in any jurisdiction, it was Lougheed who did the talking. Bill Dickie, the energy and resources minister, became so disenchanted with the situation that he left politics completely to return to private business.

Not since the days of former Prime Minister R. B. Bennett who ran the Conservative party into the ground 40 years ago has one party been so completely dominated by a leader. The situation in Alberta is all very reminiscent of those days, when Arch Dale the cartoonist once drew a picture of a Tory cabinet meeting with Bennetts sitting in all the chairs.

ALBERTA CABINET
. . . Nixon-Trudeau gambit

To this point, Lougheed has been more restrained than Trudeau in multi-million dollar promising. But he did spend almost a week in the deep south, embroidering a promise of $200 million in irrigation projects for the area. Then he hop-scotched to Red Deer to elaborate on plans for massive industrialization of central Alberta with petrochemical plants.

Lougheed's biggest talking point is the one that cries most loudly for critical examination. It is the province's $1.5 billion natural resources trust fund. It is a crazy kind of trust, seemingly open at both ends and down the sides. It will have billions of oil and gas money pouring into it at one end and vote-getting projects like the irrigation proposal draining out of the other.

Not only have efforts to lure Lougheed into debates or press conferences proved abortive, even the Lougheed candidates are ducking under the barn. Their excuse is: "We are not going to get involved in forums or open-line shows to attract attention to our opponents and help them get their points across!"

Meanwhile, the excuse for calling the election two years before the Tory term expires has been lost in the shuffle. It was to strengthen Lougheed's hand for confrontation with Trudeau in the April conference. About what? Taxation of oil and gas royalties and provincial natural resources? Hardly, that question will ultimately have to be settled in the supreme court of Canada.

AEC Operating

To mousetrap the Turner-Trudeau-Macdonald grab for Alberta's resources, the government now has its Alberta Energy Corporation in operation. The oil companies no longer pay royalties to Alberta for the oil they produce. They buy and sell their oil through the crown corporation, with no royalties for Ottawa to tax.

Now what does Ottawa do? Bring in another budget taxing income of provincial crown corporations, including presumably Quebec Hydro, Manitoba Hydro and Alberta Government Telephones?

Clearly the entire can of worms belongs in Mr. Justice Bora Laskin's lap. The odds are that it will get there regardless of how big the Lougheed majority is on March 26.

If Lougheed emerges with more than 60 seats in the house of 75, which seems likely, will that be a triumph for the advertising geniuses who perfected the Nixon-Trudeau double play, or simply the inevitable result of politicians boring electors to death with non-issue elections? Or is one not the product of the other?

Striking Poetry

STRIKE

Strikers, strikers, all around
Trying to make a very loud sound.
For weeks they've tried with no success
Now they're fighting — boy what a mess!
They want to be heard, and get their way
But all this fighting causes greater delay!

—Marion Young, 1431 Richardson Street.

Police Criticized

Who do the Victoria police work for? The unions or the city? The police stood idly by while the union hooligan pickets forcibly prevented the public from crossing the Johnson Street bridge.

What the union was doing was illegal and against the law. The police were telling the public not to attempt to cross the bridge and in this way they are in my opinion aiding and abetting in the carrying out of an illegal act.

Police are supposed to be up-holders of the law. The public should be able to look up to and respect law. But times have changed.

No longer do the police deserve respect and I along with many I have spoken to have a very poor opinion of them. The ordinary constable will have to suffer his share of the blame for this situation along with his superiors who I suppose have told him not to interfere.

It is high time that a federal law was passed making it a criminal offence for anyone to refuse to cross a picket line unless that person is a member of a union that is directly concerned in the dispute that caused the strike.

It is time a curb was put on unions to prevent them from destroying the whole country. Blackmail is supposed to be a crime. The unions even defy the federal government and get away with it.

Now that the unions can see that they are above the law and can do what they like I'm surprised that they do not just double all their demands and go for a one or two-day week.

Phooey on the unions, they are going to ruin the country. If we have to have violence let's have it. It is the only thing they will understand. Move in the strike-breakers. — A Canadian.

Good Article

Contratulations on the fine article that appeared on page five of the Times on March 11 entitled: Female Students Still Getting All-Male View of History. The article points out, in a thoughtful and readable way, the importance of providing balanced education for our children.

I do wish, however, that the headline and the article had also focussed on the fact that boys, not just girls, are getting a misleading picture of human potential due to the biased treatment of females.

Despite that one oversight, I heartily recommend that anyone who missed the article should dig back and find it. It will be well worth the effort!—Ms. Connie More, 32 Paddon Avenue.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of March 19, 1915

Following is from a letter received here from a private who went from Victoria with the Princess Patricia reserve draft, arriving in France Feb. 15, and disembarking at St. Nazaire: "Just back in our billet farm after our first day in the trenches. After reaching the trenches along a road exposed to stray rifle bullets, we took up our position mixed up with a regular regiment, one Canadian and one regular alternately. All night we stood at sentry, one hour on and one hour off along the trench. One stands on a platform with the head exposed, watching for anyone creeping up. Most of the night the moon was bright, but we could see very little although the enemy was only 90 yards distant at one end."

Nixon Cambodia Evil Lives on After Him

By JAMES EAYRS

Like a Big Three automaker trying to regain its share of the market, President Gerald Ford is selling his product dirt cheap. He has cut the cost of the American word of honor to an all-time bargain price of $222 millions.

That is the sum the Ford administration is asking the United States Congress to appropriate for aid to the beleaguered forces of the Lon Nol government in Cambodia.

And that is the price the Ford administration is saying must be paid to preserve the value of a U.S. commitment.

"If we cease to help our friends in Indochina," the president declares, "we will have violated their trust . . . We will have been false to ourselves, to our word, and to our friends. No one should think for a moment that we can walk away from that without a deep sense of shame."

A deep sense of shame is indeed an appropriate response. But not to walking away from yet another U.S.-sponsored loser. Rather, to the record of American policy towards Cambodia. And to the trotting out in 1975 of rhetoric already stale and discredited at least 10 years before.

Bad Rhetoric

Here is the version according to Dean Rusk (secretary of state in the Kennedy and Johnson administrations): "Let me say, as solemnly as I can, that those who would place in question the credibility of the pledged word of the United States would subject this nation to mortal danger . . . The result could be catastrophe for all mankind."

That rhetoric has not improved with age. Its rejection will not bring catastrophe for all mankind. But its acceptance has brought catastrophe to the seven million people of Cambodia.

Their fate — five years of war, a devastated countryside, the prospect of starvation — is the most poignant of any Indochinese country. They had so much going for them to begin with. Unlike their neighbors Vietnam and Laos — legatees of fierce internal conflict and ideological division — Cambodia seemed destined for unity, prosperity, even for that rarest of Southeast Asian possessions, democracy.

Signs Suspicious

Under the aegis of the International Control Commission, with Canada playing an active role in the process, troops were disengaged, factions reunited, national elections held in September, 1955.

Prince Norodom Sihanouk (he had abdicated from the monarchy in favor of his father to enter politics) was elected as head of an all-Cambodian government. In the opinion of outside observers, the vote was conducted fairly. All signs seemed auspicious. "Given a few years of peace without external interference in its affairs," a Canadian member of the International Control Commission predicted, "the future of Cambodia may be domestic stability with, at the helm, a strong government which can safely be expected to be more honest, able and efficient than any other in the history of this charming little kingdom since the days of the court at Angkor."

It might have been. But it was not to be. The Americans were unable to leave well enough alone.

Cambodia's neutrality, as much as any country's could be, was the neutrality of necessity. The necessity of history — since the fall of the Angkor empire in 1432 Cambodia had been the Poland of Southeast Asia, partitioned and repartitioned between neighboring Thailand and Vietnam. The necessity of prudence — China and the U.S. both wanted Cambodia in their respective spheres of influence.

But even a neutrality of necessity was anathema to a U.S. secretary of state who believed with a fanatic's zeal that neutralism anywhere and everywhere was "a short-sighted, immoral conception." John Foster Dulles did his best to knock Sihanouk off his tightrope.

But the arm of the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency had yet to attain its later reach and clout, and Sihanouk, a master funambulist if there ever was one, had nerve and poise enough to keep his balance. He survived the 1950s, he even survived the 1960s — though not by much.

Undone by War

He was undone by the war in Vietnam. As the fighting became fiercer, the U.S. bombing more incessant, Cambodia was drawn into it.

Her borderland was used as a sanctuary for Hanoi's troops; through her territory ran the Ho Chi Minh trail.

What could Cambodia have done to stop North Vietnamese infiltration? Nothing, on her own. When the U.S. pressed Sihanouk for permission to send in troops to smash the sanctuary, he naturally refused. What kind of neutrality would Cambodia have then?

In March, 1970, absent on a state visit in Moscow, Sihanouk was overthrown. Lon Nol took his place. A U.S. invasion followed.

Satanic Words

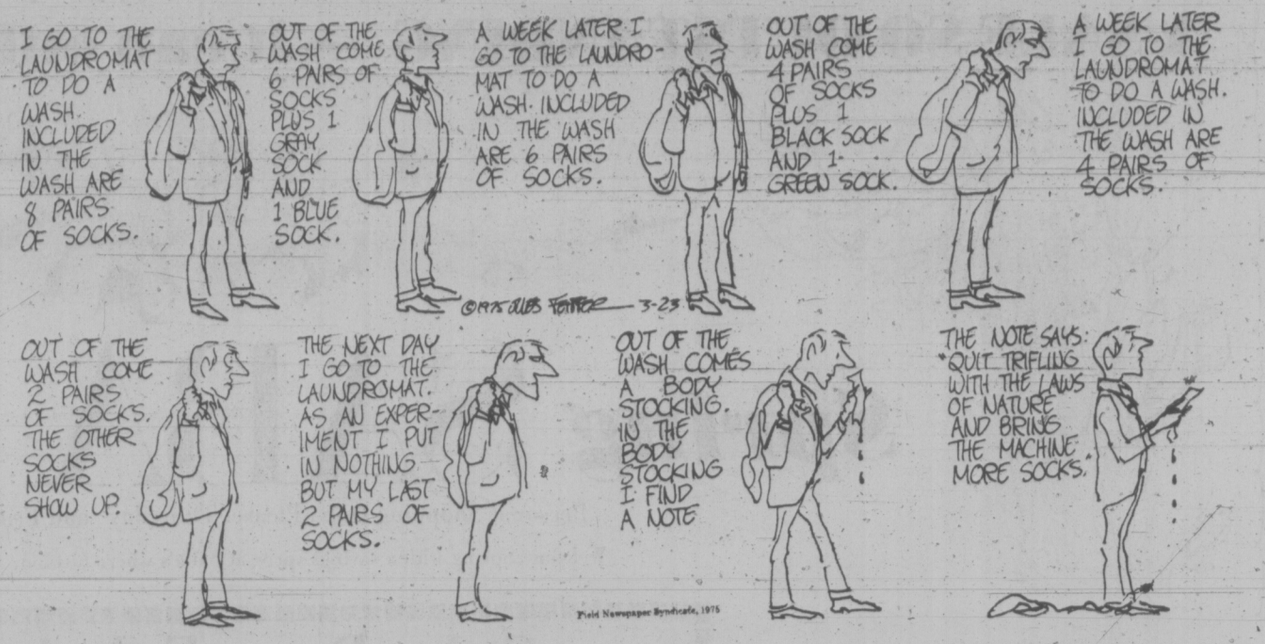

Both coup d'etat and armed attack were the work of Richard Nixon, steeled for the occasion by one of those satanic aphorisms composed by Henry Kissinger to assuage the pangs of powerlessness assailing him when he was just a Harvard academic: "As long as the opprobium of using force has to be shouldered, it may as well be coupled with a reputation for ruthlessness."

The evil that Nixon did lives after him — etched on the faces of Cambodians fleeing the war he forced on them. Kissinger remains. The president will do his bidding.

Thank God the Congress won't.

Fear etched on fleeing faces

Bangor: More Than Just Another Base

By BOB HUNTER
The Sun

I stand corrected on the matter of the Trident missile base being constructed at Bangor, Wash., just 60 miles from Victoria.

Last week I suggested that NDP MLA Peter Rolston was missing the point if he thought that the proximity of the new missile base to the Canadian border was the major issue. It is to the whole issue of war that we must address ourselves, not simply the problem of "one little base," I wrote.

This week I received a visit from James W. Douglass, one of the most articulate pacifists around. The author of the Nonviolent Cross and Resistance and Contemplation, Douglass was active in the anti-war movement in the U.S., having been tried and jailed for his convictions.

One of his books was described by Father Philip Berrigan as being "among the few important books of the last decade." Certainly, to me, Douglass' writings have served as a constant source of inspiration and guidance.

He agreed with me that the real issue is war itself, not the presence of another war base right on the edge of the Canadian border. But, he added, the Bangor site is a base with a difference. Perhaps the most significant thing about it is the fact that it represents a major escalation beyond U.S.-Soviet deterrent policies that have been operating since the Second World War.

Once completed — sometime in 1978 — the new base will give the Americans what is known as "hard-target capability," which is to say that they will be able to wipe out underground Soviet missiles in their previously invulnerable silos. The Bangor base, Douglass points out, is not simply "one little base," but instead will be the key U.S. military installation, where the entire Trident submarine fleet will be based, ready for a first-strike nuclear attack.

I hadn't really appreciated the nature of the Trident submarines. Each submarine is two football fields long. Each submarine carries 24 missiles capable of reaching anywhere in the world. Each missile has 17 independent nuclear warheads. This means that a single Trident submarine has the capability of destroying 408 cities.

In all, there will be 10 of these incredible machines of destruction based at Bangor, travelling regularly through the Strait of Juan de Fuca. At a moment's notice, the Americans will be able to deploy the whole fleet, with their potential — at a single firing of all missiles — of destroying 4,080 targets. Each of those targets might be a whole city.

"The Trident submarine is the most destructive weapons system ever created," said Douglass. Combined with recent U.S. breakthroughs in sonar for detecting Soviet submarines in the depths of any ocean, this means that the Americans will be able to ignore the deterrent system which has kept the world away from nuclear war over the last couple of decades.

"A single Trident could effectively wipe out the whole Soviet Union," Douglass said.

Needless to say, once the Bangor base is activated, Soviet surveillance of the West Coast will jump to an incredible level of intensity. Moreover, in the event of the war, the Bangor base will automatically become the first and most important target for the Soviets or anyone else. Long before they attempt to bomb or blast any other place on earth, they will have to utterly smash Bangor. Just incidentally, they will wipe out the entire population of the Lower Mainland.

Douglas says that, while studying Congressional records of the debate that preceded the decision to construct the Trident base at Bangor, he discovered the main reason for the site being selected. Knowing that the base would act as a massive magnet attracting swarms of missiles and bombs, the generals at the Pentagon wanted to establish the base "as far as possible from Washington, D.C., while still remaining on the North American continent." In other words, they didn't want to lose their senators, generals and brass.

"In choosing the Trident sub base," Douglass added, "the Pentagon planners obviously felt that the possibility of Canadian resistance was nil. The Bangor base represents the height of Pentagon arrogance concerning an assumed Canadian indifference and submission to global self-destruction carried out from our waters. This is a critical challenge to the Canadian conscience. In this sense, Bangor is not simply one little base. If we ignore it, it will be the final step in our complicity with a far more massive threat to life than were the gas chambers of Nazi Germany.

There is a "moral imperative" here, Douglass says, concerning the whole issue of an American policy for global destruction. The Tridents are undersea Doomsday Machines. They represent a massive escalation of the old Cold War mentality, coupled with an alarming breakdown in the deterrent policy which has spared us up to this point. And the choice of Bangor as the site for the Trident fleet puts all of us living within range of the place on top of the list for instant destruction should some madman decide to blow the works.

If we are to protect ourselves, something will have to be done. Accordingly, Douglass and several other people have organized a group called Pacific Life Community. The objective eventually is a campaign of non-violent resistance to the Trident base. Both Americans and Canadians are involved. Anybody wishing to learn more about it can phone 738-7930, and ask for Kevin, or write to Pacific Life Community, Box 48432, Bentall Centre, Vancouver.

Why Scotty Went Home

harry bruce

The international stink over the Great Glace Bay Imbroglio invites speculation on the meaning of apology. For a while there the demands for public apologies were as thick and strident as gulls over fishguts. Gulls are at least pretty.

Background: Simmering ugliness between Canadian and Scottish workers at the construction camp of the eternally cursed Glace Bay heavy-water plant boiled over in a rare old bunkhouse brawl.

The Canadians, according to the earliest reports, smashed walls and windows, dumped a pool table in a snowbank, kicked in doors, splintered furniture and, perhaps screaming "Scotty go home," hauled Scots from their beds and laid a beating on them. Well, Scotty did go home.

The contractors sent 25 British and Scottish workers back to the United Kingdom "for their own good." Now, these men had scarcely left the tarmac over on the old sod when British headlines blared "How thugs drove out 200 pounds-a-week Britons" and "Britons thumped home 'in a frenzy' of jealousy'."

You could hear the choking rage in the ample throats of Halifax business and political leaders all the way out to Glace Bay herself, boy. Those crazy, lazy, hot-blooded and bloody-minded Cape Breton loonies had done it again.

Ah, Cape Breton labor. What a cross for any business community to bear. And now, to hear Halifax anyway, Cape Breton had messed up Nova Scotia's image so brutally that this poor, desperate, money-starved corner of Canada could not expect a multi-national company ever again to risk so much as one nickel or sou or yen among our turbulent peasantry.

Anyway, Walter Fitzgerald decided to tell the Scottish workers he was sorry. Maybe that would help. (Sure, and the next time there's an earthquake in Managua I'm going to whip off my apology to the people of Nicaragua. That'll set things right.)

Fitzgerald is not a Cape Breton laborer. He was not at the bunkhouse that morning. He had laid neither hand nor knee nor angry word on any lad from Glasgow. He is the labor minister, the former mayor of Halifax, a formidable politician and, what the heck, a little apology in the right place never hurts anyone, does it?

Actually, I think it does. Public apologies smell faintly expedient. They're like the confessions a man blurts out under duress. They are more purposeful than sincere, and an insincere apology is as objectionable as a sincere insult.

Fitzgerald publicly apologized to the wounded for wounds he had nothing to do with inflicting, and this is both confusing and curiously grandiose. It's vaguely relating to stealing another man's glory.

Fitzgerald, of course, is hardly unique in this respect. It's not the man that irritates me, it's the practice. Public life abounds in statements that flow from no one's heart.

Fitzgerald not only apologized for a crime he had not committed, he also demanded that Cape Breton unions apologize for a crime they hadn't committed either. Or at least, for one that no one has proved they committed. Their apology, unlike his own, would have amounted to a confession — and, of course, that's what Fitzgerald wanted all along.

Only a union of truly frightening authority would accept responsibility for the off-duty adventures of all its members but, leaving that point aside, no one is entirely sure who the camp's villains really were.

The weather was lousy, the life boring, the booze copious, the neighbors sometimes unfriendly. Recreation facilities were a bad joke. Some Scots were themselves more than merely obstreperous, and, according to a couple of reports, the really vicious creeps were neither Scots nor Cape Breton Islanders but tradesmen from Upper Canada. (Ah, Toronto. Your evil is boundless).

Sure, and maybe someone should apologize to those Upper Canadian workers. Maybe someone else should apologize for the shortage of dartboards in the bunkhouses. Surely the Scots should apologize for bad-mouthing our weather, and surely Premier Regan should apologize to the press.

He's noted the "inaccurate" reporting of what happened at the construction camp even though he doesn't know what happened at the construction camp. He's appointed a commission to find out.

There's something else we could all do. I mean, aside from demanding apologies. Until the commission assesses guilt, we could try shutting up. Maybe integrity has something to do with never having to say you're sorry unless, right down where you know personal truth, you really are sorry.

Russian Star Sparkles

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

If it's folk-based entertainment the Russians have a word for it. Glamor. Spell it in capitals and embellish it with roses.

That's how you feel after an evening with Moscow-born Ludmila Zykina, the Moscow Balalaika Orchestra and assisting artists.

A long standing ovation at the Royal Theatre, Tuesday, was the response of a capacity audience to the high art, the spirit and virtuosity of the occasion.

Zykina was the starred attraction of the program and what a star. A big, beautiful woman, possibly six feet tall and deep-bosomed — with a big, beautiful voice and superb interpretive ability.

But she was not alone. Nothing on the program fell below her towering standard by more than a fine degree.

The three soloists from the orchestra were dazzling technically and true musicians. Most charming perhaps was the scintillating xylophone concerto performed with rare subtlety and grace by percussionist Igor Tchatchin.

Then there was the personable and fine young baritone Vitaly Tchaika, who appeared in the second half of the evening to sing three songs with a temperament and warmth that would have kept him in the spotlight if encores had been permitted.

A folk dance was also inserted, done by a lively young couple with customary Russian vitality and character.

But the memory of Zykina, gowned first in deep, richly embroidered red and then, royally in pure white, mink trimmed, singing effortlessly, producing gloriously full satin-smooth tone, is still the one that will linger longest.

Just as the Russian male singer can extend his voice without artificiality into the female range, so can Zykina extend hers from golden mezzo to true baritone.

Her phrasing is in itself, worth study by an vocal student. She does exactly what she wants in shaping and elaborating a phrase without one's being aware of where breaths are taken.

Folk songs are the living poetry of a people; the instinctive and deeply felt expressions of their joys and sorrows and in Zykina they find their perfect vehicle of communication.

Hush-Hush CIA Salvage of Soviet Nuclear Sub

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — A Central Intelligence Agency research ship has partially salvaged a Soviet nuclear missile submarine which exploded and sank in the Pacific seven years ago, intelligence sources said Tuesday.

The Russian sub, with some 80 men aboard, carried nuclear warheads codes and target plans.

The bizarre story involved desperate attempts by the Russians to recover the vessel and a counter operation by the CIA which called in the technological talents of recluse billionaire Howard Hughes' organization.

It included the burial at sea by the CIA with full Soviet-style naval honors of the bodies of Russians who perished in the disaster.

News organizations which discovered details of the story, were asked to voluntarily withhold it in the interests of national security.

When syndicated columnist Jack Anderson broke his version Tuesday night, they were released from their pledge.

In the first official statement on the operation, Senate Majority leader Mike Mansfield said today the sub was old and that its military value not very significant. "What it contained might have been of some value," he added.

Government officials, who asked not to be named, said the operation was designed to recover secret Soviet codes.

Neither the codes nor any missiles were discovered, they added.

Top intelligence sources gave these details of the operation:

In 1968, a 2,600-ton Soviet diesel-powered submarine of the Golf or G class, armed with nuclear-tipped ballistic missiles stowed in three tubes, exploded and sank in almost three miles of water between Hawaii and Vladivostok, home of the Soviet Pacific fleet.

The CIA picked up the scent when a fleet of Soviet salvage vessels tried to raise the hulk and its precious coding machines, target plans, nuclear warheads and the technology of the vessel itself. The Russians failed and sailed away.

Secretly, the CIA, designed a multi-million dollar unique salvage craft of its own. It contracted with Summa Corp., wholly - owned subsidiary of the Hughes empire, to build and operate it under the cover of a deep sea mining research craft — a current field of intensive legitimate research.

Last summer, the Glomar Explorer, as the CIA vessel was named, found the submarine resting on the ocean floor "in fairly good shape."

Cables were attached with the help of underwater television and sonar and, according to other reports a submersible barge.

The long haul from the depths began. More than a mile from the surface, the hulk broke its back.

Two-thirds of the submarine, containing the nuclear weapons, ship's control, captain's cabin, codes, target and other strategic information fell back to the bottom.

The forward third portion was brought up, including the bodies of many of the crew.

The sources said the CIA had planned to send the Glomar Explorer back to the submarine's graveyard with better weather this summer in an attempt to get the rest of the wreck.

One source said it was believed the Soviet secret police were not recently aware of the operation and that the CIA had hoped it could be kept under wraps lest it prejudice the visit to Washington later this year of Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev for a summit meeting with President Ford.

Ford and former president Richard Nixon were aware of the operation and the importance of the intelligence aspects, the sources said.

They discounted reports that documents pertaining to the CIA operation were among items stolen from safes in Hughes' Summa Corp. headquarters in Hollywood, Calif., last June.

The 618-foot Glomar Explorer, is regarded as one of the most advanced marine mining vessels in the world.

Built to fit inside the Explorer was a 300 - foot - long steel barge, about 200 feet wide and 100 feet deep. This unmanned barge can be filled with water and submerged.

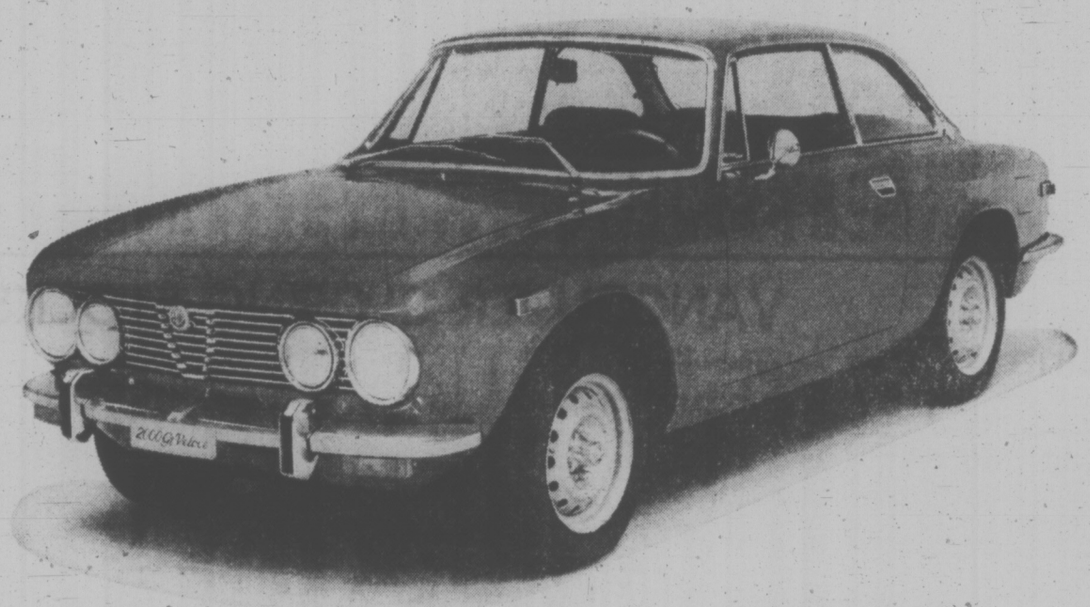

When the barge touches the ocean bottom, a submarine tractor carried on board the barge can be released by remote control for underseas mining.

The barge is said to have a sliding dome to prevent satellite surveillanee of the tractor inside.

Intelligence officials were quoted as saying the sole purpose of the barge was to hide the Soviet submarine once it was brought up from the ocean floor.

Why the legendary Alfa Romeo is like no other car in the world.

To begin with, perhaps no other production car has ever evolved so directly from world championship automobile racing. Alfa Romeo has won more Grand Prix than any other car in history. Fifty eight in total. Italy's thousand-mile torture test, called the Mille Miglia, has been won by Alfa no less than eleven times. And, competing against Ferrari, Maserati, Lotus and the like, Alfa Romeo has been world champion three times.

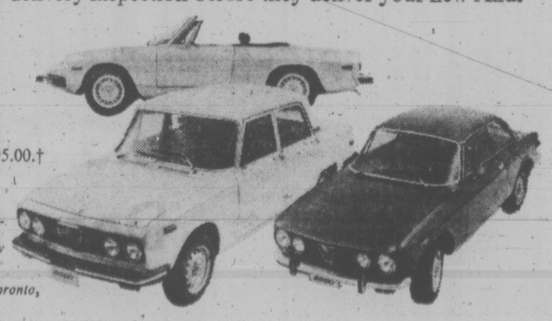

Today's Alfas are called the 2000 series, available in 3 models. For the fresh air enthusiast there's the 2000 Spider Veloce, one of the few high performance, two-seat, convertibles still available in the world. For the GT enthusiast there's the 2000 GTV, one of the most exhilarating personal grand touring cars you'll ever drive. And for the driver who needs more space there's the 2000 Berlina, a superb road car with the comfort of a family sedan.

Every Alfa Romeo starts with a 2-liter, double-overhead-camshaft, aluminum engine that produces more power than any other engine of its size. This superb engine is made even better with Alfa Romeo's own Spica fuel-injection system which produces a smooth idle, yet delivers quite incredible economy on regular gas. And Alfa's five-speed transmission may be the smoothest way in the world to get to 60 mph in less than 10 seconds. But naturally, a car that goes quickly should stop quickly. And power-assisted, dual-circuit, 4-wheel disc brakes make an Alfa do just that. Alfa Romeo's superb road-holding qualities, aided by a limited slip differential, are an indisputable fact.

Alfa Romeos are special on the inside too. Seats are beautifully contoured to be firm yet comfortable. Trim is real mahogany, operating controls are expensive stainless steel. And everything, including the trunk, is carpeted. Also an electrically heated rear window and a fully adjustable heater/ventilation system are standard equipment.

With a 60-year reputation to protect, Alfa Romeo won't compromise on quality. So with Alfa engines for example, there are no such things as spot checks. Every part is examined before the engine is assembled. Then after it's assembled, another 32 quality checks are carried out before the engine ever sees a car. People, not machines, build Alfas. And people carry out all quality inspections. Alfa Romeo people even spend hours on a pre-delivery inspection before they deliver your new Alfa.

The Alfa Romeo Spider, $8,195.00, Berlina sedan $6,855.00, GTV coupe, $7,995.00.†

Tax Evasion: Gov't Usually Wins

OTTAWA (CP) — If a taxpayer gets a letter in the mail saying the revenue department is considering prosecution for tax evasion, the historical odds at that point are heavily stacked against the taxpayer.

The revenue department has four investigative units to check tax returns. Two do routine checking and audits and the other two look into situations where tax evasion or avoidance is suspended.

Tax evasion is defined by the department as knowingly evading tax due under the law while avoidance is a scheme to skirt around the law.

High living may be a tip to the revenue department investigators that a taxpayer is living beyond reported means. A department circular on investigative methods says leads may come from newspaper reports, informants and information filed in the normal course of taxpayer reporting.

Department officials say informants are not paid.

Occasionally the department will do a planned survey of a particular occupation or trade in an attempt to find tax-evasion techniques commonly used by a group of workers.

The revenue department has the power to seize records and hold them up to four months. A judge may extend this period.

The taxpayer is supposed to receive a letter to advise that records are available for examination during normal office hours. The taxpayer can authorize a representative an accountant, for example to have access to the documents.

If investigators interview someone suspected of tax evasion, the law provides that legal and accounting advisers may be present.

The tax act authorizes the revenue minister to appoint a hearing officer to conduct an inquiry. The hearing officer has the power to summon witnesses and compel them to produce documents and answer questions.

A department circular says the power to compel someone to answer is used when family relationship or business association results in a fear of recrimination or financial loss.

Officials said the rules cover close relationships — a brother or sister, for example. However, they said there is no legal precedent as to whether they can compel a husband or wife to testify.

Information given an accountant is not considered privileged, unlike the lawyer-client relationship.

The hearings are only to gather informaton to help the investigation, officials said, and not to collect evidence for a court hearing. They said documents would be the main evidence used in court.

The revenue department prepares the evidence and turns it over to the justice department for prosecution. The situation is similar to that of a police officer and Crown attorney in a criminal case.

The department circular says they will not prosecute if someone steps forward to correct a false return and pay penalties. But they will not drop prosecution if voluntary disclosures are made.

Officials say justice department prosecutors win more than 95 per cent of their cases.

In the year ended March 31, 1974, the department investigated 836 suspected cases of tax evasion and 109 were taken to court, resulting in fines of $1.26 million.

Fines range up to double the tax evaded and the maximum prison term is five years.

GM's NEW CAR GOAL: SMALLER, CHEAPER

DETROIT (AP) — A new car, smaller and less expensive than anything now available from the Big Three U.S. auto-makers will roll off General Motors Corp. assembly lines for sale in the 1976 year.

Industry sources say GM, traditionally a big-car maker, is in the final planning stages for introducing the smallest mass-produced car sold in the United States in modern times.

The new model, code-named the T-Car, will list for about $200 less than the lowest-priced car now sold in the U.S., reliable sources say.

It will be 17 inches shorter and 400 pounds lighter than the Chevrolet Vega — now the smallest U.S.-built car by GM — and sell for between $2,200 and $2,500.

The lowest-priced Vega lists for $2,799. Toyota says its Corolla sedan, at $2,711, has the lowest price of any 1975-model car sold in the U.S.

GM officials would not confirm or deny plans to introduce the car, predicted for sometime between this fall and next spring.

"We don't discuss future product planning," said a company spokesman.

KEYSTONE OKAYS TAKEOVER BID

VANCOUVER (CP) — Shareholders of Keystone Business Forms Ltd., Tuesday approved a 90-per-cent takeover offer from Capital Enterprises Ltd.

Capital Enterprises has offered to buy 300,000 of the 333,333 outstanding shares of Keystone at a price of $5 a share. The offer will be made for 90 per cent of the shares tendered, on a pro-rata basis.

Keystone shareholders also approved a contingent proposal. If the offer is successful, Keystone will purchase 750,000 shares of Belkin Packaging Ltd. from Capital Enterprises by issuing 1,567,500 treasury shares of Keystone. This is also subject to regulatory approval.

Morris Belkin, president of Capital Enterprises, said that, if his offer is successful, he intends to maintain Keystone as a public company.

World Bank Taps OPEC Cash

VANCOUVER (CP) The executive director of the World Bank said Monday the institution is soliciting contributions to provide low-coast loans to the world's poorer countries.

Claude Isbister said the bank is looking for $200 million to subsidize an initial $1 billion lending program.

"We hope to raise this money from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) as well as from developed nations," he said in an interview.

"Present thinking is that the Third Window (Program) will make 20-year loans at 4½ per cent interest and only to countries with per capita annual income of less than $375."

He said actual loans would come from the bank's regular resources, which are raised mainly by selling bonds on world capital markets. Contributions would be used to subsidize the interest rate.

Isbister said the world economy is in a state of disequilibrium because of raw material shortages, a food and fertilizer crisis, a dramatic rise in petroleum prices and worldwide inflation.

"The poorest and most seriously affected countries have been hopelessly vulnerable. Their export prices have lagged behind the general inflation while import costs have risen greatly."

Isbister said more attention now is being paid to the inquality of income distribution in many developing countries.

He said economic assistance from the rich countries, such as Western Europe, the United States, Canada and Japan has not kept pace with inflation and has declined as a percentage of income.

"The U.S. has been the largest and most generous donor of development aid, but now it is cutting back," he said.

The World Bank its full title is the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development was created after the Second World War, at the same time as the International Monetary Fund.

It is owned by the governments of 125 countries and contributes to the economic development of more than 100 poorer countries, by lending money and providing technical assistance.

Barrett Playing The Game

Premier Barrett said Tuesday he's learned "the federal game."

Amid laughter, he told the legislature about his experiences at federal-proyincial conferences and argued that the meetings should be open to newsmen.

"I even say bienvenue when I walk into the hotel lobby," said the premier. "You immediately go into a closed door meeting with your two civil servants and meet with 50 Ottawa civil servants for two hours, come to some agreement, and promise you'll say nothing."

But on leaving the conference, said the premier, "all of a sudden a radio reporter meets you in the hall, sticks his microphone up your nostril and asks you to comment on a comment (about the meeting) from a high government official."

Barrett said his only recourse is to walk into the meeting after lunch and say:

"Will the high government official please stand up.

"All they do is laugh. They think I'm funny."

He said he doesn't blame the reporters because they're forced into their role. He urged the media to press for open conferences.

He said federal government officials want nothing said about the conferences so they can do all the talking and sway public opinion their way.

He said the reason he's been silent on what the province will demand in the way of natural gas export price increases is because the federal government requested the silence.

"And that's the route I'm going to follow.

"We have their promise there's going to be an increase."

$3M Gas Losses?

The federal government's delay in allowing a natural gas price increase is costing B.C. $3 million every 10 days, Premier Barrett charged Tuesday.

B.C. is exporting 800 million cubic feet of gas to the U.S. every day for $1 per thousand cubic feet and if the price was increased to just $1.50, the government would earn an additional $300,000 a day, he said, accounting for the current shortfall in gas supplies.

The premier said later he did not believe the federal government had refused to raise the price because it was intimidated by the U.S. but rather because Ottawa does not fully appreciate the rapid changes in natural resources.

But Barrett said he firmly believes in the federal government's promise to increase the gas export price and he expects to return from the federal-provincial finance ministers' conference in April with good news for B.C.

A National Energy Board decision to allow a new high price for natural gas exported from Alberta to U.S. will help B.C.'s case, said Barrett.

That decision approved the export of up to 55 million cubic feet of Alberta gas to the U.S. for prices ranging from $1.61 to $1.91 per thousand cubic feet.

The higher price was also approved by the U.S. Federal Power Commission, said Barrett, showing that the U.S. agrees it is a fair price.

Barrett has said B.C. will eventually seek an export price of $1.91 and has promised to give municipalities one-third of any additional revenue accruing to the province from that increase.

Natural gas exports and the recent battle between Victoria and Ottawa over gas taxation occupied a great deal of debate of the premier's estimates in the legislature Tuesday.

Barrett made the comments after Liberal MLA Pat McGeer called on the provincial government to launch court action against the federal government.

No Court Decision on Gas

British Columbia cannot take the federal government to the Supreme Court of Canada to settle a dispute over natural gas taxation, Premier Dave Barrett said Tuesday.

Outside the legislature, Barrett told reporters that a suggestion by Dr. Pat McGeer (L—Vancouver-Point Grey) to take the federal government to court under the British North America Act has already been checked by the Alberta government.

McGeer told the legislature he supported the premier's fight to convince Ottawa to give B.C. a fair market price for its natural gas.

Under the BNA Act resources and royalties belong to the provinces and the provincial governments should set fair market prices, not the federal government, he said.

"This is one of the greatest issues that has ever come before this legislature and the people of British Columbia," McGeer said, adding the premier "sold B.C. out" by yielding taxation rights on B.C. resources to the federal government.

Earlier in the debate on estimates for the premier's office, Barrett said the B.C. Petroleum Corp. has been asked to monitor oil leases held by private companies in the province.

RCMP PROBE LETTER

The RCMP have been asked to investigate the case of a letter from Housing Minister Lorne Nicolson which was allegedly tampered with later and a fake paragraph added.

Premier Barrett said Attorney-General Alex Macdonald requested the investigation of a letter sent to a Coquitlam real estate man by Nicolson.

A copy of the letter eventually came into the hands of Socred MLA Bob McClelland (Langley) who read a part of the document to the house.

The part he read attributed to the minister the following statement: "We (the government) feel it is high time we took control of the real estate in this province."

McClelland rose in the house later and said he had learned the letter was tampered with and words added by someone else. He apologized to the house for reading the letter.

Marine Training College Approved

Establishment of a new marine training college on the west coast has been approved by the provincial government.

The college will exist independently and a small steering committee will be appointed to plan the needed facilities, Education Minister Eileen Dailly announced Tuesday.

No other details of the college have been decided on yet but an advisory committee to the minister recommended last year that a college be set up on a waterfront location in the Vancouver area.

It is anticipated the college will serve ferry systems, tugboat operations, coastal freight services and commercial fishermen.

Gov't Purchased 8,000 Acres

The B.C. Land Commission has purchased just over 8,000 acres of land for $10.8 million in B.C. since the commission was set up in April 1973.

The information was made public Tuesday when it was filed by Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich in answer to a question by Socred MLA Pat Jordan (North Okanagan).

CUPE STRIKE CLIPS BARBERSHOPPERS

Quartet and chorus competitions for barbershop singers, which were to have been held at Victoria High School Friday and Saturday, have been switched because of the CUPE strike.

Friday's quartet contest will take place in the Empress ballroom at 8 p.m. Choruses will compete Saturday at 2 p.m. at First United Church Fellowship Hall, Balmoral Road.

The quartet finals and concert will be held in the Empress ballroom Saturday at 8 p.m. Tickets for this event are sold out.

Tickets for the Friday night and Saturday afternoon events are available at 1239 Broad or from members of the Victoria Village Squires.

Hardship Aid Urged in Strike

Saanich Socred MLA Hugh Curtis Tuesday urged the provincial government to provide financial assistance to extreme hardship cases resulting from labor disputes.

He asked Human Resources Minister Norman Levi to come to the aid of a locked out municipal employee who is pregnant and doesn't have enough to eat.

Levi assured the MLA "that his department won't see anyone go hungry." He said he had been notified of the specific case, but thought the matter arose in connection with an eviction notice.

Curtis said the woman is a member of CUPE, Local 388, an inside worker at Victoria city hall whose health is in danger because of a lack of food.

The MLA said it is less than human for the government to reject an emergency case. "I wonder how many employees in the labor disputes are suffering."

Curtis said Levi was contacted by union representatives March 13 and 17.

In answer to another question, Levi said the provincial government is not considering the purchase of Gillain Manor, the treatment centre for alcoholics on the Saanich Peninsula.

He said the proposition is too expensive.

He was responding to a question from Oak Bay Tory Scott Wallace.

The centre went into bankruptcy two weeks ago. Value of the complex is estimated at $2.7 million.

Extended Deadline Studied

Labor Minister Bill King said Tuesday he will consider extending the deadline for Careers '75 applications due to labor problems causing interruptions in the postal service.

Friday is the deadline for the program which subsidizes cost of hiring students during the summer to help out small businesses and farms.

King was responding to a question from Socred MLA Alex Fraser (Cariboo). He said he would check into the number of requests received by his department.

"If it appears more time is needed we will consider extending the deadline."

Grit Suggests Gov't Lost $1M

A Liberal MLA said Tuesday the government may have lost $1 million through its purchase of the Minnekhada stock farm in Coquitlam.

Pat McGeer (L-Vancouver-Point Grey) said first news reports about the purchase said Daon Development has purchased the property Jan. 16 from former B.C. lieutenant-governor Clarence Wallace for $1 million.

Less than two weeks later on Jan. 27 the government announced it has purchased the 1,030 acre farm from Daon for $2 million, said McGeer.

He called on the premier to table the purchase agreement with Daon to make all the facts clear.

5 DUMPS TO STAY

Five parks are being retained by Saanich for garbage-dumping after padlocks are installed Monday on five other parks being returned to the tennis players.

The parks where garbage may continue to be dumped during the municipal labor dispute are Lambrick, Braefoot, Hampton, Hyacinth and Lochside.

Clean-up of the tennis courts will begin next week and they are expected to be ready for tennis by April 4.

Tally Ho Stabling Woes Ignored

Stabling and accommodation problems of the Tally Ho sightseeing operation were shrugged aside Tuesday as being no concern of Victoria city council.

Joseph Heald, agent for the firm purchased last year from the Olson family by Daniel Arias, had written seeking a lease on city-owned land which could be used as a hitching-up and overnight storage area in the vicinity of Tally Ho's Belleville Street loading point.

In the letter considered by the public works committee, Heald urged the city to "review this most essential part of the charm and heritage of Victoria's tourist industry."

The first tourist horse-drawn tally-ho came to Victoria in the spring of 1903. On its inaugural trip, the tally-ho went through the gates of the grounds at the brand new Government House which had just been opened and was met by the lieutenant-governor himself, Sir Henri Joly de Lotbiniere.

But the committee shelved the request by giving it the customary "received and filed" treatment.

Mayor Peter Pollen said the city should spend more time planning pitch-and-putt courses, tennis courts and other amenities for tourists than in endless discussions on the problem of Victoria's "extractive industries."

"We give them (Tally Ho) the roadway, we give them the parking . . . what more should we do?" he said.

DOG TAG FINES

The B.C. government is prepared to enforce the March 31 deadline for th purchase of provincial dog licences, domestic animal protection officer Mrs. Joan Yates said Tuesday.

She said failure to buy a dog licence before that date and-or failure to put the licence on the dog can result in a fine of $50 to $500. In addition, there will be a penalty of $2 for late purchase of licences.

This is applicable to all areas in British Columbia not within the jurisdiction of a municipality.

People living south of the Malahat, frbm Port Renfrew to View Royal, can purchase licences either at Canis Haven Kennel, 795 Meaford, Langford, or at Saseenos Service, 5723 Socke Road.

Girlie Show Ban Ogled

DE VILLIERS
. . . studies law

The city of Victoria has the power to ban girlie shows if it wants to do so.

In its regular caucus session Tuesday, city council was given that advice by city solicitor Jakob de Villiers, and expressed keen interest in exploring the matter further.

De Villiers explained that under the city's private act of 1915 — an exclusive piece of legislation similar in some respects to Vancouver's city charter — it can "regulate the conduct of all businesses in the city," through licensing.

"You mean if we want to prohibit girlie shows we can do so?" asked Mayor Peter Pollen.

"But can we make it stand up in court?" inquired Ald. Clyde Savage.

Pollen, Savage and other council members criticized the topless dancing act at the Tally Ho tavern, and said such so-called entertainment has no place in Victoria.

The mayor read out to the meeting a letter from a young mother of two children who said she was married to an alcoholic, and was concerned that the proliferation of such forms of entertainment in drinking establishments would keep him away from home even longer hours.

"To have a 20-year-old pussy cat stalking around a dais like some caged lioness . . . is just deplorable," Pollen said.

The discussuion followed a meeting with Vic Woodland, general manager of the Liquor Administration Branch, in which the provincial official allayed council fears that the city might have no say in the approval of general liquor licences for neighborhood pubs, clubs and the like.

Aldermen pointed out that a branch circular issued last Nov. 1 clearly implied municipalities would have only zoning authority and no specific say in choosing "between sites and between individual applicants . . ."

But Woodland assured the meeting that that was not the intention.

"If you don't want them (pubs) there we're certainly not going to shove them down your throats," he said, adding that in Vancouver municipal rejection of a licence application automatically makes it "dead in the water" as far as the branch is concerned.

Council asked Woodland to put such guarantees in writing before it considers passing a resolution to give blanket approval in principle to the issue of general liquor licences.

Besides neighborhood pubs, hotels and clubs, the general licence would permit sale of liquor in private and publicly owned recreation centres, community centres and municipal or provincial cultural centres.

New Image Bid By Open Shops

The 75-member Vancouver Island Right to Work Association has changed its name to the Vancouver Island Independent Contractors and Businessmen's Association.

Newly-elected president Robert Gillespie said the association has always recognized that its support came from "open-shop contractors and businessmen and through the new name we hope to acknowledge that support."

The Right to Work Association was formed in 1972 in response to an organizing drive by building trades unions.

Right to work associations were first formed in the U.S. where some states still prohibit closed shop union agreements.

A newsletter published before the annual meeting Tuesday night, said members had earlier voted to adopt a less controversial name.

Gillespie said the concept of right-to-work is still important to the organization and "we are proud of the volume of business done under that banner. With the new image, we expect to accomplish more."

Several independent movement groups will meet in Trail in April to form a province-wide association.

STRIHA

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

A survey of residents in Langford, Colwood and Metchosin on their health care needs shows the vast majority want a community health centre with emergency care their first priority.

And in an open letter to the residents, John Striha, president of the Juan de Fuca Hospital Society, suggests the regional hospital board be given a few weeks to come up with "some positive plans and some deadlines for action."

Failing that, Striha said: ". . . if you really want some health facilities in this area, it would seem that the only course of action left for the residents is to organize and petition (Health Minister Dennis Cocke) for some action similar to what the residents of the North Saanich Peninsula had to do last year to get their replacement of the Rest Haven Hospital."

Striha said he hopes meetings and petitions won't prove necessary.

The survey was requested by the Juan de Fuca Hospital Society in January to determine how a cross-section of the Langford-Colwood-Metchosin population felt about development of a community health centre.

Those questioned were also asked what health facilities they thought were needed in the community.

The survey and the report it has produced were prepared by Dr. Stephen Webb from the department of sociology at the University of Victoria. A total of 415 people was questioned.

In his summary Webb said the survey showed there is widespread dissatisfaction with present health care facilities. Better than nine out of 10 favored establishhment of a new health centre.

While there was a wide range of opinion as to what services are needed almost everyone (96 per cent) said they feel emergency services should be included in the health centre.

There is no general hospital or first aid clinic in the area and accident victims are now brought to one of Victoria's two general hospitals downtown.

Almost seven in 10 of those questioned felt the need for emergency services was urgent.

A day operating surgery (83 per cent)

Home nursing (80 per cent)

Geriatric care (79 per cent)

Laboratory and x-ray services (78 per cent)

On the need for longer term care, primarily for the chronically ill and aged, 81 per cent indicated a need for extended care facilities, 75 per cent for intermediate or convalescent and 59 per cent for "boarding home" care facilities.

The survey also asked people their preference on where a health centre should be located if one was built and Goldstream Avenue emerged as the clear preference among three suggestions.

Fifty-four per cent favored Goldstream over 21 per cent for the Island Highway and 17 per cent for Luxton. Eight per cent said they didn't know.

Those questioned were asked if they had suggestions for services to be included in the health centre beyond those mentioned by surveyors and dental services were mentioned by 25 people.

Youth counselling, a senior citizen drop-in centre, a youth drop-in centre and rehabilitation for the handicapped were others most frequently suggested.

In his letter Striha said the objectives of the Juan de Fuca Hospital Society, which was incorporated in January of 1970, are to see a new extended care hospital built to replace the one at St. Mary's Priory and to press for other necessary health care such as emergency services.

The board has made suggestions to the regional hospital board and the health minister, including suggestions on sites for a hosptial and other care facilities, he said.

"We have only received many unfulfilled promises and no-aetion."

The survey results confirmed "in very definite terms" that what the residents want is exactly what the board has been pleading for since March of 1969, he said.

Player Found Guilty

Wayne Matherne, defensive halfback for the B.C. Lions, and Ivor Kidds of Burnaby were found guilty in provincial court Tuesday night of assaulting a B.C. Ferries patrolman at Swartz Bay Sept. 8.

"I think if these two men had been sober there would have been no incident. It's as simple as that," said Judge Harold Alder.

He fined them $100 each for common assault on patrolman John Anderson.

Anderson told the court both men "were drunk. They had had far more booze than they should have had out in the public."

He was directing traffic near the terminal when a van with two women and two men he identified in court as Matherne and Kidds tried to overtake the lineup of waiting vehicles.

The woman driver apologized and offered to go back but the two men told her not to. The van did go back, then returned in a few minutes trying to overtake waiting vehicles and this time Matherne was driving.

Police were called but the van had left, driven by one of the women and the men had got out. They then left with Sidney RCMP.

Later in the evening, the van arrived again, this time in the correct lineup position, with two women in it. Matherne and Kidds arrived walking a few minutes later.

After more profanities directed at Anderson, Kidds "stepped right into me." Anderson said he caught him, threw him to the ground between him and Matherne, and then Matherne was coming over the fallen Kidds at him.

Anderson grabbed Matherne, turned him over a car hood and tried unsuccessfully to get handcuffs on him. Meanwhile, Kidds got up and jumped on Anderson's back.

Another patrolman, Wilfred Hetman, said he saw Matherne attack Anderson and swung a fist at him. Hetman and a bystander pulled Kidds off Anderson's back and the fight ended.

Bus Drivers Book Off At Dockyard

Employees at HMC Dockyard in Esquimalt are walking, hitching or driving their own cars around the base today after bus drivers and other heavy equipment operators booked off work this morning.

The 31 drivers and operators, members of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, were pulled off work to bolster a picket line set up for the second day at the marine services institute in Pat Bay.

A Dockyard spokesman said all scheduled bus runs on the base had to be cancelled.

The heavy equipment operators include the bus drivers and lowbed, crane, bulldozer and front-end loader operators.

The walkout has also affected a sewer replacement program in the Belmont Park housing subdivision which will be delayed until the operators return to work.

Employees of two contracting firms, Fraser River Pile Driving and Wakeman and Trimble contractors an excavation compahy, refused to cross the PSAC picket line.

The picket line also prevented a Case Existological Laboratories crew from assembling equipment at the institute site which was to be used to refloat a $500,000 barge which sunk last week in Pat Bay.

The barge was a floating laboratory for the Controlled Ecosystem Pollution Experiment, a five-year, $10 million international experiment.

PSAC picket lines were continued today at the marine services base on Harbour Road and the Ogden Point grain elevator.

PSAC regional representative Tom Dalzell said the rotating strikes would be escalated.

PSAC employees at nine B.C. airports walked off the job today, but ministry of transport spokesman Des Allard said operations were not affected.

Meanwhile, in Ottawa negotiations for the treasury board and 19,000 federal blue collar workers agreed to further mediation sessions today to try to settle the month long wage dispute without government intervention.

The wage clause is the only outstanding issue. A union spokesman said officially the two sides are less than three per cent apart while unofficially there is only a 1.25 per cent gap.

"Both sides are spinning their wheels, but we will meet again," said a spokesman for the PSAC, bargaining agent for the 19,000-member general labor and trades group.

In the Commons Tuesday, Prime Minister Trudeau told opposition questioners that the time had not yet come for intervention by Parliament in the dispute.

Five Stolen Cheques Already Cashed in Area

A young man who stole about $8,850 worth of American Express travellers cheques from Yorkshire Trust Tuesday afternoon has wasted no time getting rid of them.

Victoria police said today five of the cheques have already been cashed at Greater Victoria stores. All were passed by a man using the alias Christopher Bernard.

Police warn merchants to use caution cashing any American Express U.S. funds travellers cheques.

The theft occurred shortly after 4 p.m. when a young man wearing a dark blue suit and tie entered Yorkshire Trust at 737 Fort and told a teller he wanted to buy large amount of travellers cheques.

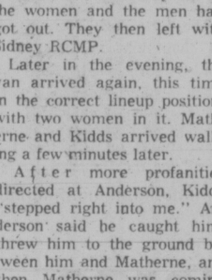

As the teller was processing the order her attention was distracted.

When she returned all the cheques she had left on the counter had disappeared and so had the man.

Police said the cheques were in denominations of $100, $50, $20 and $10.

He Keeps Them in the Picture

max low

To someone, from another land, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, at first, is Nelson Eddy, sitting astride a horse, singing Rose Marie.

And at second it's a guy tracking a scoundrel through the frozen north and, as always, getting his man.

But you're not in Canada long before you realize that the RCMP, as well as having a romantic past, is a modern peace-keeping force. And it's doing more modern things every day.

Take the new appointment for John Faux.

Faux (you pronounce it Fox) is the Nanaimo constable who has just been named as the first RCMP officer in the country ever to be given full-time official duties in the specialized post of composite-drawing expert.

I travelled to Nanaimo to meet John Faux and discovered a likeable young family man with a great talent.

Around the walls of his Colwood Road home are scenes in oils and portraits of children, with great depth and feeling. And down in the basement there's the almost-finished Aeronca Champion, a 30-year-old plane John is rebuilding.

Flying has been the big hobby for Faux, a pilot since he was 17 and in the Air Cadets. And this is the third plane he has taken as "a basket case" consisting of just old tubing and reconstructed the frame and covered it with dacron. He hopes to be flying this one by the summer.

Now 32, Faux was born in Sault Ste. Marie in Ontario and had his schooling there.

Right now, he has two children — five-year-old Jill and four-year-old Gregory — but it will be three by the time the family moves to the two-acre property just purchased in Metchosin. John's wife Pat is expecting their third child in mid-April and Faux starts his new job in Victoria on May 1.

Two small faces peep at the doorway as John and I spread out photographs and his charcoal drawings, made from witnesses' descriptions of suspects, on the carpet and compare likenesses.

"Are those all robbers, Mum?" young Greg asks as Pat Faux works in the kitchen.

"Most of them are, Greg," she answers.

"Are some of them like us, then?"

Most of them are, in fact, suspects in rape cases, says John, and that's where the great amount of his identification work lies.

It's strange, through, for a man making a success in his field, John Faux didn't particularly want to be an artist or a policeman.

As long as he can remember, he was always "mad" on drawing, took an art course at high school and later went to the Ontario College of Art in Toronto for two years. But he had "no desire to become a starving artist."

As a boy, the RCMP held no great attraction for him, either. But he became friends with a number of men on the force in Sault Ste. Marie and "they sort of talked me into joining," says John.

Now John has been in the RCMP for 11 years. He spent seven years on general duty in Manitoba, five of them in Selkirk, and then went to Ottawa for a year's special training in identification work. He has been almost three years in the Nanaimo detachment, where he has worked mainly as a photographer in the identification department.

As his talent with charcoal became more and more evident, though, John found more of his time was being spent sketching suspects. Last year he did about 40 or 50 drawings and had "a pretty good success rate."

John does freehand sketches from descriptions — a lot different from the old way of using a kit, where the officers show witnesses about 40 different noses and ask them to pick the one nearest to the suspect's nose, and so on.

"I only used a kit once," John says with a smile, "and it took me about four hours to get all the features together, and then they weren't in the right proportion. It took me a few minutes to do a freehand sketch and get the features right."

"The idea of the kit is that any officer can be called on to use it effectively," John explains. "But it doesn't really work as first you have to have talent, and second you have to have an interest."

"Because of the success I've had, they're giving me a chance to make a go of it or fall flat on my face," says John. But he believes that one day there won't be just one composite artist in Canada or even in B.C.

After all, it's a post that has been popular with police forces in the United States for years. You read about it in the papers and you see it all the time in those police shows on TV like Ironside, don't you?

"Oh sure," says John with a grin. "They've always got composite artists there whipping out the sketches in about 30 seconds.

"And I wonder what's wrong with me because it takes me about three or four hours to do the same thing . . ."

Canucks Bump Lead to Three

By The Canadian Press

Vancouver Canucks edged ahead in the tight National Hockey League Smythe Division race Tuesday night but coach Phil Maloney was not entirely satisfied.

Vancouver rallied to tie New York Islanders 4-4, putting the Canucks three points in front of Chicago Black Hawks and St. Louis Blues who share second spot after the Blues moved up to tie Chicago with a 5-2 win over Pittsburgh Penguins.

The Canucks had moved two points in front of the Hawks with a win in Chicago on Sunday.

"It would have been nice to be able to pick up four points in two games on the road but three is OK, too," said Maloney.

In two other NHL games Tuesday, Philadelphia Flyers beat Washington Capitals 7-2 while Los Angeles Kings defeated Minnesota North Stars 5-3.

Coach Al Arbour of the Islanders, who are trying to hold off Atlanta Flames in the fight for the third and final playoff spot in the Patrick Division, was also only half-satisfied with the tie.

"I would have been more satisfied with the two points that goes with a win, but I'll take the one," said Arbour.

The one point put the third-place Islanders seven points ahead of Atlanta.

After the first period ended in a 2-2 deadlock, the Islanders went ahead 4-3 in the second but Don Lever's second goal of the game and 30th of the season at 13:16 of the third period gave Vancouver the tie.

Gerry O'Flaherty also scored twice for the Canucks who stayed over in New York for a game tonight against the Rangers.

The Canucks learned Tuesday that centre Chris Oddleifson will be out of action indefinitely with a broken jaw suffered in Sunday's game at Chicago.

Philadelphia pushed its Patrick Division lead over the Rangers to 17 points with the victory over Washington.

Rick MacLeish led the Flyers with three goals, including two in the second period when Philadelphia scored four times.

A crowd of 18,130 at Landover, Md., turned out to see the Capitals skate through their 60th loss in 71 games. The 60 losses tied the league record set by the Islanders in the 1972-73 season.

A large number of the fans were obviously from Philadelphia, judging from the cheering the Flyers drew.

At St. Louis, Garry Unger and Pierre Plante each scored their 30th goals of the season to lead the Blues against Pittsburgh.

Mike Murphy scored two goals and assisted on another score by Bob Berry in the Kings' victory over Minnesota. Murphy ran his season goal total to 28.

Bill Goldsworthy scored his 33rd of the season for Minnesota.

The Voice of The Races, A Short, Short History

It was in the summer of 1935 and a chap named Harry Foster had been broadcasting the horse races for owner Sam Randall at Lansdowne Park in Vancouver. At the beginning of that season, Foster decided that Randall should pay him more money for his contribution to the Sport of Kings, and told Randall: "I am ready to go to work for more money. If you ain't got no more money, you ain't got no more announcer."

Randall, however, wasn't about to be told how to run his business, and the phrase "more money" was one he didn't recognize. And now, not only was Foster suddenly out of work, but Randall suddenly didn't have an announcer either.

And that, friends, was the beginning of the Jack Short story, regarding race broadcasts only, that is, Short being the "voice of the races" in Vancouver and on the Island ever since. It may be recalled that he never missed a race broadcast since that time until last year when his wife of 41 years, Zela, passed away and the incredible unmatched total then was 35,872.

Short was a guest speaker at the recent Sportsmen's Dinner and he finished up in the winner's circle. His many anecdotes not only regaled the gathering in the Empress, but he was equally delightful afterwards. Of course, Jack is like that. He can and does talk all day and, if that includes the evening, fine. And one of the secrets of his ability to keep going, through rain, sleet, fog, minor ailments, the lot, is that every once in a while he uses a little vaseline to keep his vocal chords operative. It's not a cure-all, just a home-made remedy that works.

For $5 a Day, Why Not?

But back briefly to '35 and that fateful day at Lansdowne. After Foster's departure, a concession clerk was hurriedly dispatched to the roof. He got as far as the second horse. Then an eager mutuel clerk was assigned the task. He too failed to pass muster. The next volunteer was found draped over the microphone. Everyone figured he had suffered a heart attack. "But he was just scared stiff," said Short. "The mike gets some people that way."

Then Randall spotted Short and asked him if he'd like to try. Jack said: "I jumped at the chance." He had four races that day, reported back to Randall who told him the job was his. The salary? A modest $5 a day. "Who was I to argue?" said Jack. "We were all scratching in those days."

But with his new position, Jack had also created a problem. He was broadcasting baseball games from the old Con Jones (Callister) Park; and he had to rush from Lansdowne to get to the ball game in time. On arrival he'd rush in, grab the lineups, head for the broadcast booth and his wife would pass him a hot dog and coffee as he hurried by.

So times are better now, wages are up and he doesn't have to moonlight any more. But it wasn't always that way, especially before that 1935 season. He was a jockey for a time, trainer, breeder, owner, agent, advertising buff, boxer . . . "Things were tough then," he recalled. His riding career started when he was apprenticed in 1921. He rode for Jack Breadin and Jack Christie, mostly in the bushes, but it ended in 1923 because Jack simply was too lanky and had a problem making weight.

Extra Runner in the Race

As a jockey's agent, he once had Donald Meade in his book. Meade three years later (1933) was to win the Kentucky Derby on Broker's Tip, and twice was U.S. national champion.

Jack's other associations are far too numerous to dwell on here except to record that he was a pioneer in many broadcast fields. He simulated horse races, won a national award for a "pick the winner" gimmick, usually sold his own advertising and then peddled his own time to stations. He broadcast fights, basketball, baseball, dance bands, whatever, and wherever he could make a dollar.

He told the dinner guests about the time he had an actress as a guest in his broadcast booth. He had warned her that she should stand clear once the race began as he would be operating three mikes, one for TV, one for the track and one for taping the race for rerun later. Well, the race started, Jack was giving his call and as he swung the glasses around suddenly he stepped on the actress' foot.

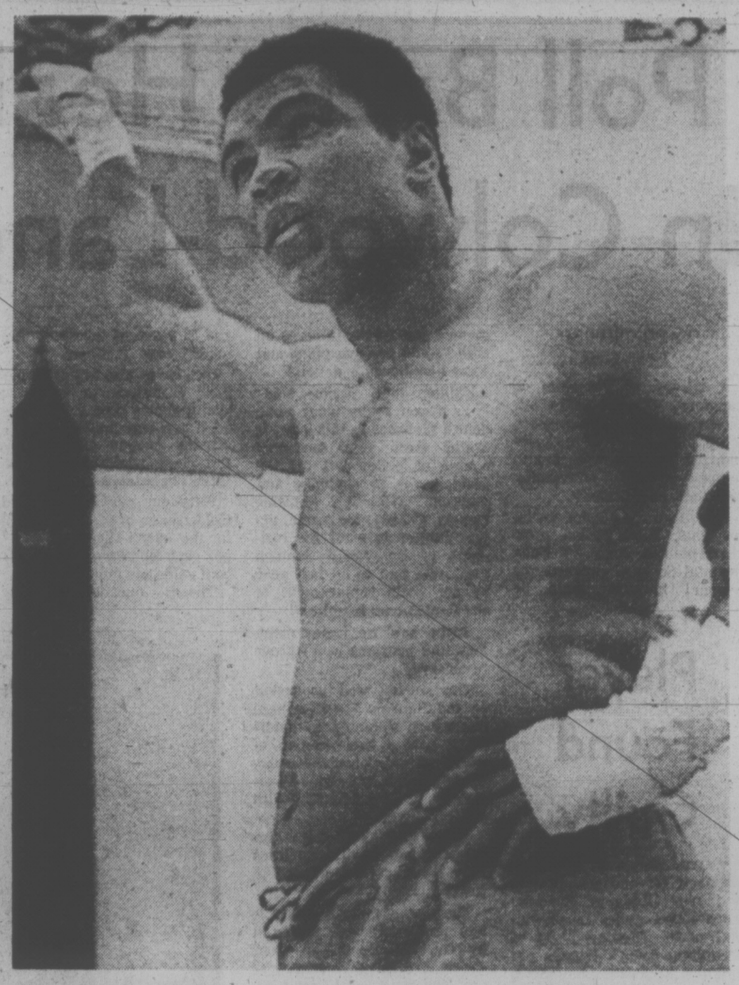

Naturally, it hurt and she yelled. A few minutes later the radio station controller called and said: "Jack, did you have a horse called 'Jesus Christ' running in the fourth race?" Jack explained that he wasn't attempting to be sacrilegious, but that was the name of the horse that suddenly, on radio, was running fourth.

So that's an infinitesimal part of the Short story, partly because Jack isn't about to tell when it really all began, or when it will end. Suffice to say that when Ex Park opens on April 23 and that familiar refrain rings out: "They're at the post!", it will mark Short's 40th anniversary.

Or as Jack says: "I'm young for my age."

TAKING BREATHER during workout at Cleveland Coliseum, where he will meet Chuck Wepner in heavyweight title fight Monday night, is boxing champion Muhammad Ali. Angelo Dundee, Ali's trainer, says he hopes the champ can get his weight down to 219 pounds for the fight but wouldn't reveal his current weight or how many of those rolls must go.

Warning for Wepner

CLEVELAND (AP) — World heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali issued a warning Tuesday to challenger Chuck Wepner that he better not fight dirty because the favor will be returned.

"I'm not a dirty fighter and I don't intend to be," Ali said. "If he throws one dirty punch, I'll give him a warning and if he doesn't stop, I'll do the same to him."

Ali said that he was told by his trainer, Angelo Dundee, and has heard various reports that Wepner was practicing rabbit punches, kidney punches and head butts.

Ali will defend his title against Wepner here at the Coliseum Monday night.

Foreman: Five-Fight Night?

TORONTO (CP) — Negotiations are under way to have former heavyweight champion George Foreman fight five bouts in succession, promoter Irv Ungerman said Tuesday.

Final arrangements on the site of the matches have not been completed. However, Ungerman said if it is held in Toronto, Maple Leaf Gardens will be the site. April 26 has been tentatively set as the date.

He said plans were to have Foreman box three rounds each against Alonzo Johnson, Pedro Agosta, Mac Foster, Terry Daniels and Boone Kirkman.

The bouts would be shown live on the Wide World of Sports television program, carried by ABC-TV in the United States and CTV in Canada.

Harold Ballard, president of Maple Leaf Gardens, said no details have reached him, but that he was "interested if the figures are right."

The New York Post reported that fight promoter Don King represented Foreman when the contracts were signed Monday at ABC. It added that Foreman would receive "well up into five figures" for the fights.

Oilers Start Charge By Toppling Nordiques

By The Canadian Press

Edmonton Oilers, bidding for a playoff spot in the World Hockey Association Canadian Division and perhaps, even second spot ahead of Toronto Toros, made an auspicious start Tuesday night by upsetting the division-leading Quebec Nordiques.

The 8-5 victory moved the Oilers back into third place, one point ahead of fourth-place Vancouver Blazers who lost 5-3 to Minnesota Fighting Saints.

Edmonton now is nine points behind the Toros who are idle for the next week while the Oilers play three games.

Tuesday's other WHA game saw Phoenix Roadrunners beat Chicago Cougars 7-3.

Edmonton has been plagued by injuries and inconsistency most of the season but team captain Al Hamilton said after Tuesday's game that the club has no time for excuses if they want to make the playoffs.

"They have to do it on the ice," said Hamilton, who has been out most of the season with a bad knee.

Then Hamilton pointed to Bruce MacGregor and said: "There's one guy who never complains. He just plays."

MacGregor scored two goals Tuesday night, added two assists and had several more chances.

Bill Hunter, Oilers general manager-coach, said the key was that his club came back after losing its four-goal first-period lead.

The score was tied 4-4 when MacGregor started his scoring late in the second period. Ed Joyal also had two goals and two assists and rookie Doug Kerslake added two goals for the Oilers.

Marc Tardif scored twice for Quebec.

Magic Not In Goalie's Repertoire

He tried valiantly, but goalkeeper Larry Hendrick couldn't quite make it as a miracle worker.

As a result, Kamloops Chiefs squeezed through with a 4-2 victory over Calgary Centennials on Tuesday to reclaim third place in the Western Division of the Western Canada Hockey League.

Hendrick, one of the few players to escape coach Dave Amadio's stinging criticism of Calgary's veteran players, kept the Cents in the game almost single-handedly. He stopped 36 shots compared to the 17 handled by rival Mark Earp.

In Tuesday's only other game, Medicine Hat Tigers kept alive their first-place hopes in the West by upsetting the Eastern Division-leading Saskatoon Blades 7-6.

Amadio publicly lashed out last week at some of the last-year players in the Calgary lineup. He backed up his thoughts by benching some of Calgary's veterans.

The over-worked Hendrick wasn't criticized.

Hendrick was touched for a goal by Don Moores, with Calgary enjoying a man advantage, at the 5:35 mark of the first period and then shut out Kamloops for the next 45 minutes and four seconds.

Reg Kerr finally broke the spell at 9:59 of the third period to tie the game 2-2, and Kamloops pulled out the victory when brothers Kelly and Darryl Ferner scored a few minutes later.

The win moved Chiefs one point ahead of New Westminster Bruins in their tight battle for third place.

The third-place finisher will play the second-place team in opening round of the playoffs.

Medicine Hat appears to be ticketed to finish second, but the Tigers aren't ready to concede Victoria Cougars the top spot.

The Hatters closed to within 10 points of Victoria when defenceman John Hilworth scored the winner late in the first period. It was Hilworth's first goal of the season.

Don Murdoch, the league's goal-scoring leader with 78, failed to score but managed one assist. The point gave Murdoch an overall total of 132, 10 behind Victoria's Mel Bridgman.

BIGGIE MUNN SUFFERS FATAL STROKE

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Clarence L. (Biggie) Munn, the coach who built Michigan State into a national football power, died Tuesday from complications following a stroke. He was 66.

Munn, whose career at MSU spanned 24 years, died at Lansing's Sparrow hospital just a week after suffering his second crippling stroke in 3½ years.

Munn gave the Spartans their first taste of football prestige in 1950, his third year as head coach, by starting them on the longest winning streak in school history — one that ended early in the 1953 season after 28 straight victories.

Clippers Tie Semi-Finals

Nanaimo Clippers won in overtime Tuesday to tie their best-of-seven British Columbia Junior Hockey League semi-final series at two games each while Kelowna Buckaroos took a 2-0 lead in their sem-final series.

Clippers pleased their home-town crowd by taking Bellingham Blazers 6-4. Kelowna nipped Vernon Vikings 7-6 in Vernon.

Ken Pendleton forced overtime by scoring for Bellingham with six minutes left in regulation play. Clint Eccles scored the winner at 6:20 of the 10-minutes overtime period and Brian Day added the clincher with 46 seconds remaining. John Gordon scored twice for Nanaimo. Rod Guimont and Dale Ewasiuk added singles.

TAX PEOPLE SET TO SELL PLAYERS

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Internal Revenue Service official says the agency is confident it can sell the contracts of some of the players on the Birmingham team in the World Football League and recover more than $200,000 owed the government in back taxes.

The IRS announced two weeks ago that it intended to sell the contracts. But the league and a local judge said the 59 contracts were void because they had been breached when the team failed to meet a numbr of pay days.

William E. Self of the IRS said that some of the contracts held by the Birmingham team are for future services with some current National Football League players, and that those contracts remain valid.

Among the players in that category are defensive end L. C. Greenwood of Pittsburgh Steelers, Jethro Pugh, Pat Toomay and Rayfield Wright of Dallas Cowboys and Bob Kuechenberg of Miami Dolphins. Greenwood, among others, has expressed an interest in freeing himself of the WFL contract.

Self said the IRS has been approached by teams in the WFL, NFL, and Canadian Football League, but refused to say which clubs.

Tug Still Has to Believe

By The Associated Press

When relief pitcher Tug McGraw was a member of New York Mets, his remark "You gotta believe!" became the rallying cry of the fans as the Mets went on to win the 1973 National League pennant. He still feels that way.

Tuesday, the left-hander, now with Philadelphia Phillies, checked into a Philadelphia hospital for tests prior to the removal of a lump near the lower tip of his left shoulder blade, and the 30-year-old left-hander said:

"I'm leaving this up to the doctors. They say there's nothing seriously wrong with me. When the doctors say it, well, you gotta believe, right?"

In Tuesday's exhibition games, it was the hitters who were doing the believing.

Baltimore Orioles beat Texas Rangers 11-8, Chicago White Sox edged Cincinnati Reds 7-5, Detroit Tigers nipped Montreal Expos 11-10, Milwaukee Brewers defeated Oakland A's 8-7, California Angels defeated Cleveland Indians 5-4, Houston Astros beat Kansas City Royals 5-2, Chicago Cubs defeated San Francisco Giants 4-1, New York Mets beat Boston Red Sox 5-4, Minnesota Twins defeated Atlanta Braves 5-3, St. Louis Cardinals crushed Philadelphia 12-3 and New York Yankees topped Pittsburgh Pirates 3-2.

Don Baylor's two home runs led the Orioles against Texas. The outfielder also drove in a first-inning run on a fielder's choice.

Two homers by Buddy Bradford lifted the White Sox over Cincinnati. Tony Perez hit a homer for Cincinnati.

Milwaukee's Bob Coluccio drove in five runs—four of them on two home runs—including the go-ahead run in the ninth against Oakland. Jore Rudi homered for the A's.

A lead-off triple by Detroit's Ron LeFlore and a wild pitch ended Montreal's eight-game winning streak. LeFlore also had a home run and rookie left fielder Dan Meyer hit a two-run homer.

Cutthroat-Coho Study Reveals a New Problem

As the great bard Robert Burns once penned:

"The best laid schemes o'mice and men gang aft a-gley."

And it's beginning to appear there may be some hitherto unknown ramifications which could complicate the new federal-provincial salmon enhancement program.

George Reid, the fish and wildlife branch fisheries biologist for Vancouver Island, recently told me of an interesting study currently being conducted by Gordon Glova, a doctorate student from the University of British Columbia, on interactions between coho salmon and our native cutthroat trout.

Reid explained that as part of the enhancement program: "There's going to be an expansion of coho stocking into cutthroat waters above barriers."

And some of those waters support fairly good populations of cutthroat.

"He's (Glova) finding that coho may supress cutthroat populations under stocking conditions," said Reid.

The study, now in the third and final year, took in a great many streams on various parts of the Island. Glova, who is working out of the Fisheries Research Board of Canada biological station in Nanaimo, is also conducting some experiments at the University of Victoria.

Reid said the branch will now "have to identify what waters are important for us and preserve them."

The conflict between the two species is territorial in origin and stems from the fact that coho fry normally spend about one year in fresh water before migrating to the ocean.

There is no similar interaction between cuts and other species of salmon because they don't remain in the rivers long enough to compete.

Coho tend to displace the cutthroat into less desirable territory and make them more susceptible to predation.

During the course of the study, coho fingerlings were placed in a cutthroat stream and subsequent observations showed the young cutthroat were ousted to the margins of their former territory.

Then the dippers, small birds with a liking for fast streams as well as fish eggs and fry, came to feast.

So it seems federal-provincial plans for building up our supply of salmon may have an extra quirk of nature to overcome before the project bears fruit.

NIBBLES: Federal fisheries has announced a new reward system for their Georgia Strait head-recovery project will go into effect April 1 . . . The standard $3 reward for catching a salmon with a missing adipose fin and containing a tiny coded wire tag in it's nose will be done away with, but anglers turning in heads will have their names entered in a draw for a top prize of $500 and six secondary prizes of $50 each . . . The reward program still only applies to nose-tagged chinooks and coho taken between Hardwicke Island in Johnstone Strait and Sheringham Point in Juan de Fuca Strait . . . Again, the fiscal year will be broken down into eight periods . . . April-May, June, July, August, September, October-November, December-January and February-March with one set of rewards (as outlined above) given out in each period . . . This is a chance to do something concrete toward helping our salmon management . . . And, it might pay off in a big way.

Speaking of the program, Anne Taylor of Victoria, who caught a coho that originated from Rosewall Creek hatchery, and L. Francis of Courtenay, a commerical fisherman who caught a coho from the Big Qualicum hatchery, were $100 winners for the Oct.-Nov. period . . . These two Island hatcheries accounted for almost 90 per cent of the tagged coho caught in this period.

John Rose topped the Frostbite Derby for Chinook Club members of the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association by landing a 13:09-pounder last Sunday . . . Frank Jenvey came second with a 4:03-pounder and Win Rose was third with a 3:12-pounder . . . All three fish were taken in the vicinity of Willis Point.

Water temperatures have reached approximately 40 degrees and the coho eggs in the Amalgamated Conservation Society incubation boxes have hatched out . . . In the words of Howard English, one of the guiding lights behind this far-sighted venture: "It looks good."

We notice in the estimates of the provincial government that the budget for the recreation and conservation department has nearly doubled from $25,664,041 in the 1974-75 fiscal year to $47,400,000 in the upcoming year . . . The budget for the fish and wildlife branch has increased from $7,078,622 to $10,335,767 while the sum set aside for the parks branch has increased from $10,131,181 to $25,708,931 . . . I'm left wondering how much of that relatively meagre increase for the fish and wildlife branch has already been eroded by inflation?

Who will it be — Oak Bay Bays, North Surrey Spartans, North Delta Huskies, Mt. Douglas Rams, Vancouver Tech Talismen?

You get 16 choices in the B.C. high school boys' basketball finals opening today in Vancouver. By tonight, your selection will be down to eight.

Coach Don Horwood's Bays go after an unprecedented third straight provincial championship starting tonight when they meet Point Grey Greyhounds, fourth best team in Vancouver, in the 9 p.m.

DALE BATE

first-round feature at the PNE Agradome. Games continue in the Agradome tomorrow before the tournament shifts to the Pacific Coliseum for the Friday and Saturday windup.

Coach Dale Bate's Rams, second to the Bays on the Island, are scheduled against Richmond at 5:30 this afternoon and a third Island team, Howie Ellis' Georges P. Vanier Towees of Courtenay, were up against Handsworth of North Vanvouver.

The balance of today's first-round schedule had Castlegar against North Surrey, Rutland against North Delta, Vancouver Tech against Prince Rupert, Templeton against Prince George and Abbotsford against Argyle from the North Shore area. Today's losers drop into the consolation round and winners advance in the championship side. The title game is 9 p.m. Saturday at the Coliseum.

Bate is taking the cautious approach to the tournament, Rams' third appearance in a row under him, and with good reason. Guard Ricky Shenton is a doubtful starter. He picked up a hip pointer two weeks ago, since diagnosed as bursitis, and has had difficulty pivoting.

If Shenton doesn't play, Bate will move Tom Watson from forward to guard and insert Bill Kent in Watson's front-line spot.

Centre John McManaman, who played in the Island tournament with a face mask to protect a broken nose, still has the mask but is expected to see full duty.

McManaman, at 6'2", is Rams' tallest player so Mount Doug will give up height to all its opponents. Rams' hopes rest on checking and the fast break.

"We'll be giving up height," Bate agreed, "but if we can get through the first round and play good, consistent defence, we'll have a chance."

Bays are rated by many as the best defensive club in the tournament and Horwood makes no bones about it, they'll be out to prove they're the best all-round.

"We're really ready," he warned. They're also healthy, including stars Steve Pescod and Larry Dalziel.

The Oak Bay defence tonight must stop Howard Kelsey, Point Grey's 6'3" scoring phenomenon who has been averaging more than 33 points a game.

If the favorites advance from today's first round — and in high school ball there's never a guarantee of that — the odds are Bays will cross paths with North Delta and North Surrey who, according to reports from the mainland, also have excellent title chances. The matchups would be interesting, to say the least.

Bays played North Delta once this year, in a pre-season game last fall, and lost by 25 points. However, that's no indication because Oak Bay has been one of the most improving teams over the winter.

North Surrey and the Bays met twice and split, each winning by three points.

Another toughie could be Van Tech, which dropped a 16-point decision to the Bays this year but were close until the closing minutes.

North Surrey won its third straight Fraser Valley title last weekend. Coached by Robin Arden, the Spartans have plenty of height in Kirk Randa (6'9"), Charles Olsen (6'6"½) and Bob Dudley (6'9½"). Guard Ross Scanlon (5'10") scored 26 points in Spartans' 57-55 championship final victory over North Delta but somehow was snubbed by the tournament all-star selectors. North Delta's big gun in that game was guard Mike Kenis with 27 points.

Coach Ken Hooker's Van Tech Talismen beat Templeton Titans for the Lower Mainland crown on the scoring of John Stark (20 points) and Mario Brito (17), the rebounding of Doug Pirozek and some timely mid-court steals by Mario Mauro. Templeton got good performances from guards Dennis Zaballero and Dino Rosa, who scored 25 points.

Richmond Colts won the consolation 78-70 over Point Grey, Marjan Markota counting 16 for the winners and Kelsey bagging 28 for the Greys.

For those who might want to send telegrams to the Mount Doug or Oak Bay teams, both are quartered at the Eldorado Motor Hotel, 2330 Kingsway.

'Thumbs Up' Says Martin

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — It appears that Buffalo Sabre left winger Rick Martin will be ready for action Thursday night when the Sabres face the New York Rangers.

Martin, who injured his right thumb Sunday in a National Hockey League game against Toronto, skated during the Sabres workout Tuesday, even though he has a light cast on the injured thumb.

"I got good wood on some of my shots," Martin said. "I guess I'll be okay. I'm ready to play if they want me."

BOYCOTT BACKED

MONTREAL (UPI) — The organizing committee for the 1976 Montreal Olympics said Tuesday that South Africa would not be invited to participate in pre-Olympic competition here this summer.

COJO director-general Roger Rousseau, who issued a statement following a report that the Quebec Track and Field Association invited the South Africans, said the committee would respect the boycott of the segregationist state by the various sport federations and the International Olympic Committee.

He also noted that "the Canadian government does not encourage the exchange of athletes between Canada and South Africa."

Rousseau said "all organizing committees involved in the 1975 competition will be asked to respect the Canadian government policy."

This summer's games were being organized by COJO, the Canadian Olympic Association, the Canadian Sports Federation, Sports Canada and the Quebec high commission for youth, recreation and sport.

Most events included in an Olympic program will be contested at the pre-Olympic warmup.

The committee's statement also "suggested that only those countries and athletes offering a high level of performance be invited to the 1975 competitions in order that the competitions provide the best possible preparation for 1976."

Super Bowl XI In Pasadena

HONOLULU (AP) — The Rose Bowl at Pasadena, Calif. was selected Tuesday by National Football League owners as the site of Super Bowl XI, to be played on Jan. 9, 1977.

Commissioner Pete Rozelle said the decision favoring the Pasadena site came on the sixth ballot after considerable discussion.

Six cities, including Montreal submitted bids to hold the NFL championship game, and Pasadena's was one of the last bids entered.

If the game fills the 104,701-seat stadium, it will be the biggest attendance in the history of the Super Bowl, dating back to 1967.

The largest attendance was in the 1973 game at the Los Angeles Coliseum, where 90,182 fans attended.

Tuesday's decision marks the first time a Super Bowl will be played in a non-league city.

Montreal wanted the game for its new Olympic Stadium under construction for the 1976 international competitions.

Tetley Takes Two

PERTH, Scotland (CP) — Canada's Bill Tetley, hit by France with an opening-round loss at the world curling championships, took much of the sting out of that setback Tuesday with two crucial victories.

Tetley's foursome from Thunder Bay, Ont., scraped by the United States 7-5 in a second round match when American skip Ed Risling bumped in a Canadian rock to count two, then followed up with a 6-5 victory over Scotland's Alex Torrance in the evening draw.

Many Scottish fans among the 2,000 attending Tuesday night's games, who earlier had been loud in their cheers for the Alex Torrance foursome, gave the Canadians a well-earned hand when the game ended.

The victory left the Canadian champions still in a runner-up role at 2-1 after three games, tied with Scotland, Sweden's Axel Kamp and French skip Andre Tronc's rink which had beaten Canada 8-3 in Monday's opening round.

"I feel a lot better than I did 24 hours ago," Tetley said after the Scottish game, referring to the opening-round loss to France.

Although he had control of the contest from the outset, Tetley figured he missed an opportunity to secure the win earlier "when I missed a passout for three in the fifth."

The takeout shot with final stone of the end missed the Scottish counter completely, enabling the host nation's rink to steal one and tie the game at 3-3.

But Tetley cracked another two in the sixth and the rinks exchanged scores through the final four ends.

Tetley was not enthused with either game Tuesday but admitted the one against Scotland "has been our best here this week."

"We've got lots of room for improvement, though, before this thing is over."

PICKERING RINK STARTS STRONGLY

COURTENAY — Chuck Perry has the hometown support but Bob Pickering has the credentials and reputation.

And Pickering, living up to advance billing, enjoyed far more success than the host rink as the 16th annual Canadian Elks curling championship got under way at the Comox Valley Curling Club.

Pickering, a member of six Saskatchewan men's championship rinks, including five as skip, won his first two games in the six-rink, round-robin Elks playdowns to share the first-day lead with Alberta and Manitoba.

Perry, whose Courtenay rink includes Sandy Sandberg, Zeke Macdonald and Art Meyers, didn't benefit from hometown support. He lost a pair of tough, one-rock decisions — 7-6 to Alberta's Don Longmore and 6-5 to Manitoba's Howard Sagers.

Flora Moving Up

SWIFT CURRENT, SASK. (CP) — The Frida Payson rink from Lachine, Que., downed Alberta 8-4 in the fourth round and then defeated Newfoundland 10-7 Tuesday night to take the lead after five rounds in the Canadian senior women's curling championship.

Quebec is 4-1 and is followed by six teams — Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, British Columbia and New Brunswick — tied for second with 3-2 marks.

Ontario's Shirley Pilson of Chatham had been the leader going into Tuesday's fourth and fifth rounds with a 3-0 record, but she dropped a 9-6 decision to Saskatchewan's Dagny Kradovill of Weyburn and was overwhelmed by British Columbia 16-4.

The B.C. rink, skipped by defending champion Flora Martin of Victoria, jumped ahead early against Ontario in the fifth round, scoring six in the first end and stealing three in the second.

In other fifth-round play, Manitoba's Bea Carlson of Winnipeg whacked New Brunswick 13-6, Alberta's Phyliss Crist of Calgary bounced Prince Edward Island 11-8 and Saskatchewan decisioned the Nova Scotia rink skipped by Joan Renouf of Halifax 10-7.

Other fourth-round games saw British Columbia defeat Manitoba 8-6, Nova Scotia trounce Doris MacDonald's Charlottetown, P.E.I., crew 11-2 and New Brunswick's Connie Totten of Fredericton dropped Newfoundland 10-7.

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — The Alberta rink skipped by Les Rowland of Calgary is alone in first place following six rounds of play in the Canadian mixed curling championship.

The Alberta rink scored an 8-4 win over Andre Emond's Quebec foursome from Montreal in the fifth round Tuesday and came back in the sixth draw to defeat defending champion Rick Folk and his crew from Saskatoon, 4-2 with a dramatic last shot in the 10th end. Alberta is 5-1.

British Columbia, skipped by veteran Jake Block of Abbotsford, thumped Ontario 11-1 in the fifth round then lost a 6-3 decision to Quebec to finish the day at 2-4.

SUSSEX, N.B. (CP) — The Saskatchewan rink skipped by Don Staples of Kindersley, with lead Al Mills down with the flu, remains the only undefeated foursome with a 3-0 record after four rounds of play in the Royal Canadian Legion Canadian curling championships.

Saskatchewan had the bye in the fourth round and scored an 8-5 victory over Nova Scotia in third round action, Tuesday.

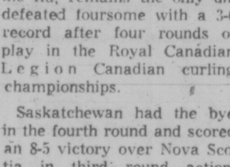

Nova Scotia's Wally Knock rink from Lunenburg prevented previously unbeaten British Columbia, skipped by Kelly Carin of Kamloops, from winning its fourth straight game. Nova Scotia posted a 9-5 decision for its first win in four matches.

The Entire Court Became Her Jury

MEMPHIS — Judge Kay Churchill allowed courtroom spectators, including some awaiting trial, to vote on the guilt or innocence of a defendant.

"I was never so shocked in my life," said James Marty, attorney for defendant Audy Mae Parker, 40. "I don't know what I'd have done if I'd lost. I guess I would have had to appeal."

ATHENS — Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis and her two children today left the quiet Ionian Sea island of Skorpios, where the body of shipping tycoon Aristotle Onasis was laid to rest in a marble covered grave Tuesday. Onassis' daughter and heiress-apparent, Christina, 25, and his three sisters remained on Skorpios.

TORONTO — An RCMP spokesman says Yasser Arafat, leader of the Palestinian Liberation Organization, will not be allowed into Canada wearing a gun if he attends a criminology convention here this September. Arafat spoke to the United Nations general assembly last fall with a gun in his pocket.

LONDON — An 800-year-old tradition of male chauvinism was broken Tuesday when Lady Dorothy Donaldson became the first woman alderman of the City of London. Lady Dorothy declined to speculate on whether the city fathers would agree to her using the title "alderwoman" let alone "alderperson."

AUSTIN, Tex. — His attorneys tried to prove he was insane, but Robert Kleasen accused of murdering two Mormon missionairies and sawing their bodies into pieces too small to recover, insisted he was mentally competent. "I may face the electric chair, but what you are trying to do is wrong," Kleasen, 42, told his lawyers. The jury agreed, and ruled Tuesday Kleasen is competent to stand trial for murder. Kleasen was also given the chance to hire a new attorney.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — DeJean Repogle, the 16-year-old high school senior who lost her right leg after an Arab grenade attack in Israel last December, has returned home after a four-week hospital stay. At home, the blonde teen-ager switched from a wheelchair to steel crutches. Family friends said she expects to receive an artificial leg for her 17th birthday in May.

ARAFAT

HONEST THIEF

PENTICTON — Service station owner Don Pickett was apparently the victim of an honest thief when his business here was robbed.

The thief took about $10 worth of gas and some cigarettes. This week Pickett received an anonymous letter in which the thief apologized for his action and enclosed $40 to cover damages and the cost of what was taken.

MD LOSES SEX CASE

NEW YORK — A civil court jury has determined that Dr. Renatus Hartogs, a prominent psychiatrist, induced a patient to indulge in a 14-month bout of sex therapy with him.

The jury of four women and two men returned the verdict Tuesday in a $1.25-million malpractice suit.

Madeline Sherwood, who played the mother superior on the Flying Nun television series, testifed Tuesday that she became the bearded doctor's patient in 1949 and had sex with him.

As part of his defence Hartogs inroduced a photograph of his office couch. It was, he said, 29 inches wide.

TOURISTS ARE BACK BUT NOT SWALLOWS

SAN JUAN CAPISTRANO, Calif. — Today is the day the tourists come back to Capistrano. They won't see many swallows. March 19, St. Joseph's Day, is when the swallows, by local legend, always return to the old mission here.

In years past, upwards of 30,000 swallows arrived but most of the farmland has given way to housing developments, and last year, no more than 3,000 swallow were counted.

The legend of the swallows is lost in the past; however, a city press release says the swallows took refuge at the mission after a local innkeeper smashed their nests because their chatter disturbed his customers.

Victoria Wins U.S. Visit

VICTORIA

ORANGE PARK, Fla. — Overjoyed at news that his Russian daughter has been granted a visa to visit him, retired admiral Jackson Tate says he was apprehensive when he first made contact with the young woman he has never seen.

"Her mother was in a Russian prison for eight years and she (his daughter) could have been right in the same damn spot," Tate said Tuesday. "But, thank God, they took it the other way and I will see Victoria."

Victoria Fyodorova, 29, a Soviet film actress, was notified in Moscow Tuesday that she will be granted a visa upon payment of 316 rubles, the equivalent of $512.

She was born of a wartime romance between Tate, then a U.S. naval attache in Moscow, and Zoya Fyodorova, a Russian actress, now 62.

Because the late Russian dictator Joseph Stalin apparently disapproved of the liaison, Tate was ordered out of the Soviet Union. Zoya was sentenced to 25 years in prison. She was released after Stalin's death.

Tate didn't learn of the birth of his daughter until 1963.

"I am just as discombobulated as I can be," the 77-year-old Tate said when he received the news her visa was granted.

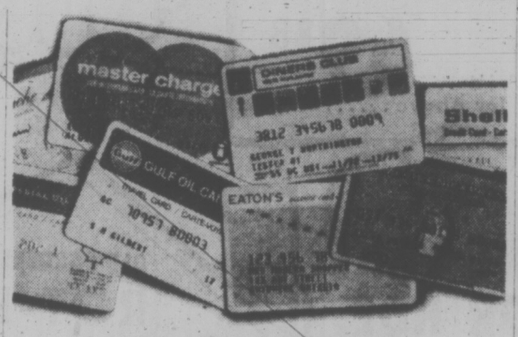

"My immediate reaction is one of thankfulness to Secretary Brezhenev and the Russian people for this great gesture of humanitarianism," said Tate, who recently underwent open-heart surgery.

In Moscow, Victoria said the news came without fanfare.

"I'm ecstatic," she said through an interpreter. "The Ovir passport people simply called up and said, 'Bring 361 rubles down here on Thursday for your visa.' It was as simple as that.

"I didn't think they would let me go."

And in Storrs, Conn., Dr. Irene Kirk, who served as an intermediary between Tate and his daughter, said Victoria may leave her country as early as Friday and stay in the United States for three months.

Montessori Fall Class Denied Parent Group

A request by a group of parents for establishment in September of a Montessori class for primary school children has been turned down by Greater Victoria school board.

The board promised Monday, however, to begin planning a district Montessori program for sometime in the future.

A delegation from the group pushing for a special kindergarten-Grade 1 class, the Victoria Montessori Society, appeared at the board's monthly meeting to plead their case and to hear the board's decision.

"We're disappointed that we won't have it in September, 1975," said society secretary Linda Martin, but she added that the group was thankful the board hasn't shelved the idea completely.

She said the society is going ahead with its own plans to open a private pre-school Montessori class in September in Emmanuel Baptist Church.

The society first approached the board last summer and was promised that efforts would be made to set up the class by this September.

In other business the board:

—Approved an agreement to allow the municipality of Oak Bay to build four covered tennis courts and a parking lot on the grounds of Oak Bay junior secondary school.

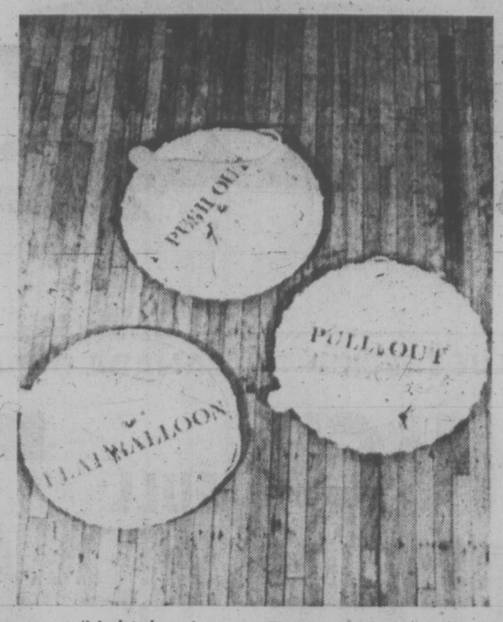

Under the agreement, schools would have free use of the courts from 1 to 5 p.m. on weekdays.

Oak Bay council has yet to approve the agreement.

—Allowed Colquitz junior secondary school to form a society to buy a 24-passenger school bus. Lansdowne junior secondary already has such a bus.

—Agreed to give up to $1,000 to help the View Royal choir attend the Canadian Music Educators' Conference in Edmonton April 13.

—Decided to tell the B.C. Housing Management Commission that it cannot legally agree to let the commission erect a temporary community centre on the grounds of Blanshard elementary school, but would like to help the commission find alternative solutions.

GRIT APPLAUSE WELCOMES MUNRO

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor Minister John Munro (right) returned to the Commons Tuesday after an absence of almost three weeks.

Munro spent almost two weeks in hospital recovering from exhaustion connected to worry over the Hamilton harbor scandal. His name has been mentioned in the scandal but he has denied any criminal or political wrong doing.

Before entering hospital he considered resigning from the cabinet, but Prime Minister Trudeau told him to take some time off and see a doctor.

Looking fresh and considerably better than three weeks ago, Munro received prolonged applause from the Liberal benches when he entered the Commons.

'TOKEN OPERATION'

Petro-Canada Under Fire

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservative and New Democratic MPs renewed their attack Tuesday on the Trudeau government's proposed national petroleum company.

But they were poles apart in their reasons for doing so as debate resumed on a bill to create the company to be called Petro-Canada.

Cyril Symes (NDP—Sault St. Marie) said federal energy policies guarantee that the company will be a token operation unable to participate fully in all sectors of the oil industry. Instead of restricting Petro-Canada operations to exploration and research as the government plans, the company should be used to take over private multi-national companies, he argued.

As a minimum objective, Petro-Canada should buy out Imperial Oil, the largest petroleum corporation in Canada, he said.

Peter Bawden (PC—Calgary South), a millionaire oil driller and staunch opponent of government instrusion into the industry, said the NDP might get its way. He called the bill part of a secret government strategy to take control of the entire industry eventually.

As a minimum objective, Petro-Canada should buy out Imperial Oil, the largest petroleum corporation in Canada, he said.

Harvie Andre (PC—Calgary Centre) predicted that the $3 billion to $6 billion forecast cost of setting up the company will balloon to $50 billion before the government is finished.

"It is downright irresponsible for any member of this House to give a government agency the authority to spend that amount of our money in an activity about which it knows very little."

He also opposed it on other grounds, arguing that little will be gained from the investment; Crown companies cannot compete effectively against private corporations; the private sector is doing a good job, and there already are too many government agencies.

Symes, reiterating long-standing NDP energy policies, said private companies have bilked consumers, squandered the cheapest and most-accessible Canadian oil in export markets, and jeopardized future oil supplies.

Frank Maine (L—Wellington) said he hopes Petro-Canada will revert eventually to private hands, perhaps under the auspices fo the Canada Development Corp. But initially it must be a 100-percent government venture.

Gov't Paid CBC Fares To Europe, Caouette Claims

OTTAWA (CP) — Real Caouette suggested in the Commons Tuesday that some CBC reporters may have accompanied Prime Minister Trudeau to Europe at the government's expense.

As far as he knew, the three dozen reporters from various organizations who went with him on the 16-day visit to five European capitals paid their own "tickets, hotels, rooms, meals and their own amusements," Trudeau replied.

And, he added, "I never had the opportunity of paying any tip or gratuity" to any of them.

This was a direct shot at the Social Credit leader's allegation late last year that he had paid two reporters, whom he never named, a total of $170 for coverage. Caouette refused to back his claim at a parliamentary inquiry.

A CBC spokesman also denied Tuesday's claim. "It's just not true," he said.

Paper Shuffle for Forces?

OTTAWA (CP) — The cabinet is considering a paper redefinition of armed forces' tasks, Defence Minister James Richardson said Tuesday.

He gave no indication when the study would be complete but said results of it would be reflected in future budgets and government decisions.

The study did not contemplate changes in the basic priorities of the forces; internal and external defence, NATO and peacekeeping.

Rather it covered the level of services that the shrunken forces would provide. Because of infaltion-caused budgetary restrictions the forces were allowed to fall to about 78,000 persons, about 3,000 under strength, last year.

Richardson said there are no plans for further reductions in the forces.

He mentioned the study in an appearance before the Commons external affairs and defence committee and in a later interview.

In a wide-ranging discussion of the North American Air Defence Agreement NORAD before the committee there were these developments:

—The minister could not tell Andrew Brewin (NDP-Toronto Greenwood) for certain whether he had heard of proposed cuts in U.S. air defence arrangements before they were made.

—Lt.-Gen. W. K. Carr, who will be commander of the new Air Command, disclosed that new procedures will result in the Canadian deputy commander of NORAD being relieved if the U.S. goes on worldwide alert again.

Pot Not Harmful, Senators Told

OTTAWA (CP) — Pleas for legislation of marijuana were presented to a Senate committee Tuesday, one of them backed up by testimony indicating the cannabis drugs are not harmful to humans.

The suggestions that the cannabis drugs - marijuana and hashish — be made legal and their distribution handled by government bodies came from the Canadian Criminology and Corrections Association and a private, Toronto-based lawyers group, the Law Union of Ontario.

A. B. Whitelaw, chairman of the criminology association, told the Senate legal and constitutional affairs committee that the associations, board of directors approved support for legalization by a two-to-one margin after a year's debate.

The committee is conducting hearings on a bill that would ease penalties for possession of marijuana but retain severe penalties, including prison terms, for trafficking.

NEW BONDS SET

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner announced Tuesday plans for redemption of government of Canada three per cent perpetual bonds, and the issue of another $525 million of 6.25 per cent bonds. The $55 million of perpetual bonds, issued in 1936, are to be redeemed at par on Sept. 15, 1996. Mr. Turner says the decision to redeem them effectively sets a maturity date for them so they will be comparable to all other outstanding government bonds.

More Takeovers Win Approval

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has approved the takeover by foreign firms of 12 Canadian companies and turned down two other proposals under the Foreign Investments Review Act, Industry Minister Alastair Gillespie announced Tuesday.

Postal Ad Hit

OTTAWA (CP) — A charge of false advertising should be laid against the Canadian Post Office it was suggested in the Commons Tuesday.

The suggestion was made by Cecil Smith (PC-Churchill).

He pointed out that current labour disputes have disrupted the postal service and there was a dispute looming that could disrupt the post office itself.

He said the Post Office Department is currently running a TV advertisement promoting the use of the Post Office for quick and efficient service. The ad was being seen on the single TV station operating in the Churchill constituency.

Billy Bunter: Liar, Glutton Loved by All

ULVERSTON, England (CP) — David Steel, the Liberal chief whip, said in one of his speeches that Britain behaved like Billy Bunter who was always borrowing money on the strength of an expected postal order.

"Who is Billy Bunter?" a young man asked me. Well maybe he didn't know, but any reference to Bunter strikes a chord with millions.

Bunter, the fat boy of Greyfriars School, was created in 1908 by Frank Richards, a writer of school stories who looked at the people about him and tried to imagine what they were like at the age of 15.

In an interview on his 80th birthday, Richards said he evolved Bunter from a business associate who ate and drank too much and who wriggled out of awkward situations with ingenious falsehoods.

Bunter was not only fat; he was a glutton, a prevaricator, a snob and a cheat. He stole jam tarts from classmates because he couldn't stop eating. And he said the first thing that came into his head, true or false.

Bunter embodies some of the worst qualities of the human race and, perhaps because of that, he endeared himself to sinners everywhere. The Magnet, The Gem and other schoolboy weeklies were exported to all countries of what used to be called The Empire.

Richards' lively tales of life at Greyfriars originally centred upon Harry Wharton, the handsome games-loving captain of the Remove, a dashing hero and almost a paragon of virtue. Bunter came late on the scene to provide light relief and he stole the limelight from Wharton as effectively as Sam Weller stole it from Pickwick.

A bachelor and a scholar who wrote good English in a hurry, Richards produced nearly 50 million words about Bunter and his schoolfellows from 1908 to 1940, when the wartime rationing of paper extinguished The Magnet and its sister publications.

Comic book character Bunter

Bunter stories in the hope they would be published after hostilities ceased.

They were. Bunter and his fellows were promoted into novelettes with brightly-illustrated covers and bought by middle-aged men with nostalgia for what seemed to them a happier age. They also appealed to a whole new generation of children.

Before long Bunter made his debut on television after a long search for a boy actor who was fat enough and clever enough to impersonate him.

George Orwell, creator of the horrorsome 1984, once attacked Bunter and the boys of Greyfriars as "symbols of class indoctrination."

"Silly ass!" commented Richards, by now a frail, sharp-eyed little man who wore a skullcap.

"In all my stories I made fun of snobbery. Bunter was an arrant snob who bragged that he lived at Bunter Court. He talked down to scholarship boys from poor homes and the other fellows bumped him for it."

Billy Butlin, the resort man, was clever enough to invite Richards to one of his holiday camps and the writer, with his love of young people, had a great time. He repaid Butlin with a novelette in which Bunter and the Greyfriars boys stayed at a Butlin camp.

COMPUTER CORRAL FOR PHANTOM HERD

LUBBOCK, Tex. (AP) — A phantom herd of cattle is roaming the Texas Tech campus, but this beef will never grace a backyard barbecue grill.

"We've got 'em corralled in a computer," said Dr. Charles Gaskins, an assistant professor in the animal science department.

These computer cows are part of an unorthodox approach to the study of animal genetics, the purpose of which is to accomplish genetic improvements through interbreeding of the animals.

The ultimate target is to produce a superior steak as inexpensively as possible.

"The valuable thing about this program is that it allows us to demonstrate genetic systems in a relatively short time," Gaskins said.

"Each week we'll create 1,300 to 1,400 calves. Ideally, the students would learn methods of selection and mating which would allow them to make genetic improvements in actual populations of livestock.

"They should also learn something about the genetic characteristics of economically important traits — how to make improvements in reproductive functions, average daily gain, feed efficiency and meatiness."

At the beginning of each semester, students are assigned "herds" of cattle-computer printouts listing genetic characteristics for as many as 50 imaginary animals.

"The computer enables us to compress 15 years on a genetic time scale into 12 weeks," said Gaskins. "Using the computer, we've put together a program that simulates the most important genetic characteristics of livestock."

The student's initial computer-generated herd contains a list of characteristics for each animal such as weight, fat thickness and sex. Using these characteristics, students select what they feel are the best sires and dams for breeding purposes.

Their selections are entered into the university's computer, which combines the characteristics of each animal with random environmental factors to produce a second generation of cattle.

Based on the sires and dams selected, the computer is programmed to determine whether the mating was fertile, whether the calf died at birth, or whether a healthy animal resulted.

The computer then produces a second generation herd.

CBC Chief Defends Controversial Plays

OTTAWA (CP) — CBC president Laurent Picard promised a parliamentary committee Tuesday night he will consider how the state-owned system can more clearly identify TV programs that some viewers might find offensive.

Picard came under heavy attack in the Commons broadcasting committee for recent TV dramas that MPs said were "more explicit than normal" in using four-letter words, showing total nudity, and speaking explicitly about sex.

The CBC has a mandate to reflect all segments of society, and in doing so it cannot be Pollyanna, Picard claimed.

James McGrath (PC-St. John's East) said there seems to have been a deliberate attempt by the CBC to say that, since the permissive society is here, audiences had better get accustomed to it.

The three programs to which main objection was taken were Baptizing, a story of a young girl's maturing; Ten Lost Years, a script based on tape-recorded reminiscences of the Depression era; and You're Gonna Be Alright, Jamie Boy, a living room drama set in Toronto.

In reflecting the cultural development of the country, the CBC has tried to show a broad spectrum, including The House of Pride, and a special to be seen tonight on the humor of the late Stephen Leacock, Picard said.

The three shows about which there were complaints were just three out of 89 drama shows to be seen this season, he added.

At the end of a 34-hour committee session, Picard said he would review the question of how controversial shows might be presented.

Perhaps there should be a half-hour discussion period before the shows so people would be more fully informed of what was coming on their screens, he suggested.

But that would not satisfy all the MP-objectors. Crawford Douglas (L-Bruce) said some people might tune in the middle of a show and say "My goodness" when they found out what it was like.

Picard repeatedly fended off suggestions that these shows were blue movies.

Low-Cost Loans Eyed For Poor

OTTAWA (CP) — Corporate Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet said Tuesday his department is negotiating with representatives of the major chartered banks to make more money available at reduced interest rates to low-income Canadians.

Ouellet said talks between department officials and the banks may result in a set of voluntary guides for banks to follow in freeing a larger proportion of their reserves for loans to low-income applicants.

He refused to specify the amount of additional money the department wants the banks to provide, or the interest rate at which it hopes the money will be loaned.

Optimism Over Inflation Curbs

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons Tuesday his government is "cautiously optimistic" about the possibility of bringing the inflationary spiral under control.

He will be devoting some time in the eight days remaining before the Easter recess to trying to find a consensus in Canada to bring inflation under control and avoid a major recession, he added.

He was responding in the Commons to Conservative leader Robert Stanfield and George Hees (PC-Prince Edward-Hastings) who questioned the worth of anti-inflation talks the government has been holding for several months with spokesman for "the principal sectors of society."

Hees said the last attempt to preach restraint fell apart when it was tried five years ago.

A federal prices and incomes commission, set up at the time to campaign for voluntary restraint, was later disbanded, he pointed out.

Stanfield asked the prime minister to devote full efforts to achieving a consensus before Parliament adjourns for Easter.

He also called for a detailed economic statement before adjournment on the state and outlook of the economy. Trudeau said he would discuss the latter request with Finance Minister John Turner.

Stanfield said that Turner has been expressing concern with regard to increasing Canadian costs and labour settlements and the danger these hold for Canada.

It was clear from some statements made by other ministers that some members of the cabinet did not know what the consensus was all about, Stanfield added.

CUPE Letter To Protest Job Cutbacks

A protest letter signed by every member of the local will be delivered to Saanich School District 63 trustees over its action in wiping out three staff jobs held by members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

Eighty-four of the 98-member Local 441 attended a meeting that gave unanimous support to the three men concerned and decided to press for job security in continuing contract negotiations with trustees.

A spokesman for the local said the meeting had expressed the view that eliminating jobs within the union's jurisdiction during bargaining talks was a tactic employed to coerce the union into accepting the board's proposals for a new wage settlement.

The Saanich board and Local 441 are not part of a dispute involving other CUPE locals, School District 61, the regional district and municipalities in the capital area.

Two groundsmen and an electrician — all with family responsibilities — were told their jobs were done away with effective April 15. Two were offered janitor jobs, with little opportunity to regain their old positions.

Other members of the local were angered by the threat, which does not violate the existing contract.

The agreement covers custodians, maintenance men, secretarial staff and bus drivers within the school district extending up Saanich Peninsula from Royal Oak to Deep Cove.

The union was told if there is a contract settlement too rich for the district, there would be other jobs eliminated.

One of the three men concerned is Martin Mahoney, an electrician, who said if he accepted the lower category offered by the board he would take a loss of more than $1 an hour and his trade skill would be wasted.

He also noted that six weeks prior to the layoff notice the board hired six casual employees who are still on the school district payroll.

Local 441 members noted trustees recently approved of salary increases for themselves.

Three elected members serve on the board's bargaining committee: board chairman Norma Sealey, ex-chairman Rubymay Parrott and vice-chairman Lois Walsh.

They told the union negotiators employees living in the peninsula area need less wages than workers living in the city because they can raise vegetables at home and the board does not charge parking fees for cars they drive to work.

Other members of the local "couldn't believe that that was said," Mahoney said.

The union wage proposal was not made public, but Mahoney said a written submission was made to the board and rejected by trustees. The board's offer, rejected by the union, was $3.68 an hour basic for clerks with at least 15 months' experience (up from the current $2.93); $5.05 an hour for a custodian with 15 months' duty ($4.42), and $5.60 an hour for tradesmen with 15 months' service ($5.18).

Beaver Bill Passes Commons

OTTAWA (CP) — Private bills approved Tuesday by the Commons would recognize the beaver as a national symbol and make it illegal to desecrate or insult the Canadian flag.

Local composer Martin Bartlett

'Sculptured' Sound on Stage

Martin Bartlett, a teacher of musical composition at University of Victoria, will introduce his composition, One Piece for Everyone, at Open Space, 510 Fort, Friday at 8:30 p.m.

For the performance of what is described as "tactile, sculptured electronic music" Bartlett will use electronic sound synthesis equipment of his own design.

The composer considers electronic sound to occupy space in the same manner as a sculpture.

Also on the program is Frederic Rzewski's Le Mouton de Panurge for electronic violin, viola, guitar and bass. Rzewski is a young New York composer who has worked extensively with new performance techniques.

Rzewski's sound-object is a single line which is at first played in unison by all instruments. As the piece progresses through several repititions of that line the performers lose their places, producing a complex heterophony.

Bartlett studied at the Centre for Contemporary Music at Mills College, California, where he was a pupil of Darius Milhaud, Pauline Oliveros and David Tudor.

Four Found Shot In Buenos Aires

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Police today found the charred, bullet-riddled bodies of four men in a burned pick-up truck near a garbage dump favored by right-wing political assassins.

Police sources said the truck was parked alongside Riachuelo Creek, the western borderline of the city, where police last week found an executed leftist suspect.

CHARGE ON LEVI FAILS

DUNCAN (CP) — Mayor Kee Paskin said Tuesday he has been unsuccessful in his attempts to lay a charge of contributing to juvenile delinquency against Human Resources Minister Norm Levi.

Paskin has said he wants to charge Levi and his department to bring attention to what he says is the improper handling of juvenile offenders.

He said last week he would try to lay the charges after juveniles from the island youth centre in Nanaimo led police here on a 110 mile-an-hour car chase, smashing through police roadblocks.

Paskin said one of the youths involved had escaped the school 13 times, stolen nine cars and caused thousands of dollars worth of property damage.

He said attempts to raise the youth to adult court were blocked by the human resources department, and because the department is unable to keep the boy under control, it and Levi and contributing to his delinquency.

Dispute Shuts 3 B.C. Papers

KELOWNA (CP) — Three of five Thomson newspapers in B.C. did not publish Tuesday because of a dispute with the printing pressmen's union.

The Penticton Herald, Kamloops Sentinel and Vernon News, did not publish. The Nanaimo Free Press and the Kelowna Courier both published but the Courier was two hours late.

A spokesman for Thomson B.C. Newspapers Ltd. said the pressmen struck at Kamloops and conducted work stoppages and disruptions at Penticton, Vernon and Kelowna.

A spokesman for the Courier said a letter to Courier pressmen from Local 25 of the Pressmen's Union says any work for Thomson papers would be considered unfair. There was no other explanation.

Union spokesmen were unavailable for comment.

Representatives of the five papers met here Tuesday for talks with the International Typographical Union and provincial mediator Charles Stewart.

A Thomson spokesman said the five papers were doubtful about publishing today.

Pressmen were paid $6.55 an hour in two-year contracts which expired Dec. 31 in Kamloops and Feb. 28 in Kelowna and Penticton. Vernon's contract expires June 30.

ITU members were paid 6.43 an hour in two-year contracts that expired on the same dates. The ITU contract in Nanaimo expired Dec. 31.

Sisters Transferred

BELFAST (AP) — IRA bombers Dolours and Marion Price have won their fight for transfer to a prison in Northern Ireland.

The air force took the sisters secretly from Durham jail, in northern England, to Armagh jail.

Security sources said the British government ordered the transfer in recognition that the Provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army (IRA) is sticking to the ceasefire it declared Feb. 10.

Most of the gunfire since then has been blamed on Protestants or on feuding factions of the Marxist IRA Official wing.

Major Grape Surplus Faces B.C. Growers

KELOWNA (CP) — British Columbia's grape growers face a forecast production surplus of about 3,500 tons this year with nomarkets available, the chairman of the B.C. Grape Marketing Board told growers Monday.

Dick Stewart told about 100 growers at the annual meeting of the Association of B.C. Grape Growers and the marketing board that growers should not expand current acreages. In the past, the board has advised growers to increase production.

He said the wineries have indicated they only require about 8,500 tons of various grapes from a forecast harvest of more than 12,000 tons. Wineries purchase 97 per cent of the growers' production.

"Sales of B.C. wines have levelled off," said Stewart. "We haven't had an opportunity to explore the markets and I'm not exactly sure how we're going to do it."

Stewart said the wineries import 20 per cent of their grape requirements from California.

The marketing board chairman said another blow to the B.C. industry is the upsurge of Prairie-produced wines which can be sold at lower cost after shipping than B.C. wines.

Members of the growers' association made several suggestions to improve the situation including: marketing B.C. wines exclusively through grocery stores; having the government give preferential treatment to B.C. wines while holding the line on grape imports; and attempting to locally produce juice from lower-sugar-yield grapes.

VICTIM'S WIDOW GIVEN PENSION

VANCOUVER (CP) — A North Vancouver widow will receive one of the two pensions awarded in February under the criminal injuries compensation act of British Columbia.

The Workmen's Compensation Board announced Tuesday that the widow will receive $175 a month until her death or remarriage. Her husband was attacked and stabbed to death by an unidentified assailant in a North Vancouver parking lot.

The second pension of $200 a month for life was awarded to a 25-year-old Victoria man who was attacked by two youths in a burglary attempt. He lost the use of his right arm.

Fifteen awards totalling $15,551 were also given to victims of criminal attacks. The largest, $7,529, went to a 53-year-old Vancouver woman who was attacked by a purse snatcher and suffered a permanent injury to her left arm.

Gov't Firefighters Stay Off Job

VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial firefighters were still off the job Tuesday at the University of British Columbia Endowment Lands, Riverview Hospital and Tranquille Hospital in Kamloops. Bruce McLean, a spokesman for the B.C. Government Employees' Union, said the union does not approve of the strike.

The 84 firefighters, members of the trades and crafts components of BCGEU, are fighting for a separate agreement with the Public Service Commission, which bargains for the provincial government.

40-Cent Meters

VANCOUVER (CP) — City council voted Tuesday to increase parking meter rates in the downtown core to 40 cents an hour from 20 cents to force all-day parkers to use parking lots freeing curb space for short-term parkers.

Talks Delayed

VERNON (CP) — Talks that were set for today in the Consumers Glass dispute in nearby Lavington have been put off until at least next week.

United Glass and Ceramic Workers' Union President Harold Niebergal and the union's vice-president are leaving today for a union policy conference in Toronto.

Parity Sought

VANCOUVER (CP) — The 400 members of the Association of University and College Employees voted 78.8 per cent Monday in favor of strike action against Simon Fraser University and Tuesday served 72-hour strike notice. They are seeking a $322-a-month pay raise to give them parity with university custodians who earn $832 a month.

SHOPLIFTER

VANCOUVER (CP) — A man who threatened to jump off the Lions Gate Bridge March 7 because he feared deportation was convicted of shoplifting Tuesday.

Salvatore Pala, 22, of Italy, was given a suspended sentence for stealing a pair of shoes and turned over to immigration officials.

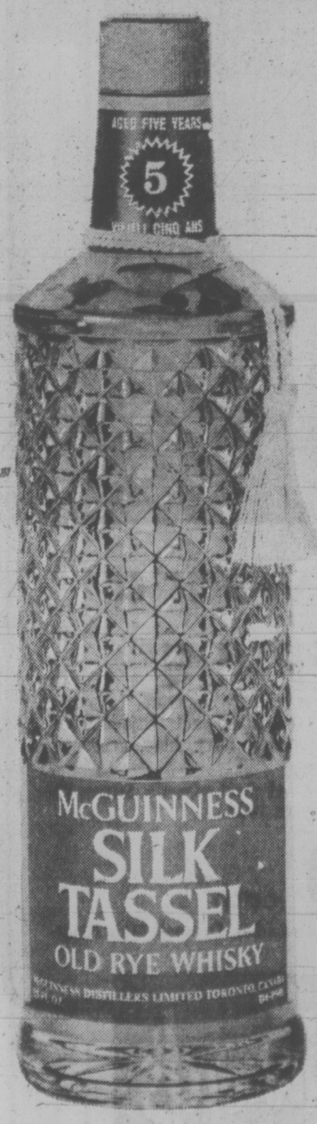

The immigration department said Pala would come before a special inquiry to determine if he should be deported. He is married to a Canadian citizen.

EXPO DEBT STILL HEAVY ON MONTREAL

OTTAWA (CP)—The city of Montreal, scrambling for money to finance the 1976 Olympics, still owes Ottawa $5.8 million for Expo 67, it has been disclosed.

Information filed in the Commons said the debt, originally $14.4 million, is to be repaid in full, at an annual interest rate of 5.46 per cent, by April 1, 1977.

No Promises in Rhodesian Talks

JOHANNESBURG (WP) Rhodesia and South African leaders ended two days of intensive talks about detente in southern Africa Tuesday with a communique that reaffirmed both sides commitment to the continuation of talks on a settlement of the Rhodesia problem "as expeditiously as possible."

But the short joint statement issued by South African Prime Minister John Vorster and his Rhodesian counterpart, Ian Smith, gave no assurance Rhodesia would release the African nationalist leader, Rev. Ndabaingi Sithole, whose arrest in early March has brought preliminary talks between white and black Rhodesian officials to a dead halt.

It said only that his case was "at present under the personal consideration" of the Rhodesian attorney general and that his situation had been discussed by the two parties.

The African National Council, the umbrella black nationalist organization in Rhodesia, has said it will not hold any further talks to discuss arrangements for a constitutional conference until Sithole is released.

Yet another setback to South African diplomacy aimed at getting full-scale negotiations started in Rhodesia came Tuesday with news from the Zambian capital of Lusaka that a top Rhodesian nationalist leader, Herbert Chitepo, had been killed when his car blew up just outside his garage there.

First reports said the explosion was caused by a land mine and that one of his bodyguards was also killed by the blast.

Chitepo, 52, was chairman of the Zimbabme African National Union, which Rev. Sithole heads and which is supposed to have merged into the council but in fact still remains an independent organization.

It is this group that is responsible for most of the guerrilla fighting in the northeast region of Rhodesia and that the Smith government is believed anxious to isolate and eliminate from the talks on a constitutional settlement.

The meeting between Rhodesia and South African leaders, which included three top ministers from both sides, appears to have been devoted largely to a detailed restatement of both government's position on detente in southern Africa.

CONVERTIBLE FADE-OUT GROWS

DETROIT (AP) — The convertible car moves closer to the end of production this fall.

General Motors, the last of the United States auto makers to build the soft-tops, is halting convertible production at Chevrolet, Pontiac, Buick and Oldsmobile plants at the end of the current model year.

That will make Cadillac the sole U.S. convertible producer in 1976. Foreign manufacturers still will offer convertibles.

Company spokesmen said Tuesday the GM divisions are halting production because convertible sales have been dropping steadily during the last 12 years.

American Motors dropped convertibles in 1968, Chrysler in 1971 and Ford Motor Co. in 1973.

'Copter Crashes

Quality of Life Quebec Aim

QUEBEC (CP) The third session of the Quebec national assembly's 30th legislature began Tuesday with a speech from the throne that promised improved quality of life through economic development and cultural security.

Premier Robert Bourassa told reporters after the speech was read by Lt.-Gov. Hugues Lapointe that the major objectives of his government remained "cultural sovereignty in an economic federalism."

Among legislative proposals for the new session are a bill to protect rights of women, a new legislature act, a code of ethics outlining conflict-of-interest rules for members of the national assembly and measures to stabilize agricultural revenues.

Stabilization of farm income is needed "in recognition of the principle that the revenue of the medium-sized producer should be equivalent to that of a specialized worker," the speech said.

Other proposals included legislation to finance political parties with public funds, a policy governing the awarding of government contracts and measures to help small and medium-sized companies.

Citing the growing responsibility of government in the purchase of goods and services, the speech said a "vigorous" policy will be introduced for government purchases and contracts that will have "significant economic repercussions."

Included in plans to help business are the formation of exporting consortiums, the setting up of an international trade centre and export financing by the government-controlled General Investment Corp.

On relations between Quebec and the federal government, the speech specified that constitutional reform is needed to "recognize the cultural aspirations of French-speaking Quebecers."

BOURASSA
. . . cultural security

Problems of union freedoms in the construction industry would be dealt with as soon as the royal commission on construction union freedoms submitted its written report to the government, the speech said.

Among measures aimed at enhancing cultural security is the establishment of a movie industry "that will reflect and develop cultural identify."

The government again plans legislation to ensure the independence and diversification of the media, a promise repeated in previous speeches from the throne.

Standing in the 110-seat national assembly is Liberals 100, Parti Quebecois six, Creditistes two, Union Nationale one and Independent one.

Juvenile Guilty in Death

MERRITT (CP) — A 16-year-old juvenile, a former resident of Vernon and now living in Merritt, was found guilty Monday on a charge of criminal negligence causing death.

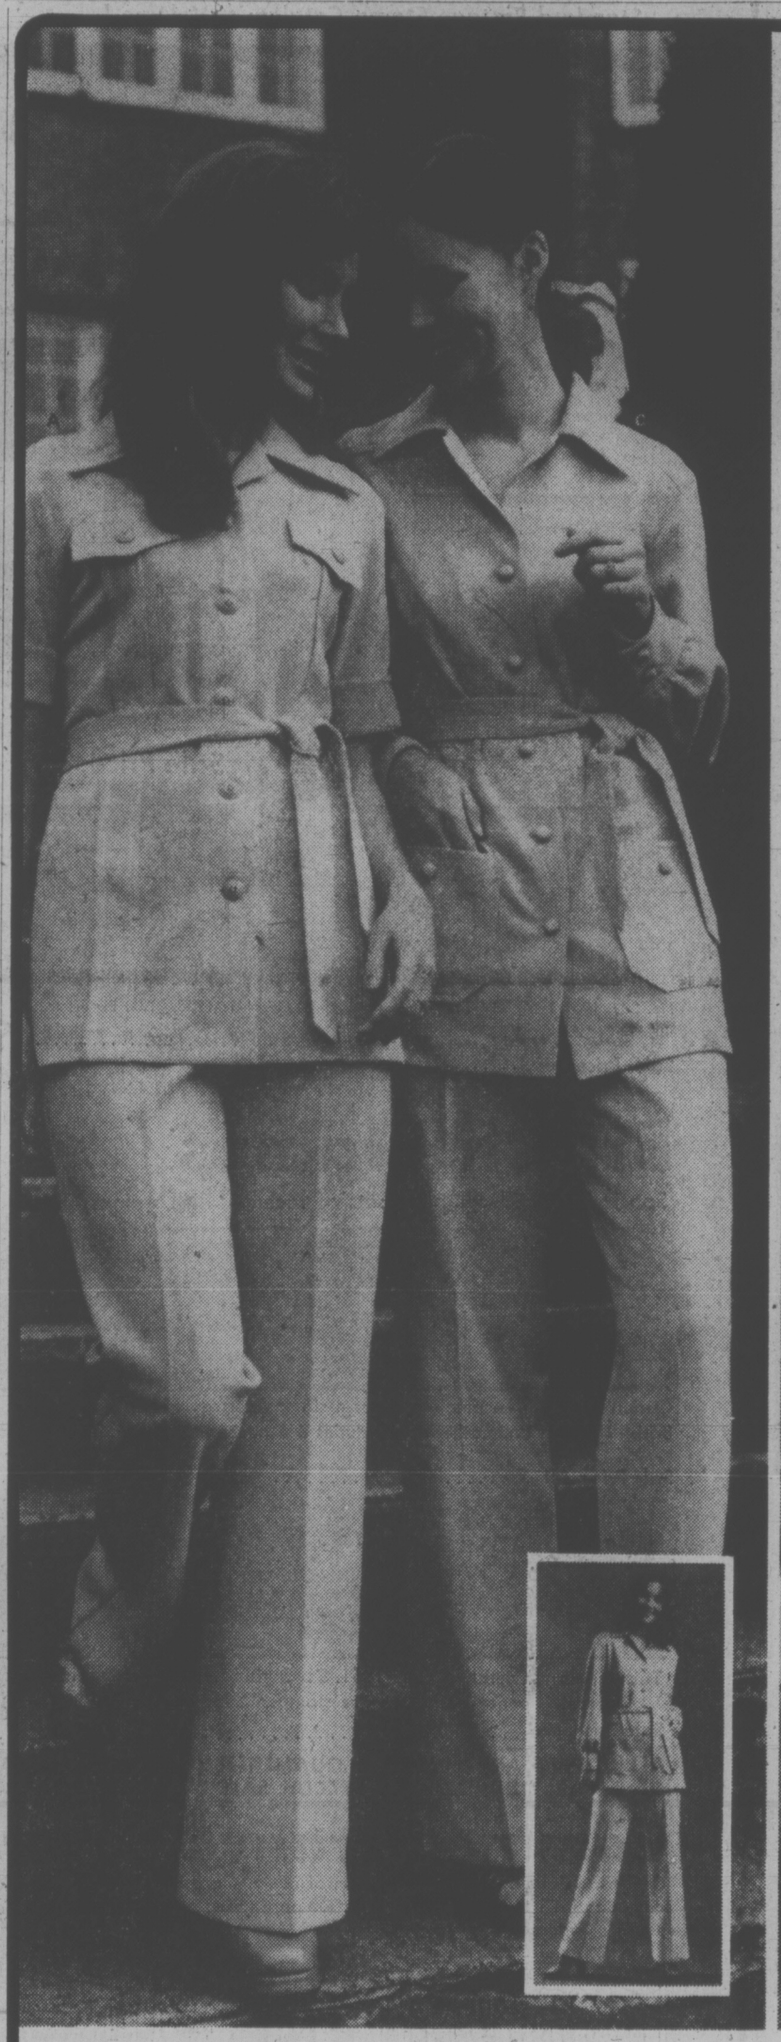

The charge was laid in connection with last September's fire at the Val Nicola Hotel in Merritt in which two persons were killed.

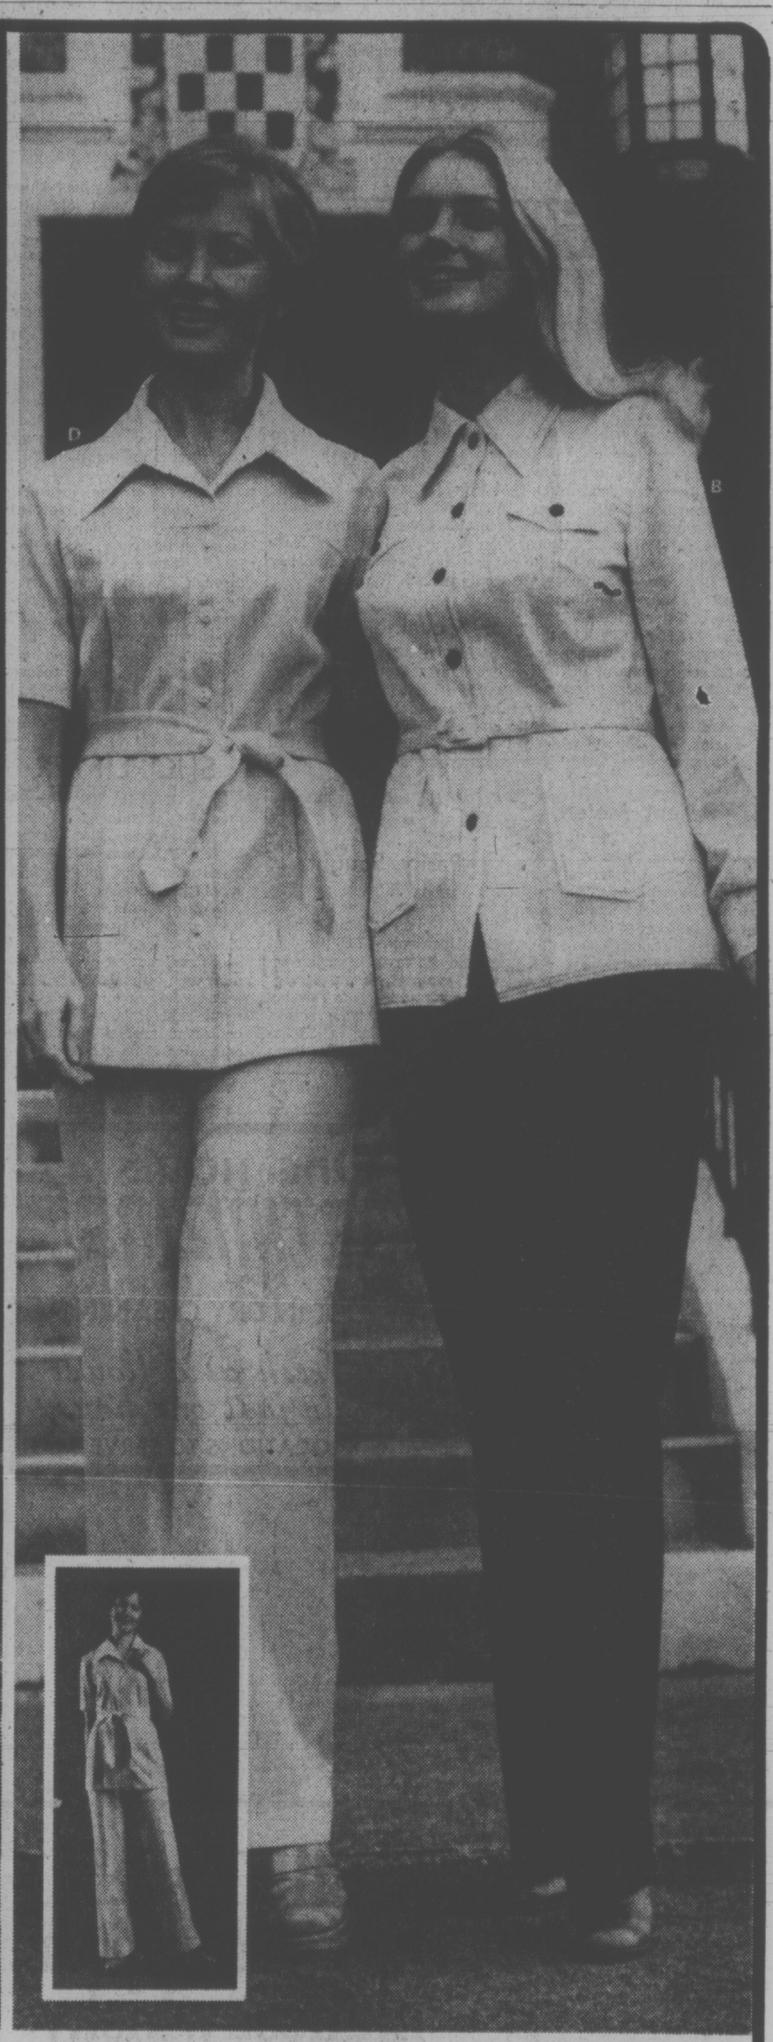

The juvenile will make his next court appearance in Kamloops April 8 for sentencing.

Kale and Cabbage Reliable Early Spring Standbys

HILDA BEASTALL

Green cabbage and kale are two reliable standbys of late winter and earliest spring — the cabbage from vegetable store displays and the kale from local gardens. The two are teamed together today.

A good winter cabbage is not the easiest thing for amateur gardeners to produce, but the ones offered now for sale are very good in fresh texture and sweet flavor.

Kale is seldom seen for sale. Once only in this past month I came across a display of curly kale at 45 cents for a pound. It made our own small planting valuable in dollars immediately. Fresh cut, and using only the small leaves with their tender stems, it is really a great delicacy — not cabbage-like in taste or odor, but just a real tasty treat.

All suggestions in today's recipes apply equally to winter cabbage (bought or fresh) and to kale.

Kale will continue growing new shoots through April if the tops of half the plants are cut off for cooking. New growth comes from the leaf axils on the lower stems and around the cut off top. All low old leaves to remain as long as they are green, removing only yellowed ones as they occur.

Cabbage and kale are readily digestible after cooking briefly in a minimum of water with a minimum of salt.

Since these vegetables tend to loose some of their crisp texture when cooked, try to find a winter radish either at the store or in the garden to add firm crunchiness to the dish. The Chinese use water chestnuts, but they come expensive. Radish or tuberous artichoke does the same job and we like both flavors very much.

KALE WITH WINTER RADISH OR TUBEROUS ARTICHOKE

½ cup radish or artichoke, diced small
3 cups chopped kale (or shredded cabbage) boiling water
1 Tbsp soft margarine
salt and paprika

Wash kale leaves well. Dice radish or artichoke, both unpeeled.

Boil radish in just enough water to cover, for about 10 minutes. Add chopped kale (or cabbage); boil gently together until radish is tender but not soft. You may need to add more boiling water.

Strain all well in a sieve, saving the liquid as valuable vegetable broth, for soup next day.

Add margarine, about one-eighth teaspoon salt and same of paprika. Toss together, serve hot with meat or with other main course dishes. Serves 3 or 4.

A final low cost but highly nutritious lunch or supper dish to be prepared in a skillet or frypan, having a cover.

FRYPAN SUPPER FOR TWO

3 cups shredded cabbage
3 Tbsp soft margarine or soy oil
½ cup wheat flakes
5 Tbsp non-instant skim milk powder
1½ cups hot water or vegetable juices
½ tsp salt
2 cups toasted wholewheat bread cubes
¼ cup grated cheese
1 Tbsp soy oil or margarine grating of nutmeg

Heat margarine or oil in skillet or frypan. Toss cabbage in oil to coat. Lower heat, simmer cabbage, covered, for 10 minutes.

Add wheat flakes and milk powder, stiring with large fork until well mixed. Add vegetable juice (or hot water) gradually, still stirring; add salt and stir again.

Simmer gently with lid on for 20 minutes, stirring occasionally to prevent sticking.

Spread the toasted bread cubes over top. Mix grated cheese with soy oil, sprinkle over toasted cubes, grate a little nutmeg over all. Serve at once. This will also serve 3 or 4 if other food is used at the same course.

In addition to these cooked dishes using cabbage or kale interchangeably, both vegetables can be enjoyed without cooking.

Make a sort of Cole Slaw of kale the same as is done with finely shredded cabbage.

Cut kale leaves into small pieces, coat at once with a dressing of soy or sunflower oil, lemon juice, a very few grains of salt and a few small pieces of date. Toss together as a salad to enjoy with anything that comes to your mind.

Kale is even higher in vitamin values than cabbage. It has more vitamin A, more of the vitamin B complex, and is about equal in vitamin C.

Use either or both these valuable foods two or three times weekly, as a complete main dish, or as a hot vegetable, or salad.

YOUR TURN TO COOK: QUICK SPONGE CAKE

By MARION McCLENNAN

(Today's reader recipe is from Marion McClennan, 1718 Leighton. If you have a family or favorite recipe you would like to share, please send it to the Times Family Desk, 2621 Douglas.)

My husband, Ken's, mother, lives in Scotland, sends us recipes which she has developed herself. They usually are very simple and take little preparation.

This sponge cake takes about 15 minutes from start to finish. If someone phones that she's coming right over, I can throw it together in a shake — and it uses very few, basic ingredients.

SPONGE CAKE

4 eggs
½ cup sugar
1 cup flour
1 tspn. baking powder

Beat eggs and sugar together until stiff. Add flour gradually, folding into egg and sugar mixture. Fold in baking powder.

Bake at 350 degrees until firm and cooked, about eight minutes.

Budget-Busting Chocolate Cake

By MARY MOORE

What a treat? Fed up with economizing?

We broke the budget and made a party cake combining orange flavor with rich chocolate topping. Save this for a special occasion. It is ever so professional.

ORANGE PARTY CAKE WITH CHOCOLATE COATING

Cake:

½ c. margarine or shortening (room temp.)
1¼ c. granulated sugar.
2 eggs.
2 or 3 oranges (grated rind and juice — ¾ c. divided)
½ c. milk.
2 c. unsifted cake-and-pastry flour.
2 tsp. baking powder.
½ tsp. salt.
¼ tsp. baking soda.
About ¼ tsp. orange food coloring.

Whipped Cream Filling:

1 envelope gelatine (plain).
2 tbsp. cold water.
1 pt. whipping (32%) cream.
½ c. icing sugar.
1-3 c. orange juice.

Chocolate Glaze:

4 sq. semi-sweet chocolate.
1½ tbsp. butter or margarine.

In beater bowl cream together margarine or shortening and sugar until light and fluffy. Beat in eggs and orange rind until thoroughly combined. Stir in HALF CUP of the orange juice and the milk.

Combine flour, baking powder, salt and baking soda. Stir into creamed mixture and beat on "medium" for 2 minutes, scraping down sides of bowl often. Add orange food coloring and mix in until you get a pale orange color. Pour into two 8" layer cake pans greased and lined on bottom with buttered wax paper. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 25 minutes. Cool 10 minutes then remove from pans, peel off wax paper and cool completely on cake racks.

Meanwhile make Whipped Cream Filling: Sprinkle gelatine on the 2 tablespoons cold water in a small cup. Let stand 5 minutes. Place cup in boiling water and stir until gelatine is dissolved. Remove from heat and set aside for a minute. In beater bowl whip cream with icing sugar until just starting to thicken. Continue with beaters on "high" while you add the orange juice. Now, slowly pour in liquid gelatine into beaters but MAKE SURE YOU KEEP BEATERS ON HIGH so gelatine will combine thoroughly. Beat until stiff. If cake is not cool yet, refrigerate cream until you are ready for it.

Split each layer of cake making four thin layers. Using the remaining ¼ cup orange juice, sprinkle each layer of cake with 1 tablespoon. Spread cream filling between layers.

To Prepare Chocolate Glaze in top of double boiler combine squares of chocolate and butter or margarine and stir until melted. Let cool awhile so chocolate thickens somewhat. Pour on top of cake, letting it drizzle down the sides. Refrigerate 24 hours before serving it. Let cake sit at room temperature at least 1 hour before cutting or chocolate glaze will be too hard to cut through.

NOTE: Write to Mary Moore, 32 Churchill Ave., Hamilton, Ont., enclosing stamped self-addressed envelope and 10c for each specified recipe.

Yogurt Equals Milk Value At Three Times the Cost

NUTRITION BUYLINE

Q: I've heard that yogurt is better for me than milk and is ideal for dieting because it is a self-contained meal. Is this true?

A: Comparatively speaking, yogurt and milk have the similar nutritional value. Yogurt often costs three times as much as an equal volume of milk. While plain yogurt is a good, low calorie substitute for sour cream in recipes, any yogurt is simply a milk that you eat with a spoon and like milk, is NOT a complete meal.

Q: The recent Nutrition Canada survey found that many Canadians were undernourished. Were these people only those with low incomes?

A: No, the malnutrition found among Canadians existed at all income levels. It does not necessarily cost more money to eat properly. Food plans prepared by B.C. Nutritionists show that a family of five (including children 6, 9 and 12 years old) can be fed for about $7.00 per day. The Daily Food Guide provides a valuable guide for proper daily meal planning. This Food Guide can be obtained free, on request from your local Health Unit.

Q: Rose hips are advertised as "nature's richest and most concentrated source of Vitamin C". Should I buy them in preference to citrus fruit juices?

A: Rose hips are the seed pods of roses. In their natural state, they are an excellent source of Vitamin C, but so are citrus fruits and their juices, vitaminized apple juice and broccoli. Buying rose hips for Vitamin C is uneconomical. If you can pick your own rose hips and make your own rose hip syrup, it will provide interest in your family's diet.

Q: Does raw milk provide more nutrients for my money than pasteurized milk?

A: Raw milk, which is unpasteurized milk, is not recommended even if its price is low. It does not provide more nutrients than pasteurized milk. We rely on milk to provide protein, calcium, riboflavin and vitamin A and the pasteurization of milk does not affect these nutrients. On the other hand, pasteurization destroys the disease producing bacteria in milk increasing its value as a safe, wholesome food. Those who drink raw milk run unnecessary risks to their health.

Q: When I read the labels of a food product the quantity of each ingredient is rarely listed. Is there any way of knowing the amounts of the various ingredients in the food I buy?

A: Food ingredients are listed on labels in order of quantity — the largest ingredient being listed first. However, the exact proportion of ingredients is unfortunately not often noted.

Q: What is Brewer's yeast?

A: Brewer's yeast or nutritional yeast is a nonleavening yeast grown for human consumption containing protein and B vitamins. It comes in powder, flake and pill form. The powder is more concentrated and it can be added in small amounts to breads, soups, stews and meatloaves. It should be stored in a tightly covered jar away from light. Don't confuse Brewer's yeast with baking yeast. Baking yeast is a live substance that may continue to grow in the intestines with deleterious results if it is eaten raw.

(Prepared by the Nutrition Service B.C. Health Department.)

Egg Protein Meat Substitute

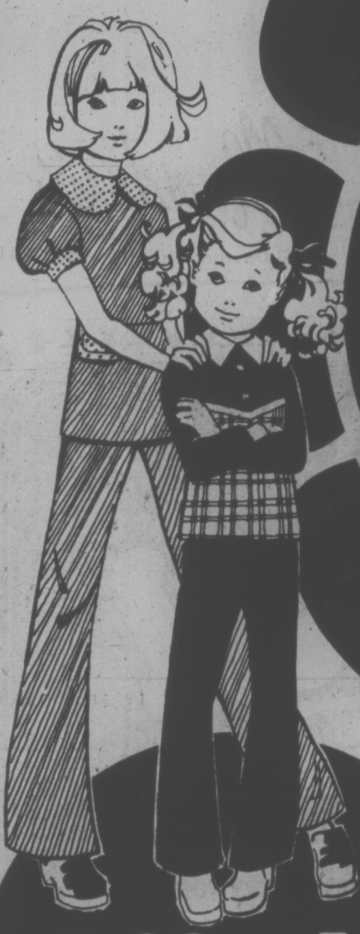

Two protein-rich eggs can replace a small serving of meat at a lesser cost. A dozen Grade A large eggs weigh one and a half pounds and can give you six servings. Eggs are the ideal food, nutritious, flavorful, quick to prepare and easy to serve. They're great for luncheon ideas — Spanish omelet, egg burger, fried egg sandwich or salad with hard-cooked eggs. From Food Advisory Services, Agriculture Canada, comes an Economy Egg Casserole. This dish made of layers of hard-cooked eggs and cheese sauce needs only French bread and a green salad or vegetable as an accompaniement.

ECONOMY EGG CASSEROLE

¼ cup chopped onion,
2 tablespoons fat,
6 tablespoons flour,
Dash pepper,
½ teaspoon dry mustard,
2-3 cup skim milk powder,
2 cups water,
1 cup (4 ounces) grated cheddar cheese,
8 hard-cooked eggs, sliced,
1 cup dry bread crumbs,
2 tablespoons melted margarine.

Saute onion in fat until onion's transparent. Blend in flour, seasonings and skim milk powder. Gradually add water. Stir and cook until smooth and thick. Add cheese and stir until melted. Spread 1-3 of sauce in greased baking dish. Cover with half the egg slices. Repeat layers ending with sauce. Mix crumbs and margarine and sprinkle over top. Bake at 350 degrees F until bubbly (about 20 minutes). 6 servings.

There's Much to Learn About Vitamin E Effects

By DR. JEAN MAYER

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Although vitamin E was discovered in the early twenties, not long after vitamin D, we still know much less about it than we know about the other fat-soluble vitamins, A, D, and K.

Deficiency of vitamin E is apparently very rare in man. And even when there is a deficiency, it does not seem to produce clear-cut signs, as in vitamin A deficiency (severe eye damage), or of vitamin D deficiency (bone deformation), or of vitamin K deficiency (internal bleeding).

The recommended daily allowance of vitamin E is 15 International Units a day. This amount can be provided by a good North American diet containing vegetable oils (or margarine containing a high proportion of the unsaturated oils), seeds, vegetables and fruits.

Daily doses well above this amount have been suggested for arteriosclerotic heart disease, other circulatory disorders, impotence, skin disorders, habitual spontaneous abortion, muscular dystrophy, even for prolonging life. At present, most nutritionists and clinicians remain unconvinced that doses of vitamin E are of any help in these conditions.

The effects of high doses of vitamin E are equally unclear. Like the other fat-soluble vitamins, it is stored in the body.

The latest suggestion of the possible effect of too much vitamin E comes from two California physicians, Dr. Harold M. Cohen and his partner in clinical practice, who put themselves and a number of their patients on a regimen of 800 IU of vitamin E a day. After about a week, Dr. Cohen experienced weakness and fatigue he first believed was the consequence of a severe attack of flu. He dropped the vitamin E medication, and the fatigue disappeared. When he had "recovered," he again began taking 800 IU a day; the weakness returned. Suspecting that his weakness and fatigue might be tied to the vitamin, he dropped the dosage, and the symptoms again disappeared. His colleague and the participating patients reported the same symptoms, which also stopped when they gave up the large dose of vitamin E. In the end, some of them, including Dr. Cohen, found that they could tolerate 400 Iu a day with "only minimal fatigue."

Dr Cohen adds that a number of their other patients who, on their own, took large amounts of vitamin E have also reported severe fatigue, unexplainable even after a thorough examination, that promptly disappeared when the vitamin E was withdrawn. As a result, Dr. Cohen classifies "hypervitaminosis E" as a cause of fatigue. In their young patients, they rank it second only to depression.

Dr. Michael Briggs, of Alfred Hospital in Melbourne, Australia, reports much the same thing in a carefully controlled study of a group of healthy young men given 800 IU of vitamin E a day and a matched group given only a placebo. Two of the men complained of severe fatigue and weakness after three weeks and asked to withdraw from the study. When the controlling code, indicating who was taking the vitamin and who was taking the placebo was broken, both young men were found to have been on the vitamin E.

Throughout the study, a number of biochemical tests were done. The only abnormalities, however, appeared in blood and urine tests from these two men, and in both, these indices returned to normal seven days after the vitamin E treatment was stopped.

From his studies, Dr. Briggs suggests that large doses of vitamin E may adversely effect the body substance creatine — which is an important component of muscle and essential to muscle contraction—and bring on the beginning of muscle damage.

In response to Dr. Cohen, on the other hand, Drs. Samuel Ayres and Richard Mihan of Los Angeles report that a number of their patients receiving doses of 400 to 1600 IU of vitamin E for skin, blood vessel, and muscle disorders, showed no symptoms of fatigue.

And so it goes. At this point, no definitive conclusion can be drawn beyond the wisdom of the advice given by the Food and Nutrition Board: "In view of the known toxicity of other fat-soluble vitamins (A and D), caution is indicated whenever consumption of large doses of vitamin E for long periods is encountered or contemplated."

Turkey Recipes to Woo Skeptics

Times Staff

"It's good for you."

How many times, as a child, did you have instant recoil against a food when you heard that phrase?

I had that same familiar feeling when home economist Kathie Jupp began lauding the virtues of turkey on behalf of the B.C. Turkey Marketing Board.

I knew she was right when she said turkey was cheaper, lower in calories and higher in iron than beef.

But having eaten turkey for seven solid days during the last big holiday season, I really wasn't prepared to go that same route again at Easter.

I began to take more interest when showed me her recipe for half a roasted turkey, suggesting the other half be put in the freezer until the family felt it was turkey time again.

The interest grew when she produced two packages of turkey sausages and a frozen turkey roast — two new products which won't be on the market for a year.

The sausage have an unmistakable turkey flavor but are quite palatable.

Kathie finally sold me the idea of turkey for Easter when, along with the half turkey recipe, she produced two more — one for Turkey Shrimp Oriental and Turkey Curry.

The sale was complete when she handed me a cook book, complete with recipes for such delicacies as sweet and sour pineapple turkey and turkey custard loaf.

If this piques your culinary curiosity as much as it does mine you can get a book for free by writing the marketing board at P.O. Box 1189, Station A, Surrey, B.C.

TURKEY SHRIMP ORIENTAL

2 tbsp. cooking oil
2 cups cubed, cooked turkey
1 5-oz. can shrimp
3 tbsp. brown sugar
2 tbsp. cornstarch
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. Accent
1 cup pineapple juice
3 tbsp. vinegar
2 tsp. soya sauce
2 tbsp. cooking oil
¾ cup sliced mushrooms
1-3 cup green onions (1½-inch pieces).
1-3 Cup sliced celery
1-3 cup sliced green pepper
1½ cup pineapple chunks

In a large skillet over medium heat saute turkey and shrimp in oil. Keep warm over low heat. Blend brown sugar, cornstarch, salt and Accent in saucepan; gradually stir in pineapple juice, vinegar and soy sauce. Cook, stirring constantly, over medium heat until sauce thickens and boils one minute. Pour over turkey and shrimp. In another frying pan in 2 tbsp. oil saute mushrooms, onions, celery, green pepper until soft. Add to turkey-shrimp mixture. Add pineapple chunks and heat through. Serve over hot rice.

Yield: 6 servings.

TURKEY CURRY

¼ cup butter
2 cups diced celery
1 cup chopped onion
¼ cup flour
2 tsp. salt
2 cubes bouillon
1 tbsp. curry powder
4 cups milk
1 cup sliced ripe olives
4 cups diced cooked turkey

In a large skillet over medium heat melt butter and cook celery and onion until soft. Stir in flour, salt, bouillon and curry powder. Heat and stir until well blended. Slowly stir in milk until thickened. Add olives and turkey and heat through, stirring occasionally.

Yield: 6 to 8 servings.

How to Avoid Panic: Cook Persian

CRAIG CLAIBORNE

To listen to Jennifer Manocherian tell it, Persian cooking is the ultimate answer to that consummate question, how to cook for company, turn off the heat and greet the guests, anxiety-free, nonchalant, insouciant and full of the assurance that the food with only a touch of heat will be ready to serve an hour, two hours or an even more protracted time later.

Mrs. Manocherian, who cooks three meals a day for her family of six including herself, contends that Iranian food is the easiest food in the world to cook.

"In North America, if someone drops by at the last moment, it's panic time. You know there is only food for four or however many guests are on hand — four lamb chops, four Idahos and so on. In Iran, you always add a little more meat or a few more vegetables to the pot and there's enough for everyone." The innate thing about Persian cooking is that all cooked foods — roasts or whatever — are served well done.

Mrs. Manocherian has a rather solid background in cooking. Born Jennifer Robbins, she is the daughter of Ann Roe Robbins, who for many years directed one of the best cooking schools in Manhattan, until it closed in 1971.

Mrs. Robbins gave her lessons and the family lived in one of the oldest apartment buildings in Manhattan. It was in that building that Miss Robbins met her Iranian husband, Fraydun (better known as Fred) Manocherian, a real estate executive, who also lived there.

Mancherian, who had been born in Teheran, came to this country in 1946 when he was 14 years old and came from a family where fine food was a tradition. His mother excelled at Persian cookery.

"Fred and I spent one summer there. Only one unfortunately," Mrs. Manocherian said. "Flying makes me nervous. Fred's mother taught me everything I know, just as she taught all of her daughters-in-law."

One of the many fine recipes sampled recently in the young woman's home (the Manocherian children range in age from 1 year to 15) was an excellent roast lamb with yogurt, the meat having been marinated for many hours in yogurt with seasonings. There was, in addition; a fine Persian "omelet" made with eggs and spinach and known as coocoo and an admirable eggplant and yogurt appetizer, improved with the addition of fried onions before serving.

Mrs. Manocherian has edited a spiral bound 130-page and very interesting cookbook called "The Betty Quaker Cookbook," which contains many of her own recipes.

A PERSIAN SPINACH "OMELET"

Two 10-ounce packages frozen chopped spinach
½ cup finely chopped onion (1 large onion)
1 cup finely chopped fresh leeks (1 large or 2 small bunches) or green onions.
1½ cups finely chopped parsley.
10 tablespoons butter.
8 eggs.
Salt to taste.
2 tablespoons peanut, vegetable or corn oil.
1 cup yogurt.

1. Let the spinach stand at room temperature until thoroughly defrosted.

2. Combine the spinach, onion, leeks or green onions and parsley.

3. Melt eight tablespoons of butter in a large, heavy skillet and add the vegetable mixture. Cook over medium heat, stirring often, until thoroughly cooked, about half an hour. The vegetables will become dark green. Remove from the heat and cool.

4. Beat the eggs in a large mixing bowl and add the vegetable mixture. Add salt to taste.

5. Melt the remaining butter and the oil in the large, heavy skillet and pour in the egg mixture. Cover and cook over medium heat until the egg is set and the bottom is nicely browned, 20 to 30 minutes. To test the bottom, lift the edge of the "omelet" up gently with a spatula.

6. Cut the "omelet" into quarters with a sharp knife and turn over each quarter in the skillet to brown the other side. Brown the second side without covering. Serve warm cut in wedges like a pie with yogurt on the side.

Yield: Eight servings.

EGGPLANT AND YOGURT APPETIZER (Masto Khiar)

1 eggplant, about one pound.
1 teaspoon finely minced onion.
1 teaspoon lemon juice or more to taste.
1 cup plain yogurt.
Salt to taste.
3 tablespoons butter.
1 large onion, cut into thin, lengthwise slices, about two cups.
Middle-Eastern bread or French bread.

1. Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Place the eggplant on a sheet of aluminum foil in the oven and bake about one hour or until the vegetable is thoroughly tender inside and the skin almost collapsed. Let cool.

2. Cut the eggplant in half and scrape the insides into a mixing bowl. Discard the skin. Mash the flesh with a fork and add the minced onion, lemon juice, yogurt and salt. Blend well and chill.

3. When ready to serve, heat the butter in a skillet and add the onion slices and cook, stirring often, until soft and nicely browned. Spoon the onions over the eggplant dip. Serve with bread.

Yield: Eight to 12 servings.

LEG OF LAMB PERSIAN-STYLE

1 6-to-7-pound leg of lamb.
1 cup yogurt.
¼ cup olive oil.
½ cup grated onion
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste.

1. Place the lamb in a large plastic bag and add the yogurt, olive oil, onion, salt and pepper. Seal tightly and, using the hands, manoeuvre the marinade all over the meat. Refrigerate overnight or leave at room temperature for several hours. Leave the lamb in the bag but turn it occasionally to redistribute the marinade.

2. Preheat the oven to 500 degrees.

3. Remove the lamb from the bag and place it in a roasting pan large enough to hold it amply. Pour and squeeze the marinade over the meat and bake, uncovered, until the meat is very brown on top, 30 to 40 minutes. As the meat bakes add half a cup or so of water to the roasting pan to prevent sticking. There should be about ⅛ to ¼ inch of liquid on the bottom of the pan at all times. When the meat is brown on top, turn it and bake about 15 minutes on that side. Cover tightly with the lid and reduce the heat to 375 degrees. Bake from one to one and one-half hours or until almost fork tender. Serve with the natural pan juices, skimmed of most of the fat.

Yield: Eight to 12 servings.

dear abby

Oedipus, of Sorts

DEAR ABBY: Please don't think I'm crazy, but I'm in love with my son-in-law. Lenny is 22, and he's in love with me. (I'm 37.)

It all started when I went to stay at my daughter's house while she was at the hospital having a baby. (She has one child, a year old.)

I don't know how it happened, Abby, but all at once Lenny hugged me, and before I knew it, I was in his arms and we were kissing like a couple of teenagers. I've never been so thrilled in all my life. We went the limit, and now I don't think I can live without him. Lenny says he feels the same way about me. He says the difference in our ages doesn't mean a thing to him. Me either. In fact this 22-year-old kid is more of a man than my husband, who is 42.

I would be willing to go anywhere in the world with Lenny, but I don't want to hurt my daughter. Also I have a husband and five other kids at home. Please give me some advice, but don't tell me to give up Lenny. I'm too far gone on him. — Seeing Stars.

DEAR SEEING: You had better quit star-gazing and get back to earth. Your daughter and her children need Lenny. And you have a husband and five children who need you. It may have been a thrilling, new, physical experience, but it's not the kind of stuff of which lasting marriages are made. Cool it, Mom.

DEAR ABBY: Two months ago, I got full custody of my four-year-old son. His mother gave him up because her social life was more important.

When I got custody, it was understood that all visitation rights would go to my ex-wife's parents, since she didn't care if she ever saw the boy again. NOW she says maybe she will see him next month, or in six months from how — she isn't "sure."

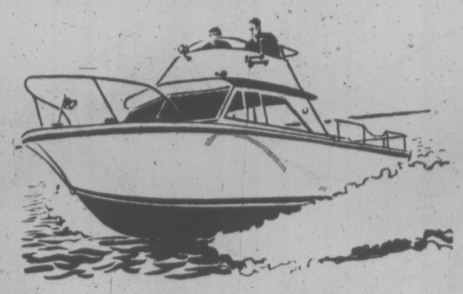

I called her yesterday to ask if my present wife could adopt the boy. She said she would never consent to that because she didn't want to give up her "motherhood." Now, if you can make any sense out of that, you're a lot smarter than I think you are, and I think you're pretty smart.

The boy has fully accepted my wife as his "mommy" and dosn't miss his former mother at all, mainly because he hardly ever saw here.

I've talked to a lawyer about this and he said he didn't think my wife could adopt the boy without my ex's consent but he didn't know much about it because he had never handled a case like that before. Can you help us? — Puzzled.

DEAR PUZZLED: I am not qualified to give legal advice, and from what you tell me, neither is your lawyer. Get another lawyer, and let him advise you.

Add Intrigue To Meat Balls

Almost every country has a favorite meat ball dish, and a special knack for making and serving them. Those made with ground beef are a great way to obtain protein, iron and some of the B vitamins. By adding a different spice, or serving them with a different sauce you inject some intrigue.

Be prepared to spend a little time shaping the meat balls. To facilitate your task try one of these methods.

Pat uncooked ground beef into a rectangle about one-inch thick. Then cut into squares of the desired size, using a knife. Roll the meat portion between your hands.

Use a small scoop to measure meat, then form into meat balls.

Roll ground beef into a long cylinder shape, reminiscent of refrigerator cookie dough, cut and form into meat balls. Vary the size of the meat balls according to their use. One and one-half inch meat balls are considered "man-size," while smaller one-inch balls are preferred on toothpicks for appetizers.

Take the utmost care in cleanliness when working with ground beef to limit possible contamination. Wipe the counter carefully, use clean utensils and wash your hands.

It is a good idea to prepare a second batch of meat balls immediately after the first using the same dishes. These can be frozen for later. Recommended storage times are 2 to 3 months for those made with raw meat, 1 to 2 months for those that are cooked before freezing.

Freeze meat balls quickly. Place them in a single layer on a cookie sheet until frozen then transfer to a plastic bag, tie and return to freezer. If you prepare a large quantity, use several bags. Indicate the quantity contained in each and the date of freezing. Remove the required number of meat balls as needed and heat them frozen or thawed depending on time available.

RAISES GIVEN TO CRITICS

REGINA (CP) — The Saskatchewan government is feeding the hand that bites it.

In separate bills presented to the legislature Monday, the government moved to raise the salaries of provincial auditor W. G. Lutz, who issues annual reports on wasteful or illegal expenditures, and ombudsman Ernest Boychuk, who investigates cases of alleged unfair treatment of individuals by civil servants.

The auditor's salary is to rise to $28,992 from $26,598 and the ombudsman's to $29,975 from $27,500. Each will also get a $420 annual cost-of-living increase.

Alta. NDP Health Care Proposal

FAIRVIEW, Alta. (CP) — A six-point comprehensive health-care package for Albertans has been unveiled by New Democratic Party leader Grant Notley.

The program, to be implemented if the NDP forms the government in the March 26 provincial election, would overcome the progressive conservative government's "lack of concern about the health needs of Albertans," Notley said.

"If there is one area of neglect that the Tories can be severely criticized for it is health care. We've had the rhetoric and token gestures over tha last 46 months but never anything that approaches a commitment to upgrade all health care facilities and services in this province."

The NDP calls for a universal dental care system, expansion of health care services including "pharmicare," premium-free coverage financed through oil revenues and income tax, decentralization of services including incentives to get doctors into rural areas, no-cost medical services for the handicapped, and new emphasis in the mental-health field tied to after-care techniques rather than institutionalization.

The cost of pharmicare would be moderated by the bulk purchase of drugs by the Alberta government and the prescription of generic medications.

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba Government Employees' Association has asked for wage increases averaging 53 per cent, MGEA president William Ridgeway said.

The 12,000-member MGEA, whose current contract expires March 29, is seeking a one-year agreement. Ridgeway said the current average annual pay is between $9,600 and $9,900.

CALGARY (CP) — The Calgary Public School Board Tuesday adopted a report calling for sweeping changes in the university training of teachers.

The report, drafted by trustee Scott Saville and entitled "commitment to quality" included recommendations for:

Increased reading training for student teachers, screening of potential teachers before certification, a return to classrooms for one semester of education department professors every five years, and special training for student teachers who want to work with junior high school age students.

GRANDE PRAIRIE (CP) — Weaknesses in the Alberta cattle industry exist because of "ill-advised and poorly-conceived loan programs" by the Progressive Conservative government, Social Credit leader Werner Schmidt says.

He told about 200 persons at a rally for the March 26 provincial election that the government "indiscriminately granted credit to people who didn't know in some cases what they were getting into and now those kind of people have to be helped."

He said apartments provide more space for each dollar spent but officials have concluded social problems are more likely to arise in multi-family dwellings.

Philipino Rebels Helped By Saban

By H. D. S. GREENWAY
Washington Post

SANDAKAN, Sabah, Malaysia — The waterfront of this North Borneo port is crowded with small wooden boats putting in with fish and fruit from along the coast and rusty coastal steamers, flying flags-of-convenience, unloading the quay. Further out in the roads the great timber ships lie with their high derricks onloading logs that are towed downriver from the vast forests of the interior.

Like most towns in this part of the world, the populations largely Chinese. Sandakan, with its four-storey block buildings with laundry hanging out the windows, looks something like the older sections of Kowloon in Hong Kong. But there are Malays and Moslem Suluks here too, indistinguishable from their neighbors farther down the coast in Indonesian territory or from the Filipino nationals, who live just a few miles away in the islands of the Sulu Sea.

For centuries this has been a land of smugglers and pirates who came and went as they pleased regardless of frontiers or governments. A rich barter trade goes on between these islands, and racially, commercially and religiously they are united even though they are politically divided.

Thus is was inevitable that this remote part of Malaysia should have become involved with the revolt in the nearby Southern Philippines where a Moslem minority feels mistreated in a predominately Christian land.

This involvement has been encouraged by Sabah's chief minister, the 56-year-old Tun Mustapha Dato Haji Mustapha Bin Datu Harun — better known as Tun Mustapha or simply Tunan, honorary title bestowed by Malaysian kings. Mustapha is a fierce-Moslem loyalist — his enemies call him a fanatic — and he welcomed his Moslem brothers fleeing from Catholic persecution with open arms.

Nearly 40,000 refugees have come across the Sulu Sea, according to local estimates, and up until last year Mustapha was paying them a subsidy of $1.70 a day — more than a local laborer earns. Local officials began to suspect that their Filipino brothers were coming to Sabah more to get on the gravy train than because of religious persecution and the subsidy was cut off.

Although the Malaysian government denies it, it is an open secret here the Mustapha is helping the rebels with money and equipment as well.

As infuriating as this is to the Philippine government, Malaysians have not forgotten that a little more than six years ago the Filipinos were training guerrillas to infiltrate into Sabah. In those days President Ferdinand E. Marcos was pressing an old Philippine claim to Sabah based on the fact Sabah and the southern Philippines were once united under the Sultan of Sulu. Marcos has never withdrawn his claim, although he is to busy now with revolt in his own country to stir up trouble for Malaysia.

There is no overt evidence of gun-running to be seen here. But knowledgeable sources say it is not done through the major ports but in coves and rivers along the coast where ships can unload their cargos, without being seen, onto the fast smugglers' boats that make the time-honored clandestine run across the Sulu Sea.

Foreign shipping companies have made inquiries here about port facilities in coastal towns that are not ports at all — just remote native villages up navigable rivers.

Rebel leaders can use Sandakan as a safe rear area and, according to local Filipinos, they come across to hold conferences from time to time.

Throughout rural Malaysia, Tun Mustapha is known as the great converter and thousands of Sahahans have embraced Islam during the last few years. About 40 per cent of Sabah's 700,000 people are reported to be Moslems. Twenty-five per cent are Christians and the rest are animists, but Mustpha hopes to change all that.

These mass conversions have not been entirely voluntary in the sense that Mustapha makes it very clear that the ways to advancement and eduction are to be found through conversion.

And since Mustapha runs Sabah as a ruthless but benevolent dictator, thousands have chosen not to fight city hall. Mustapha has pointed out, with some justification, that in the colonial era when the Christian missionaries held so many of the keys to education, there was similar pressure on Muslems to convert to Christianity.

Mustapha has gone in for a little religious persecution of his own and in the last few years dozens of Cathlic priests have been tossed out.

Inquiry Dazed, Dozing

By STUART LAKE

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Even the lawyers were in a fog Tuesday as engineering and soil experts explained to the Berger Inquiry how they propose to overcome problems of constructing a pipeline in the fragile Arctic.

Several spectators in the hotel ballroom where the hearings are being conducted appeared to have dozed off as six experts for Canadian Arctic Gas Pipelines Ltd. told how they plan to combat problems of permafrost, river crossing and slope stability.

The spell was broken by Ian Scott, chief counsel for the inquiry into the environmental, social and economic impacts the proposed natural gas pipeline will have on the Canadian North.

Mr. Scott said the Arctic Gas experts were using such technical language that only they — and Mr. Justice Thomas Berger — knew what they were saying.

Mr. Scott, a Toronto lawyer, said Arctic Gas lawyer Pierre Genest, also of Toronto, had a duty to produce evidence that people could understand.

Mr. Scott said that even Mr. Genest admitted he could not follow all of the answers of the engineering panel.

"If it is impossible to make it comprehensible, it seems to me it is pointless to adduce it," Mr. Scott said.

Mr. Genest said that while he had a duty to put forward "an understandable case," the problems being spoken to were scientific ones.

He said that if none of the scientific issues were in controversy, it seemed good enough to put them in scientific terms. If the issues were not agreed upon, then the commission had available experts to test them.

Judge Berger said he wanted every party giving evidence before him to put it as clearly as possible.

At the request of Judge Berger, the CBC has hired a staff of five native-language broadcasters who file daily reports on the inquiry.

Judge Berger said that if the broadcasters are to inform their listeners in the Mackenzie Valley about the issues, "this material should be understood by the broadcasters."

"It seems to me as a general rule in life, that anyone who really knows what he is talking about can make himself understood in words of one syllable."

Meanwhile, confidential minutes of meetings between pipeline and federal government officials dealing with pipeline routes were made available to the inquiry Tuesday.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Rather than the $75 fine for possession of marijuana first-time offenders usually receive, Judge William Ostler gave a 17-year-old a suspended sentence, placed him on six months probation and ordered him to perform 40 hours community service work.

Tim Cucksey, 1133 Fort, pleaded guilty March 4.

Prosecutor Jim McLellan recommended a stiffer sentence for Cucksey, already on probation for causing a disturbance while drunk. McLellan said the marijuana charge is Cucksey's second offence since he was placed on probation last Dec. The other offence is a conviction for mischief Jan. 15.

A 30-year-old man didn't have much of a birthday Monday — he went shopping at Simpson Sears and ended up being arrested on a shoplifting charge.

John Patrick Wannewmacher, of RR 6 Finlayson Arm Road, pleaded guilty to stealing a pair of pliers worth $6.49.

He said he had gone to the store to buy himself a soldering iron, but remembering he had lost a pair of pliers several months ago, he picked up another pair and placed it in his pocket.

He was fined $200.

Clifford Pettman, 30, of 6931 Sooke Road, and Donald Charles McCrae, 22, of no fixed address, were each fined $400 and given licence suspensions after pleading guilty to impaired driving.

Prosecutor Clarence Vause recommended that extra time be given for payment of McCrae's fine as he was already serving a one-year jail term levied last December for robbery with violence.

McCrae said his December sentence was not for robbery with violence but for assault with intent to rob; nonetheless, he said he would like extra time to pay the fine.

Ostler allowed McCrae nine months to pay.

BRIDLE BITS

By PHIL MERRICK

In this area, there seems to be few people owning grade mares who are having them bred and producing half-bred foals.

This is all to the good and will result in a definite improvement in the standard of the riding horse in B.C., should the trend be province-wide. Without doubt, economics is keeping down the numberof cross-bred foals being born. Half-bred yearlings and two year olds often can be purchased for little more than the stud-fee paid for its father's services.

Breeders of purebred riding horses — Arabians, Quarter-horses, Morgans, Thoroughbreds and others — each produce some foals, yearlings and two year olds which do not come up to the high standards of their breeding proprogram.

These are culled out, the colts gelded and the fillies sold without registration papers. Because the breeders must move out these animals they can be purchased for much less than it cost to produce them. This is the main source of supply of our riding horses to date.

Although they are not good representatives of their breed, these animals are very suitable as riding horses and there are a number of instances of such horses becoming top performers in the show ring. Each year, approximately 200 thoroughbreds become riding horses, many of them show horses in B.C. because they do not have what it takes to be race horses.

Ironically, there are a great number of horses whose racing value was less than $3,000 or $4,000 but they became worth 10 times that much and more as show horses.

The Sooke Saddle Club's recent "Fun Day" drew nearly 20 entrants to compete for the prize ribbons. Heather Anderson picked up six ribbons, Randy Ruttan, seven, but Elenore Bryant with a total of eight awards was the high-score winner for the day. Ten events were offered each with a junior and senior section.

Nylon webbing is being used to replace leather in the manufacturer of halters, bridles and other pieces of saddlery and harness. The advantages of this material are many. Durability, strength, easily cleaned and eye appeal are the principal attributes of this material. As in every thing else there are disadvantages. Everyone who has spent time around horses, or cattle for that matter, must have witnessed an incident when the coming apart or breaking of a piece of tack under severe and extreme stress has prevented a serious accident or injury to an animal.

Recently in a racing stable it was noted all the animals were wearing new leather halters and when the fact was mentioned to those in charge the reason was forthcoming. A filly somehow got a halter ring hooked on the door latch on the outside of her stall door. It was at a time when no one was around and by the time someone returned the filly in her struggle to get free had literally cut her own throat and bled to death before anything could be done for her. The nylon web halter did not break as a leather one would have done under similar circumstances. As we said "Advantages and disadvantages."

The purchase of a horse usually means the purchase of a saddle and that is the correct order in which the purchases should be made. Once the horse is selected then a saddle to fit that particular horse should be obtained. It is not the size of the horse that determines the size of the saddle, rather the size of the saddle is decided by the size of the rider. It is the build of the horses' shoulder and back that demands the saddle to fit them.

Saddles both of the English and Western types are made in about four different widths or fittings. The saddle placed upon the back of a high-withered narrow horse that is a wide fitting one would press down on the wither or back bone and in a few minutes of riding would create a sore back. Reverse this and put a narrow saddle on a wide horse and the saddle, however tightly girthed would not stay in place.

Placing foam rubber or blankets under an ill-fitting saddle is only a makeshift remedy similar to wearing two pair of socks to make boots fit. It is much better to have a correctly fitting piece of equipment. The statement "This saddle will fit any horse" is just as untrue as if it were applied to a pair of boots as this, "This pair of boots will fit everyones feet."

U.K. Labor Splits on EEC Membership

LONDON (Reuter) — Six government ministers joined the campaign Tuesday night to pull Britain out of the Common Market only hours after a cabinet majority recommended that the British people support continued membership in the European Economic Community (EEC).

The recommendation for the referendum in June, the first national plebiscite in British history, followed two days of ministerial discussions.

Prime Minister Harold Wilson permitted both pro- and anti-market ministers of his labor party to campaign according to their convictions. He advocates continued membership.

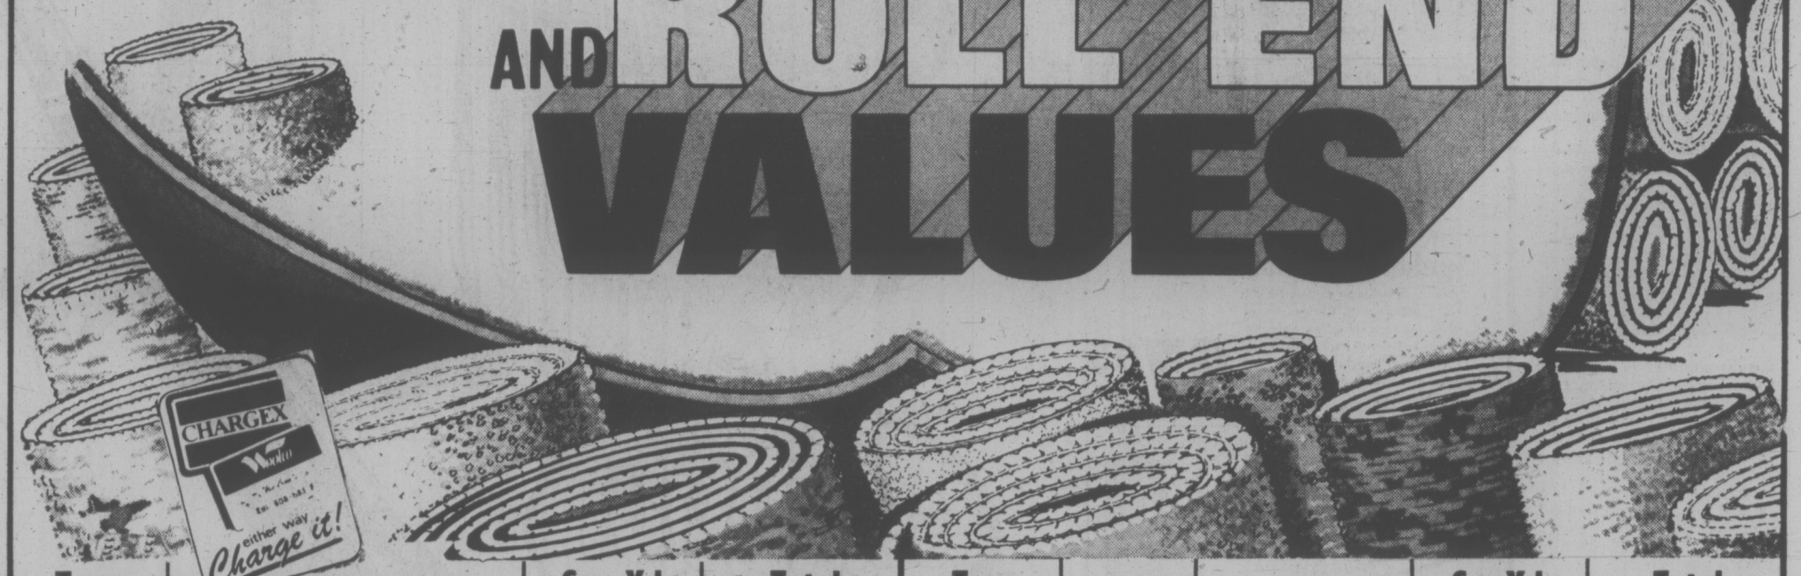

No formal vote was taken Tuesday, but the British cabinet was reported to have been split 16-6 in favor of continued membership.

Within hours of Wilson's statement in Parliament, six ministers announced they are joining the campaign for withdrawal. They are industry Minister Tony Benn, Trade Minister Peter Shore, Social Services Minister Barbara Castle, Employment Minister Michael Foot, and John Silkin, minister of planning and local government.

The announcement was also signed by the minister for overseas development, Judith Hart.

Butterfly Nets First U.S. Arms

NEW YORK (AP) — Armed only with butterfly nets and posing as naturalists, the first Americans assigned to South Vietnam's central highlands in the early 1960s were Special Forces soldiers working for the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA).

Their mission: Win to the Saigon government side the nearly one million hill tribesmen, Montagnards, who farmed the rolling plateaus.

The news that the Saigon government would give up the provinces of Kontum, Pleiku and Darlac was evidence that the highlands strategy was doomed to failure.

The "naturalists" were first seen around the coffee shops of Ban Me Thuot — considered the Montagnard capital — early in 1962 when the United States advisory force in Vietnam was only a few thousand men.

Outside town, the Americans trained volunteers and then led them into battle in their thousands against the Viet Cong and the North Vietnamese.

The first Special Forces camp at Boun Enau, about seven miles outside Ban Me Thuot became the model for scores of others erected the length of South Vietnam's borders. Many were finally overrun in the 1972 North Vietnamese offensive, some in recent weeks.

For years, U.S. strategists saw the central highlands as the key to the Vietnam war, a region to engage the enemy in set-piece battles. An integral part of this strategy was the allegiance of the hill tribesmen, firstly to deprive the Communists of their services, secondly to use them as guerrillas.

Thousands were recruited as mercenaries and paid by civilian CIA operatives.

By the mid-1960s, a majority of the tribesmen were on the U.S. side. But their allegiance was to the Americans who led and paid them, and not to the Vietnamese who seemed to despise their primitiveness.

When the Americans turned the network of camps over to the South Vietnamese, the esprit de corps that characterized the tribesmen's relations with the 12-man Special Forces teams quickly dissipated.

Unwillingness of the tribesmen to fight is reported to have undermined government defences in Phuoc Long province, lost to the Communists in January.

And there have been reports that the Montagnards and the Viet Cong worked together in the first attack last week against the central highlands city of Ban Me Thout, now abandoned by the Saigon government.

The tribesmen were reported to have been unhappy because South Vietnamese officials took their land, livestock and government aid.

RAPE TALES SOUGHT

TORONTO (CP) — A city film company is looking for women with stories to tell about rape attacks.

Metropolitan Toronto police reported 223 rape cases in 1973, an increase of 76 per cent since 1968.

And Diane Silverman, 28, a researcher for Summerhill Productions, said 75 per cent of such cases go unreported.

Her firm is preparing to film a 40-minute documentary on rape for sale to universities, professional groups and police departments to train officers in how to handle both offender and victim.

She said the number of unreported cases is a contributing factor in the lack of knowledge on the subject.

"Why don't the victims come forward? Is it through shame, guilt, fear or all three? This is what we want to find out. Rape continues to be fostered by silence."

She said those who provide personal information about sex crimes are guaranteed anonymity.

Professional actors will portray rape situations as well as what happens after to both victim and rapist. Psychiatric and sociological experts will provide on-camera opinions.

Ian Stuart, 33, the film director and screen writer, said he expects the $28,000 documentary to shatter a lot of myths and put forward a case for a change in the current law that allows a woman to be grilled about her past life.

Rape will be portrayed primarily as an outlet for aggression rather than sexual fulfilment. Mr. Stuart said he hopes the film will prompt victims not to be ashamed of resisting the rapist's intimidation.

He said research so far indicates the average rapist is Mr. Nice Guy, not a psychopath, and that his perverse sexual attitudes were gained at an early age.

Tempers Flare Over Levi's $200

Victoria Times
WEDNESDAY, MARCH 19, 1975 45
FOURTH SECTION

An angry exchange between Premier Barrett and the opposition erupted in the legislature Tuesday night as government critics pressed their demand for a full inquiry into Resources Minister Levi's acceptance of a $200 political donation.

Liberal MLA Pat McGeer said Barrett is forcing the public to believe his government has something to hide by remaining mum on the subject.

He accused Levi of gross impropriety for accepting the cheque when there is no question about the motive for issuing it.

Earlier in the evening Saanich Socred MLA Hugh Curtis stood to introduce "new evidence". He tabled a copy of a sworn affidavit signed by Joe E. Hargitt, a former social work client of Levi's, who issued the cheque.

The document was a letter from Hargitt in which he admitted sending Levi the cheque becuase the minister "might be useful in future."

Curtis said he introduced the letter — signed by a notary public and sent to Gary Bannerman, the Vancouver broadcaster who first made the transaction public — because the premier had appealed for new information.

But Barrett dismissed the document as "containing nothing new".

Barrett said Curtis was continuing his smear campaign against Levi without the will to back up statements with a formal charge. "You're just throwing sleazy mud."

Curtis refused to comment outside the house.

The premier remained silent during McGeer's attack.

"Certainly," said the member from Vancouver-Point Grey, "any member that is unwise enough to accept a campaign donation made out to himself is guilty, to put it in the kindest of terms, of gross negligence."

The appropriate thing would have been to return it, said McGeer. "You just don't accept it. There's no proper excuse for doing it."

"It's the premier's job to hire and fire ministers . . . to enforce high standards, and he's shown himself lacking.

"Unless the premier demands to know how many more indiscretions there are by cabinet ministers, we will not know how many other ministers are holding the club of embarrassment over the government."

At another point in the heated exchange, Barrett called Liberal Leader David Anderson "an insufferable snob".

The premier later withdrew the remark, with the explanation it was an emotional response to the MLA's questions about the $200 cheque.

It was despicable, said Barrett, for the Liberal to purposely mix up the terms "gift" and "campaign donation" in reference to the cheque which Levi deposited in his own personal account. Levi said he later disbursed the money in two cheques for $100 for use in the federal NDP campaign.

By innuendo, said the premier, Anderson was leaving the impression Levi had accepted a gift not a political donation.

Anderson said the money was a political donation only if Hargitt meant it to be so.

B.C. needs a set of rules to cover the acceptance of gifts by cabinet ministers, said Anderson, and a list of all gifts accepted so far by the ministers should be tabled in the house.

Barrett kept repeating he was satisfied with the explanation offered by Levi, that he had accepted the cheque and subsequently forwarded the funds to the NDP election campaign as a regular political donation.

But the opposition suggested the premier should have questioned the validity of Levi's explanation.

Socred Bob McClelland (Langley) said a number of questions about the cheques remain unanswered and he posed them to the house:

—Why were the two $100 cheques sent out nine days apart and from two different people (Levi and his wife Gloria)?

—Why was the second cheque to the Vancouver Centre federal NDP not endorsed and why did it not have a computer notation on the bottom to record the payment of funds?

McClelland also asked when the premier first learned about the incident, since, according to the Socred's information, Barrett's press secretary John Twigg learned about the incident a week before it was aired on a Vancouver hot-line show and at least a day before Levi discussed with the premier.

Barrett did not answer the question.

The Socred said hot-liner who disclosed the cheques should be asked to table in the legislature all the information he has on the incident.

Levi should be asked to resign in the meantime, he said.

Liberal Gordon Gibson (North Vancouver-Capilano) continued on the same theme as McClelland, saying the premier should make sure the cheque did go through the clearing procedures and therefore was deposited.

Barrett asked Gibson if he was satisfied the cheque had been deposited because of a "paid" stamp on the front of the cancelled cheque. But if other evidence is forthcoming, he said, he would look at it.

Barrett also led a counter-attack against the Socreds, saying Opposition Leader Bill Bennett should apologize on behalf of his research assistant, Arthur Weeks, who admitted "doctoring" copies of the cancelled cheques before distributing them to the press.

According to Weeks' explanation, he had a copy of the Hargitt cheque to Levi and he was attempting to decipher writing on the back.

He wrote over the account numbers to make them clearer and also wrote the words "payment any bank or banker."

The words, however, look more like "payment car bumper" and it caused some confusion in the press gallery when the matter was first raised in the legislature last week.

Gibson replied he did not want to make any allegations.

was saying it is possible Levi manufactured the cheque later.

B.C. SPEEDERS IRK CALIFORNIA

B.C. tourists are speeding when they visit the United States, according to reports forwarded to the RCMP.

Transport Minister Bob Strachan said Tuesday he is "dismayed" by complaints from the California Highway Patrol that B.C. citizens are exceeding the 55 mph speed limit.

An informal check by the patrol of people cited for breaking the speed limit in northern California showed that two-thirds were out-of-state drivers, primarily from B.C., Washington and Oregon, said Strachan.

The information was contained in a letter sent to the RCMP by Kent Milton, public affairs officer with the State Patrol, which suggested it was upsetting for tourists to receive a citation while on a long trip.

"The California Highway Patrol will continue to emphasize speed enfarcement, but obviously we would prefer to establish a high level of voluntary compliance if possible," said Milton.

Strachan said he was disappointed by the report and he urged British Columbians to be aware of the necessity of reducing speed limits in the U.S. as well as at home.

Rezoning Fog To Lift

Notices alerting residents about forthcoming public hearings on rezoning matters in the city of Victoria will be made easier to understand.

Members of the city zoning committee agreed Tuesday that the present form of notification, through mailed circular letters and newspaper advertisements, is bewildering rather than informative — despite the inclusion of little sketch maps showing the area affected.

Only the legal descriptions of the properties concerned and an explanation of the proposed change in zoning categories are set out in the notices, which give no indication what type or size of development is proposed for the site.

Commented committee chairman Ald. Mike Young: "I think the chief criticism of the present system is not that people don't know about the public hearings, but that they don't know what the heck the notices are all about."

Young said the city should consider preparing an explanatory "preamble" — perhaps as a separate insertion to accompany the routine newspaper ad. — which would provide clear basic information pertinent to the rezoning application.

But there are pitfalls in that approach, he warned: "If the preamble is too folksy and doesn't accurately describe the situation we might be accused of misleading the public."

The committee instructed city solicitor Jakob de Villiers to bring forward suggestions for a simpler form of notification.

It also recommended that mailed notices of rezonings should be distributed over a smaller area than at present.

The notification bylaw now requires that all residents living within 200 feet of the property proposed for rezoning should be warned of the public hearing. If the change is accepted by council, that requirement will be limited to a 70-foot radius.

Officials say the move is designed to save administrative time, effort and expanse, especially in the light of a recent B.C. Supreme Court ruling that even minor regulatory changes must be treated as "rezoning" matters — with appropriate notification to all concerned.

VOTE EXPENSE BILL OFFERED

Tory Leader Scott Wallace introduced a private member's bill Tuesday which would require disclosure of election campaign donations over $100.

Called the Election Expenses Act, the bill would set a $1,000 ceiling on donations in non-election years and $2,000 during an election year.

Donations to candidates or parties would be permitted only by individuals eligible to vote in provincial elections, and donations from corporations, unions, associations or societies would not be allowed.

Other points include:

—a mandatory annual audited statement of expenses by political parties including donations, filed with the clerk of the house.

a campaign spending limit of $16,500 per candidate and a $3,000 per candidate by the party.

—advertising would only be allowed where the cost is paid by the treasurer of a political party or an official agent of the candidate.

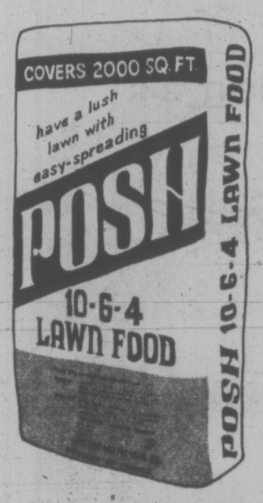

Wallace's suggested legislation — private members bills are seldom debated in the house — would impose a $10,000 fine for any breach of the individual. The act would be retroactive to March 18, 1975.

The Bridge Expert

In today's deal, our South declarer played his game contract in the hope that East was the possessor of a specific key card; and by playing the hand as he did, he failed to fulfill his contract. When the post-mortem analysis took place, it was revealed that South had made the mistake of putting all his eggs in one basket.

Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

Both sides vulnerable.
South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ◇.

After winning the opening lead with the diamond queen, South cashed the ace and king of diamonds, hoping that West had led from a three-card suit, and that the six adversely-held diamonds were divided 3-3. If such had been the set-up, dummy's fourth diamond would have become declarer's game-going trick. But this hope ended when East discarded a spade on the third diamond lead.

Declarer then turned his attention to the club suit, indulging in the 50-50 hope that East had been dealt the club king. He led the deuce of clubs to dummy's ace, after which he returned the club four, playing his queen on East's eight-spot. When West captured this lead with the king, all hope for declarer had vanished. At the conclusion of play, declarer had only the eight winning tricks with which he had started.

Declarer's play of the club suit was incorrect. After cashing his three top diamonds, he should have led a low club, and permitted West's nine to have captured the trick. When he regained the lead, he would next play another low club to dummy's ace. As is evident, he would have caught West's king. The queen of clubs would now have become declarer's game-going trick.

By playing the hand as recommended, declarer would make his ninth trick whenever West had been dealt the doubleton K-x of clubs. By adopting the line of play of giving away the initial club lead, declarer would be taking out insurance (at no cost) against West having been dealt the K-x of clubs. And if it turned out that East was the possessor of the club king, then the contract would still be made by taking the second club lead with dummy's ace and leading the dummy's remaining club. And even if West had the club king, the contract would bem ade if the adversely-held clubs were divided 3-3.

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"Bob's on Linden Drive," said Betty. "But what is their number?"

"You're always asking that," replied Steve. "Maybe this will help you remember. Multiply its two figures and then add each of them to what you get. That gives you a third of their number."

What was it?

Thanks for idea to S. Fenton, Hamilton, Ont.

Fertile Soil Key to Hydrangeas

The greatest difficulty in growing the many lovely kinds of hydrangeas in this area is the lack of deep fertile soil. It must be rich in humus (fibrous material), capable of holding moisture all through the growing season.

Some species of Hydrangeas begin swelling growth buds during February, which can be a minor disaster if wild pruning has already been done. In December, local gardeners begin asking "when do I cut down the hydrangeas?" The answer to that is, no hydrangea is ever "cut down" unless it has been killed to the ground by frost. In this case new growth may come from about ground level and in a couple of years will build up another shrub.

To get back to the growing conditions required by hydrangeas; linked with the needed moisture to be held in the root area is the fact that the moisture will contain nutrients in solution from the surrounding soil.

When we say that a plant requires plenty of water we sometimes overlook the fact that soil nutrients are required to be in that water. Hydrangeas are by their nature, quickly growing plants. All parts of the plant are generous in size — stems are, or should be, sturdy enough to support the large healthy green leaves and broad flower heads.

Although heights vary from one foot for some of the named varieties of the H. hortensis-macrophylla hybrids, to 10 feet for a well-grown H. paniculata variety and 50 feet for the climbing H. petiolaris, all require a soil capable of being kept damp throughout spring and summer.

During that period the splendid effects are produced on the new growth made from the beginning of the growing season.

The next requirement is suitable length of sunny hours for the hydrangea according to its species. Those referred to above as hybrids of H. hortensis-macrophylla (round headed, pink or blue globes) need around eight hours sunshine — the pink need a little more than the blue.

The woodland H. sargentiana (some beautiful specimens of this have been seen locally) thrives in leafy woodland, making 10-foot growth with its enormous hairy leaves and stems, and lilac and white flat flower-heads.

H. petiolaris makes its 5-foot growth with hundreds of smaller flat white flower heads when getting early morning sun only, while H. serrata and its varieties like shade from hot summer sun to produce its flat pink flower heads.

The common need is the deep rich soil damp at root level in summer to keep up continuous small supplies of food as required by the development above ground.

Pruning of hydrangeas consists of first cutting off all obviously dead wood. Then look for thin weak stems and remove these at their source.

When only healthy branches are left they will grow more strongly than when crowded with a lot of thin stems. Leaves and flowers will be larger, stems and branches will be stronger to carry the heavy heads of flowers.

Whatever kind of hydrangea you grow, give it the few essential needs and it will repay you in healthy growth.

WHAT DO PEOPLE WANT?

A young builder of good homes asked me. A different from the ordinary design and at a reasonable price, said I. Three bedrooms with two of them ensuite. A bright kitchen with an eating area, a dishwasher. Make a family room with a fireplace next to the kitchen. Build a dining room in it that is big enough to deserve the name. A living room with a white rock fireplace. A sun deck, a drive-in garage. On a good lot in Gordon Head. So, this dream, that started from a conversation and a scrap of paper, is now a reality, at a place where you can still have your choice of colours. $67,500.

Seek Forum For Labor, Management

VANCOUVER (CP) — The outgoing chairman of the Employer's council of B.C. told the council's annual meeting Tuesday that the management association should establish a forum where senior labor and management officials could meet.

R. H. Ansley, president of Commonwealth Construction Co. Ltd., said such a forum would allow for an urgently needed flow of thoughts and ideas between the two groups that have "many common concerns."

At the meeting, Ansley said the council will not support any political party but should encourage citizens to actively participate in the political process. He said the council is "committed to the philosophy of free enterprise" and must be a "positive, constructive counter-force if our society is to avoid destructive imbalances."

William Hudson, president of Burrard Dry Dock Co. Ltd. of North Vancouver, and Yarrows Ltd. of Victoria, was elected 1975 chairman at the meeting.

NOTICE O

250 Indians Seize Interior Land

QUESNEL (CP) — Two Indian bands have declared themselves sole owners of hundreds of square miles of land in central B.C. and have forbidden government and industry to enter the area without permission.

Two hundred and fifty members of the Nazko and Kluskus Indian bands said Tuesday that "unfortunate and unnecessary confrontations" will result if any unauthorized activity occurs in the region which begins about 50 miles west of this community 250 miles north of Vancouver.

The land involved is the watershed of the Blackwater and Nazko Rivers.

The bands have been opposing logging in the area since 1973 and last year blocked construction of a logging road. Resources minister Bob Williams ordered a three-month moratorium on further development while studies were made.

Indians said that since then, they have received "nothing but polite acknowledgements."

They said in a letter Tuesday that they are advising "all departmental field offices and all tourist information services that henceforth no outsiders, shall, without our permission, enter our country to hunt, harvest timber or otherwise deplete our resources until our legal rights are recognized by the appropriate authorities."

"Where such unauthorized activity is occuring, we suggest that it be stopped before it gives rise to unfortunate and unnecessary confrontations."

The letter said white residents would not be forced to leave the area but applications for hay, grazing or other uses "of what is mistakenly called crown land" are to be channelled through the Nazko band office.

Blocks in Mideast

JERUSALEM (UPI) — U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger says his Middle East peace mission is making progress but the Israeli-Egyptian talks are still blocked by "substantial areas of disagreement."

22-BED EXTENSION SOUGHT FOR COWICHAN HOSPITAL

DUNCAN — Regional board members here are seeking approval for a 22-bed extension Care Hospital.

They are awaiting authroization from Health Minister Dennis Cocke to borrow $316,000 for construction and equipment.

The provincial government and regional board will share $226,900 of that cost, and the rest will be paid by the board.

STUDENTS of Carl Hare's advanced acting program at UVic are presenting Strindberg's The Stronger under his direction at the on-campus Phoenix Theatre, Thursday through Saturday. In this scene Patrice Palmerino, left, and Ingrid Blekys confront each other over coffee. Also on the program will be an excerpt from James Reaney's Listen to the Wind. BCHEU Signs Aberdeen Staff

The B.C. Hospital Employees' Union has applied for certification as bargaining agent for employees of Aberdeen Hospital, purchased last week by the provincial government.

An HEU spokesman said the application, sent to the Labor Relations Board Tuesday, included a substantial majority of the 50 Aberdeen employees who come under the union's jurisdiction.

The hospital, at 1450 Hillside, was bought by the provincial government for $1.1 million from former owner Neil de Macedo. De Macedo had announced earlier that the hospital would close in June unless the provincial government took it over. Health Minister Dennis Cocke said the province had been negotiating for the hospital for nearly two years.

The LRB normally takes several weeks to confirm an application for certification.

Crash Kills City Man

A 30-year-old Victoria man was killed Sunday morning when a car in which he was a passenger left the road and hit a ditch one mile north of Duncan.

Douglas Lloyd Kuiper, 2927 Shakespeare, was pronounced dead on arrival at Cowichan District Hospital at 8:50 a.m. about an hour-and-a-half after the accident.

The driver of the car, Robert Wilfred Parent, 25, of 2979 Dysart, was not injured.

RCMP in Duncan said both men were returning from Courtenay where they had attended a hockey game.

Fungus Control Time

Gardeners have still time to control a fungus which attacks peach trees each year, Dr. H. J. O'Reilly, plant pathologist for the B.C. department of agriculture, said today.

He recommended the use of a fixed copper fungicide or lime sulphur sprays to control the disease known as peach leaf fungus.

The fungus attacks the leaves of the trees and reduces the tree's vigor.

"Control is generally recommended from the months of September through February but sprays may still be effective," he said.

Runoffs Checked

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Water Resources branch surveys indicate high spring runoff in the Kettle River and South Thompson watersheds with a possible record runoff year in the Okanagan Lake watershed.

The predictions are based upon March snow surveys at more than 270 mountain stations throughout the province which measured accumulations since November.

The branch forecasted average runoff for the Fraser, Thompson, Columbia and Kootenay rivers, with below average flow into Williston Lake on the Peace.

Camosun Selects Di Castri

Architect John De Castri has been chosen to work on plans for expansion of Camosun College's Lansdowne campus.

The college hopes to add about 223,000 square feet of space to ease its current overcrowding.

No construction can begin until negotiations by the provincial government for purchase of the campus from the University of Victoria are completed.

This long-delayed acquisition has not yet been made, Camoson College council chairman Dr. Harold Knight said today.

Education Minister Eileen Dailly has promised to provide $100 million over five years for capital expansion of community colleges.

BRITAIN CUTS DEFENCE BUDGET

Times News Services

LONDON — Financially-strapped Britain said today it will slash defence spending more than $11 billion in the next 10 years, but at the same time promised to help keep the North Atlantic Treaty organization strong.

An official white paper presented to Parliament said, however, the Soviet Union now dominates Europe, has achieved strategic nuclear parity with the United States and has become a naval superpower.

NATO officials in Brussels reponded with shock.

"The proposed cuts are pretty hard to swallow and will no doubt cause some damage to the alliance," one official said.

"It (NATO) feels that with a little bit of new resource allocations Britain could alleviate their impact, particularly in the Mediterranean area,"

Although the planned cuts mostly affect British forces in Asia, they also provide for withdrawal of British naval and air forces in the Mediterranean except from Malta and Cyprus.

The white paper said "the Soviet Union has achieved rough strategic nuclear parity with the United States" and "is developing an improved armory of strategic nuclear weapons."

"In addition, the Warsaw Pact faces the alliance with a marked superiority in manpower and conventional weapons," the white paper said.

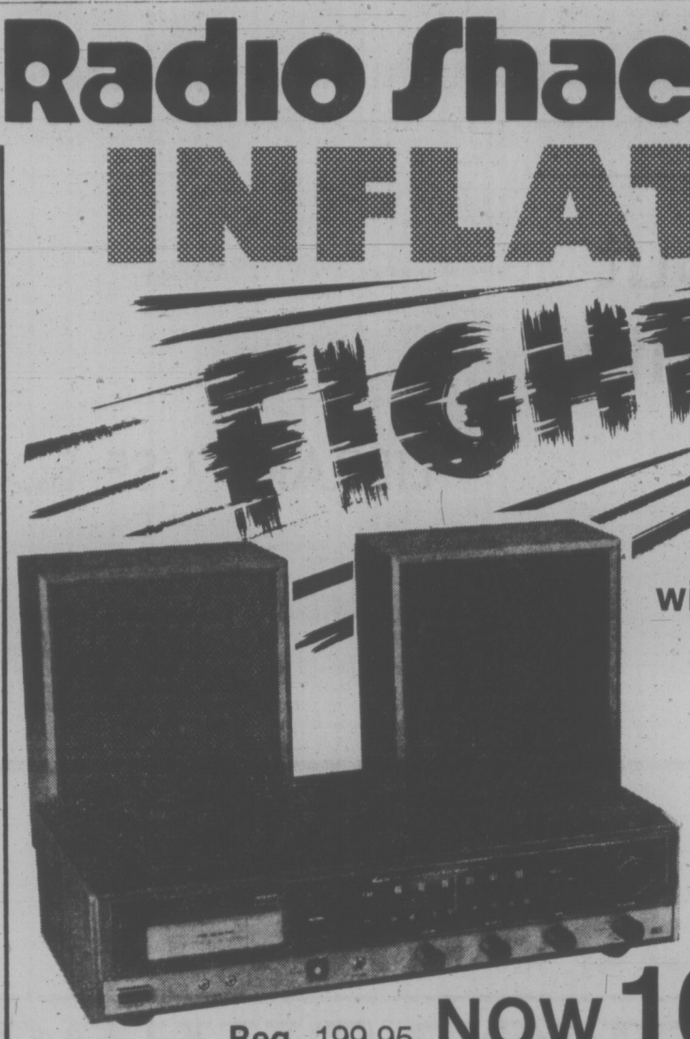

These include 2.5 times as many tanks, twice as many divisions, aircraft and field guns and 20 per cent more soldiers.

Ship Through Suez

TEL AVIV (Reuter) — A second Egyptian destroyer has steamed through the Suez canal, Israeli military sources said. The sources said the destroyer was similar to another which sailed through the canal in the opposite direction last week. United States, British, French and Soviet naval teams cleared most of the war debris from the waterway recently, but the canal has yet to be opened officially to international shipping.

A MESSAGE FROM OUR PRESIDENT

Because of the wide response to Radio Shack products in Canada our sales have increased 71% over the past year.

Despite rising material and labour costs Radio Shack DID NOT RAISE a single price in "Company" stores since issuing our 1975 catalogue in October. We have now decided NOT TO RAISE A PRICE at least through to June 1975 in these stores.

In addition we will continue our tradition of periodic PRICE REDUCTIONS to make Radio Shack products even more affordable.

ERITH SMITH DIES

Erith Smith, veteran Victoria newsman, died at Royal Jubilee Hospital Tuesday after a four-month battle with cancer. He was 64.

Smith had covered theatre, music and art for the Colonist in recent years but had also served as a desk editor and reporter on other beats since joining the morning paper in 1947.

He was also editor of the Islander, the paper's Sunday magazine, for a number of years.

Smith began his newspaper career after attending George Washington University in Washington, D.C. by joining his father who was the first Washington correspondent for Southam News Services. Together they covered the political scene and the younger Smith had his first reporting lessons sitting in the U.S. Senate press gallery.

He moved to the Winnipeg Tribune in 1933 when his father died. Later he edited a farm weekly.

Smith is survived by his wife, Joan, and four children, Charles, Marguerite, Ken and Valerie.

The funeral service will be Friday, at 1:00 p.m. at St. Matthias' Church, Richmond and Richardson.

Doctor Walkout Pressure Mounts

The escalating strike of interns and resident doctors at B.C.'s teaching hospitals will reach a critical point Thursday when more than 200 of them are scheduled to walk out at Vancouver General Hospital.

Meanwhile, spokesmen at Victoria's two general hospitals said today service remains uninterrupted since their 21 interns and one resident withdrew their services Tuesday.

The 310 members of the Professional Association of Residents and Interns in the province are seeking a new contract which would give them wage parity with their counterparts in Ontario.

They began walkouts at selected hospitals Monday, increased the number of hospitals to include Royal Jubilee and Victoria General Hospitals Tuesday and added Shaughnessy and St. Paul's on the Lower Mainland today.

But the real problem for hospitals arrives Thursday because of their numbers at Vancouver General. There was local speculation today that the interns may not go off the job there.

PARI spokesman Dr. Craig Beattie said the organization had not received any word from Health Minister Dennis Cocke or the B.C. Health Association, bargaining agent for the hospitals, since the walkoffs began Monday.

He called the health minister's lack of involvement irresponsible.

William Rolfe, a BCHA spokesman, said an impasse has been reached and no mechanism exists to solve the dispute with the interns and resident doctors.

Dr. Beattie has said all the doctors at all seven teaching hospitals in the Vancouver and Victoria areas will be off the job by Thursday if no settlement is reached.

PARI members have been without a contract for 2½ months and have agreed to accept binding arbitration but the BCHA has rejected the proposal.

Dr. Beattie said interns receive $8,000 annually and five-year residents $13,000 for working between 80 to 100 hours a week.

He said the same categories of doctors receive $12,500 a year to $16,750 in Ontario.

775 Blood Donors Sought

The local Red Cross is aiming for 775 donors at blood clinics to be held at the University of Victoria from today to Friday.

Tuesday's clinic at Red Cross House drew 135 donors after a clinic Monday produced 113. In each case the minimum target had been 125.

Clinics at the university will be held in the Student Union Building, from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. each day.

Nanaimo Man Poor

A Nanaimo man whose daughter was killed when the family car collided with a freight train Tuesday remains in poor condition at Royal Jubilee Hospital today.

Larrie Seeback, 36, suffered head injuries in the crash at a level crossing six miles north of Nanaimo.

A daughter, Robin, 7, was killed in the accident. A son, Darren, 8, is in serious condition at a Nanaimo hospital. A second son, Morgan, 4, had been released from hopsital.

The Seeback car was destroyed and pushed 300 yards down the track in the collision with a Canadian Pacific freight train at the crossing.

An inquest will be held but no date has been set.

Conflicts Claimed In Lakes' Usage

QUALICUM BEACH — Recreational use of lakes in the western part of the Nanaimo Regional District may soon be restricted.

A public meeting was held recently here in response to some residents' complaints that various uses were conflicting.

Three lakes in the area were the topic of the meeting — Cameron, Horne and Spider — and uses cited included swimming, fishing and motorboating.

The meeting was attended by the district parks and recreation director and the regional director of fish and wildlife, who noted suggestions to be taken to the board.

The audience generally agreed motorboats should be allowed on Cameron and Horne Lakes but not on Spider, which is shallower and smaller with many arms.

Suggestions discussed included the limiting of horsepower in certain places or at certain times of day.

The Nanaimo Regional District can make recommendations to the provincial government on lake-use restrictions, and those recommendations must go to the federal government which has the authority to regulate lake use.

Six Executed

ADDIS ABABA (UPI) — The military regime has executed six men, including a close friend of deposed emperor Haile Selassie, for plotting to overthrow the government.

LIBRARY USE BOOSTED

Municipal councils shouldn't skimp on library budgets when the economy is on the downturn because library use increases during slumps, library board chairman Gordon Hutcheson has told Saanich council.

In a letter accompanying the proposed 1975 budget he said, "if the economy does slump the library assumes an importance in the provision of entertainment, education and public morale beyond its normal usefulness."

Library director Don Miller agreed today the trend was noticeable during tht Depression but said Victoria's economic situation isn't dismal enough for the tend to be noticeable here.

But increased use is being noted in San Francisco where city library official David Belch said it is becoming difficult to find a seat in the main branch downtown.

"There's a reverse correlation between library attendance and the Dow Jones average," he said in a UPI story.

Comet-Watchers Spot New Kohouteks

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Remember Kohoutek, last year's comet of the century that ended up being a celestial bust? Well, two more Kohouteks have been discovered.

Dr. Brian Marsden of the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory said Monday that Dr. Lubos Kohoutek of West Germany's Hamburg Observatory discovered the new pair of comets last month.

Marsden, director of the International Astronomical Union's centre that registers such sightings, said Kohoutek originally thought he had discovered just one comet but that it turned out he spotted two.

Kohoutek photographed a comet on Feb. 9 and confirmed his sighting with another picture on Feb. 28. After Marsden received the information, he told comet watchers throughout the world to be on the lookout.

Early in March, Marsden got a cable from T. Ikemura in Japan saying he had spotted Kohoutek's Feb. 27 comet, but it was moving away from the sun instead of toward it as Kohoutek indicated.

Marsden said he then realized that Kohoutek had seen two comets and thought they were the same one.

The International Astronomical Union learned recently that the comet spotted by Kohoutek and Ikemura had been seen earlier at the European Southern Observatory in Chile. Dr. Richard West reported finding the comet in a picture taken in October.

So, the comet Kohoutek spotted Feb. 27 was dubbed West-Kohoutek-Ikemura 1975B. The Feb. 9 comet was labelled Kohoutek 1975C.

Carrots Bloom In Alta.

EDMONTON (CP) — Vegetable crops don't easily come to mind when you think of farming in Alberta but the industry has been booming in recent years.

While vegetables are an expensive, high-risk crop and relatively uneconomical to grow in the province more than 1,900 acres of fresh vegetable crops were produced in 1974.

The agriculture department says potatoes, carrots, parsnips, onions, rutabagas, cabbage and corn are grown in sufficient quantity to supply a major proportion of the retail vegetable market.

Each of those crops usually costs a vegetable farmer about $300 an acre to produce and although the growing season is short, new Alberta products are appearing on the market every year.

The industry is spreading from the southern areas where it originated and market gardens are operating successfully near Edmonton and Fairview in the northwest.

Vegetables for processing also are on the increase, primarily corn, peas and carrots, and the province has three large processing plants, one at Tabor and two at Lethbridge. One plant handles mainly potatoes and the other two process green and wax beans, beets, potatoes, peas, corn and carrots.

Terror Plagues Pakistan As Bhutto Jails Hundreds

By LEWIS N. SIMONS

PESHAWAR, Pakistan (UPI) — Terror bombings and political arrests have set off a wave of fear in this frontier city on the fabled Khyber Pass.

Police and a powerful federal security force under the direction of Prime Minister Zulfiqar Ali Bhutto have jailed hundreds of people following the bombing murder of one of Bhutto's favorite political protegees.

Nervous residents tell lurid tales to visitors of continuing midnight arrests, interrogation and torture. Visitors are themselves openly followed by secret police.

Bhutto alleges that the government of neighboring Afghanistan, in collusion with his chief political opposition, the National Rhami party was responsible for the murder of provincial senior minister Hyat Mohamed Sherpro. The party has been banned and its leader, Khan Abdul Wali Khan, is being held in a jail in Lahore, where not even his lawyers may see him.

The story behind the crisis here is complex and convoluted, involving international intrigue, tribal score-settling and political machinations. Pakistan's shaky democracy and the growing risk of war with Afghanistan are on the line.

Although he has offered the public no evidence that either the party or the Afghans were behind last month's slaying of Sherpao, Bhutto said that an impending Supreme Court investigation would prove his allegations. A large number of Pakistanis believe that the court is in Bhutto's pocket.

Bhutto's instinctive decision to arrest National Awami party leaders and ban the party as soon as he was informed of Sherpao's death has reduced his credibility in Peshawar and throughout the troubled Northwest Frontier Province, which the central government has taken over through recently extended "emergency" powers.

"He's wanted to get rid of Wali and the whole party for years, and Sherpao's murder gave him just the excuse he wanted," claimed one supporter of the banned party. Long an open critic of Bhutto, this man, like all Peshawar residents I spoke with, asked that his name not be used. "In his present mood he can't stand any criticism at all," he explained. "There's no way of knowing who he'll get next."

Bhutto, who expressed surprise when I told him of the widespread distrust his actions have produced, claimed that this was all part of a "preplanned campaign" against him by leaders of the National Awani party and Afghan President Mohamed Daud Khan. Daud, whom observers in Kabul term "a congenital Pakistan-hater," has been fanning the flames of a long-smoldering border dispute between the two countries ever since he seized power in a military coup two years ago.

Daud insists that the border, imposed by the British and known as the "Durand line," is illegal. He demands that the people of the border area living in Pakistan's impoverished Northwest Frontier and Baluchistan Provinces, as well as in Afghanistan, be allowed to decide for themselves which country they want to belong to or whether they prefer uniting in an autonomous unit known as "Pakhtunistan."

Several top National Awami party members, most notably the Pathan poet Ajmal Khattak, have been given plush refuge in Kabul. This and a virulent anti-Pakistan propaganda campaign give some credence to Bhutto's claims of collusion between Afghanistan and the party and of Daud's interference in Pakistan's internal affairs.

But most supporters of the banned party are not interested in joining Afghanistan a country even poorer than Pakistan.

Bhutto denied that by banning the party he had effectively doomed democracy in Pakistan. "The only limits on democracy in this country are reason and secession," he said. "The NAP wasn't a national opposition party, it was anti-national."

Most western observers dismiss these protests. Although some National Awami party members, are undoubtedly pro-Afghan, Wali Khan is widely respected as a moderate. And Bhutto's own reputation raises questions about the depth of his attachment to democracy.

"Democracy is a figleaf here," said one western diplomat in Islamabad, the national capital. "Bhutto likes to have just a hint of it around to hide his true instincts of one-man rule."

When the shah of Iran set up a one-party government just after he ended a "private" visit to Bhutto, the moves received banner headlines and editorial praise in Pakistan's controlled press. In the past year Bhutto has shut down 15 independent newspapers.

$25B Oil Bill Loan Plan

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Canada and 23 other leading industrial countries announced a plan Monday to make up to $25 billion in emergency loans available should any of them run into difficulty meeting oil bills.

The plan was worked out in a series of meetings by experts under the chairmanship of Jacques van Ypersele, monetary counsellor to the Belgian finance ministry. It must now be submitted to the 24 countries for approval.

Canada's quota is $840,000,000 special drawing rights equivalent to about $1,000,000,000, representing 4.2 per cent of the total.

Quotas for other leading countries are the United States $6,950,000,000; West Germany $2,925,000,000; Japan $2,725,000,000; France $2,125,000,000, and Britain $2,000,000,000.

CLIMATE NEWS GLOOMY

VANCOUVER (CP) — Nobody likes to hear bad news.

Dr. Colin Clark, a former president of the B.C. Environmental council, says environmentalists have reinforced this natural distaste with a welter of dire forecasts, many of them wildly speculative.

But he said attention should be paid to tested warnings and preventive action taken when warnigns prove credible.

The most horrific danger for the world is induced climatic change, he said. In the last five years the earth had cooled, with the mean global temperature falling by a greater amount than the temperature gain recorded in the previous 60 years.

"I don't say that a second ice age is upon us, but that it may be upon us," said Dr. Clark, a University of B.C. mathematics professor.

"It may not happen, but if it does we are going to look awful foolish if we have left ourselves totally unprepared.

"It may be that the world is going to cool to the point where we can no longer grow wheat in Canada and there is not a thing we can do about it. But we will never find out unless we make the effort."

Clark said the pressing day-to-day needs of society operate against timely action to avoid future disasters.

He used the Peruvian anchovy industry as an example. In less than a decade, the industry grew from nothing to an annual harvest of 10 million tons of fish meal.

Clark said a Canadian, the late Dr. G. J. Pollack, had predicted that if the anchovy catch was maintained during times of unusual current patterns, the fishery would be destroyed.

In 1971, the currents changed, preventing the fish from feeding.

Clark said the Peruvians should have halted the anchovy fishing industry protecting the fish when the food supply was low.

But the Peruvians went ahead and the next year, when currents returned to normal, th fish population was drastically reduced.

Saigon Crumbling

SAIGON (UPI) — More than half a million refugees fled five South Vietnam provinces today in a desperate search for safety in a shrinking Vietnam. Two northern provinces near the border of North Vietnam appeared in danger, and there were reports in Manila that South Vietnam was seeking a cease-fire.

South Vietnamese Deputy Premier Phan Quang Dan appealed to Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos today to help bring about a cease-fire in Vietnam, the Philippines government announced in Manila. Dan is on a visit to Manila.

President Nguyen Van Thieu met with Premier Tran Thien Khiem and Gen. Cao Van Vien, chief of the joint general staff, in a lengthy session today. There were strong recurring rumors that South Vietnamese, Viet Cong and U.S. officials were involved in negotiations somewhere outside Vietnam.

Vietnamese political and military observers said there could be no other explanation for the sudden evacuation of five provinces without substantial government resistance. There were strong indications that a Communist guarantee of an unresisted passage for the refugees was still holding firm.

The government already had told 250,000 residents of the Central Highlands provinces of Kontum, Pleiku and Darlac to flee to the coast. More refugees were fleeing from Dalat, the capital of the Central Highlands province of Tuyen Duc, northeast of Saigon. Today officials urged more than 300,000 civilians to flee the former imperial capital of Hue, in Thua Thien province 400 miles north of Saigon.

President Nguyen Van Thieu already had stripped Da Nang of a division of paratroopers and ordered them flown to Saigon to bolster the defences of the capital. Government sources said he had done so also in case dissident generals opposed to abandonment of the Central Highlands took matters into their own hands.

Meanwhile, in Cambodia, government paratroopers and T-28 bomber planes today attacked Communist-led insurgents operating across the Mekong River from Phnom Penh in a new threat to the capital. In Phnom Penh, there was new opposition of President Lon Nol from students and young politicians and generals.

CITY PREPARING BYLAW

Firetraps Facing Axe

Victoria will strengthen its fire prevention bylaw to force owners of older hotels and rooming houses to upgrade their fire protection standards — even if that results in the closure of some buildings and the displacement of low-income tenants.

On Tuesday, city council instructed city solicitor Jakob de Villiers to prepare a bylaw amendment giving the beefed-up powers to the fire department.

At the in-camera meeting Fire Chief Eric Simmons gave council a list of buildings — 11 hotels and 15 apartments, all in the downtown area — requiring fire safety upgrading.

Under the amendment to be introduced at next week's council meeting, the fire chief will be able to enforce, through threat of closure, compliance with the fire safety requirements of the National Building Code.

The powers will embrace all multiple-occupancy buildings, including hotels, rooming houses, apartments, hostels and private hospitals.

Where any building does not conform to the code the fire chief will notify the owner to that effect in writing. The owner will be allowed six months to fix up the building, and the notice will warn him that if he hasn't done so by that time "no person shall use or occupy the building for any purpose."

De Villiers explained today that the owner can apply to council for an extension of the six-month period of grace, or alternatively the fire chief can apply to shorten the period if he deems it an emergency situation.

Simmons said some of the improvements that might be required would include provision of fire alarms with two power sources, to replace old battery alarms; direct egress to exits, so that occupants don't have to scramble through adjacent rooms to reach the fire escape; fire-separation floors; and in some cases sprinklers.

Ald. Malcolm Anderson, chairman of the fire prevention committee, said today there was no building in the list which was of an "absolutely must do right now situation," but another source put it differently.

He said some of the deficiencies mentioned "read like a horror story."

Anderson admitted the requirements of the fire chief could prove so expensive to some building owners that they would be tempted to close or demolish the buildings in question, thus displacing a number of teants.

"But it's a risk we have to take, and it could be that we would find a way of relocating those people," he said.

Sources commenting on Tuesday's meeting said there was only one dissenting vote when council instructed the solicitor to prepare the bylaw.

"The consensus was this is an intolerable situation and council has a duty to act, regardless of the consequences," said one.

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Judging by their cheery hellos, goodbyes and see-you-tomorrows, almost every passenger on the bus seems to know everyone else.

Normally their conversation on the journey would concern the things commuters tend to chat about: the weather, the cost of living, kids, gardening, health, hobbies.

But these days there's really only one topic — the bus itself, and whether it will still be running next week between Victoria, Happy Valley, Metchosin and Rocky Point areas.

Mixed in with the speculation are roughly equal parts of optimism and pessimism, of indignation and concern.

But no one will know for sure what's going to happen until Friday at the earliest. That's when the B.C. Motor Carrier Commission holds a public hearing to consider the application by South West Coach Lines Ltd. to discontinue its service.

The commission's decision may be handed down that day or, if there's heavy public representation, it may be deferred a few days to allow commissioners to study the transcripts of all submissions.

One rural route less for bus driver Clar Thomas?

In either case it appears to be a foregone conclusion. In a series of Times interviews, all concerned expressed the view — company officials confidently, passengers resignedly—that the application will be approved and South West will be allowed to abandon the poorly-used rural route which it claims to be an economic disaster.

But in that case, will the NDP government, with its transit philosophy of service before profit, step in and direct B.C. Hydro to maintain the transportation link with the western community, as a logical extension of its capital region transit system?

If so, when? Could there be an interim period of irritation, inconvenience and even hardship for those who depend on the buses to get to work or to the stores, to see their doctor or visit friends?

Provincial officials either cannot or will not answer such questions — at least before Friday's hearing.

Victor Parker, head of the provincial bureau of transit, said any statement from him could well influence or prejudice the outcome of the commission's deliberations.

All he would add, cautiously, was: "In general terms it's fair to say the government is concerned wherever a loss of service is taking place."

But in fact, according to Leo Richards, president of South West's parent firm, Watson and Ash of Courtenay, discussions have been going on with Parker for almost a year on the possibility of handing over the "total transit operation" for integration in the Hydro network.

"There has been a positive

NEW FERRY DELAY

Transport Minister Bob Strachan admitted to the legislature Tuesday that specification changes have delayed the completion of three B.C. ferries under construction on the mainland.

He was responding to a charge from Oak Bay Tory Scott Wallace that construction has been held back by the government's decision to use a Seattle design for the two passenger vessels and a truck ferry.

The original designs failed to provide for heavy enough drive shafts and bearings in the new mid-engine ships, Wallace said.

The problems, said Strachan, were not noticed until after the ferries were put to tender and, "Yes, there is additional cost."

Wallace said he was disappointed in the minister for not answering a similar question two weeks ago. "Then he simply said no, there was no extra cost."

"We were told last year that we had to go to Seattle because ships on that design were already in existence and it would cut short the construction time," Wallace said outside the house.

But there's a basic problem in the design that can't be passed off as technical aberration, said Wallace, and the ships won't be ready until next spring.

Indians Slash Fishnets

Indian fishermen of the village of Yuquot at Friendly Cove, 80 miles northwest of Port Alberni slashed the nets of non-Indian commercial fishermen who entered the cove Tuesday.

Members of the west coast district council of the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs are meeting in Gold River today to plan what action to take to protect their traditional fishing rights.

(See Indians Ieize B.C. Land Page 55).

Chief Philip Paul confirmed today that 30 non-Indian fishermen had tntered Friendiy Cove Tuesday, which for as long as Indians can remember has been their traditional gathering place for herring roe.

The UBCIC has sent a brief to Ottawa, requesting that the gathering of herring roe, on which the Nootka band at Friendly Cove depends be protected.

A spokesman said today that they had not received any official reply to their brief but it had been initimated that granting of licences for gathering herring roe was at least a year away.

Instead, the fisheries department has started to issue licences this year.

Up until this year, he said, there had been no non-Indian commercial fishing for herring roe that is either naturally deposited on kelp or on artificial substates.

School Board Expects Regular Classes Soon

Greater Victoria School Board chairman William Ross said today the board hopes to make an announcement soon that schools will return to a full-time basis.

He said the plans are being developed but the board has some serious problems to solve first before the schools can return to normal.

Ross was responding to a demand made today by Victoria Chamber of Commerce president Robert McHaffie that schools return to a full-time basis because the board has failed to justify the present curtailment program, despite the strike of janitors.

Ross said the board is concerned about three major problems in connection with opening the schools on a full-time basis.

—The use of volunteers to clean schools during teaching hours could come into conflict with policies of the British Columbia Teachers Federation that teachers will not assist or work beside strike breakers or volunteer labor during a labor dispute. Co-operation with teachers so far had been excellent but the use of volunteers could precipitate new problems.

—Full-time teaching would mean a great increase in garbage because many students would bring lunches.

—It is difficult to obtain voluntary Clean-up help in evening hours. If school was on a full-time basis it might be difficult to find sufficient help to clean buildings after school.

"However, these problems are not insurmountable and we may have something to announce in a few days."

Meanwhile John Wood, lawyer for the school board, will appear in B.C. Supreme Court at 10:30 a.m. Thursday to ask for an injunction against mass picketing of schools. Writs have been issued and affadavits filed for the court action.

The board wants to limit the number and location of pickets around schools.

At the same time, lawyers for the transport ministry, city of Victoria and private industry today are seeking grounds for a possible Supreme Court injunction to reopen Johnson Street bridge to marine traffic.

In a hard-hitting speech to a chamber of commerce meeting at The Empress today, president McHaffie said schools should be re-opened on a full-time basis, despite the strike by janitors.

There is not one point in the reasons given for the reduction in school hours that cannot be overcome by the simple process of improvisation and we urge re-instatement of full-time teaching," McHaffie said.

He was also sharply critical of the police commission for failing to take strong mea-

BEIRUT (Reuter) — A Canadian diplomat and a woman companion were injured by machine-gun fire as they were driving in the suburb of Hazmiyeh early this morning, police sources said.

They said Michel Adrian Ritchie and Claire Albert Hayte were taken to hospital.

$200M Needed For B.C. Courts

The provincial government will have to spend $200 million within the next five years to provide adequate court facilities in B.C., the attorney-general's department annual report says.

Only 7 per cent of court facilities in the province were considered suitable in 1974 and an estimated 27 per cent of the space could be renovated, says the report tabled in the legislature Tuesday.

Last year the courts were hearing cases in 125 facilities at 82 locations, and occasionally at another 40 locations.

But the space shortage is expected to be compounded within the next three to five years because most of the municipalities require the space occupied by the courts for other uses.

The provincial government, since it assumed total responsibility for courts, will be required to replace nearly all of the municipal court offices.

Priorities in the replacement include a provision that all courts where possible be housed in the same facility, separate from police and other government offices, and at locations assuring equal access to the public.

"It is estimated that 61 new buildings, 17 courthouse renovations and 16 other renovations at a total cost of some $140 million would be required. In addition to this amount $60 million is to be spent on the new Vancouver courthouse."

The document, which outlines in depth all areas under the attorney-general's jurisdiction, also reports a decline in the ability of provincial courts to resolve claims and administer justice which is hindering the efforts of police and corrections facilities.

"The public and corporate and union clients become discouraged from relying on the courts to resolve their cases."

It notes a flagging public respect, particularly among those who have been exposed to the criminal court system, either as accused or witnesses.

"Unless the courts are given the resources necessary to provide adequate justice services, more people will seek alternative means of resolving conflict and respect for law will be reduced."

Delay in both criminal and

ANDERSON 'SNOB'

The opposition attack on Resources Minister Norman Levi for accepting a $200 political contribution flared again Tuesday in the legislature.

Several times Premier Barrett got into angry exchanges with government critics and in one outburst called Liberal Leader David Anderson "an insufferable snob." He later withdrew the remark.

Socred Hugh Curtis offered "new evidence" to the House a letter from Joe Hargitt, donor of the $200, to Gary Bannerman, the Vancouver talk show moderator who first aired the transaction.

Barrett dismissed Curtis' evidence as "nothing new."

Turner In Bribe Incident

HALIFAX (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner, then a minister without portfolio, was mentioned in an RCMP report on an allegation that a bribe was offered to a salvage company in connection with the Irving Whale which sank off Prince Edward Island in 1970, according to the CBC.

It says the report followed a complaint by a salvage company executive that he had been offered a $50,000 bribe to raise his firm's bid.

The CBC, in the Halifax television news program Here Today, said the RCMP report included a recommendation that a vice-president of Foundation Co. of Canada and a vice-president of Acres Consulting Services of Toronto be prosecuted for "conspiracy to commit a false pretence" in the alleged bribe.

The CBC says the report noted involvement of three politicans, including Turner, in efforts by two Canadian firms to secure the contract and says Turner had been involved in a previous incident which could have worked to the benefit of Foundation Co.

The RCMP report said the previous incident involved plans to salvage the vessel LeeCliffe Hall in 1965.

A tender was offered on this salvage job by a British firm by the name of Risdon Beazley, the report said.

The CBC quotes the report as saying:

"Other pressures were obviously applied and we see at one point that the Hon. John Turner, then minister without portfolio, took a great deal of interest in wanting to see the tender documents and, later, the possible exemption which might be granted a foreign vessel of Risdon Beazley's on the LeeCliffe Hall."

The CBC said federal authorities later ruled a foreign vessel could not handle the job on the LeeCliffe Hall.

Gov't Zeroes In on Shoddy Big Business

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Fly-by-night operators are the first target of the provincial Trade Practices Act but some of the largest companies in British Columbia will be next to face charges, says Bill Neilson, deputy minister of the department of consumer services.

He said the department is beginning investigations into a wide range of practices by big companies and it would press charges where violations occur.

"We are giving advance warning that we intend to be fair — but we intend to be tough," he said.

He said there has been a high level of co-operation from businessmen generally during the early stages when small operators engaged in dubious practices were under the gun.

"It remains to be seen how much co-operation we will receive when we go after the big companies. However, we will not let that deter us."

The department was hopeful the high level of co-operation would continue.

He said the main aim of Consumer Affairs Minister Phyllis Young is to get the active co-operation of businessmen so the Trade Practices Act could be enforced without going to court.

At the heart of the her program is the agreement of voluntary compliance, Neilson said.

This is similar to the consent order common in the United States but new to Canadian court actions.

In the event a company appears to be violating the trade practices act, the department will press charges. However, the charges are dropped if the company agrees to sign an agreegment of voluntary compliance.

By signing the agreement, the company does not confess to any guilt but says it will amend its actions in future and make any restitution agreed upon between the department and the company.

The advantages, says Neilson, are many. The deceptive practice is halted immediately, it will not be repeated and victims receive immediate redress.

The alternative is further court action. This could take months or even years to resolve. Sometimes it is impossible to get an injunction to halt the practice pending the trial.

And the adversary action in court is not the best way to get active co-operation from businessmen.

While preparing cases against large companies, the department at the same time is carrying out a massive education program so merchants will become fully aware of the requirements under the Trade Practices Act, Neilson said.

Meetings are under way with merchants, individually and in groups. A series of seminars on the act is being conducted by University of B.C. commerce department and sponsored by the department of consumer services.

sures against law-breakers during the dispute.

"We have witnessed unlawful acts, harassment, and intimidation that under other circumstances, would not have been tolerated for a moment by our law enforcement agencies," McHaffie said.

In city council's caucus session Tuesday, Mayor Peter Pollen summarized the present situation of total impasse in the dispute, and admitted to aldermen that he can glimpse no hope for a settlement on the horizon.

Pollen said there is no doubt that the outside workers' intransigence is "being orchestrated by Vancouver" (by CUPE's B.C. division), and added: "There is an element so militant that it is difficult to have an intelligent, worthwhile, productive dialogue with them."

CUPE locals today told Labor Minister Bill King they would co-operate in an industrial inquiry commission if one were appointed by him. But it would be on a non-binding basis.

The letter is in response to an informal inquiry from the labor department seeking the union attitude toward third-party intervention to recommend a settlement.

B.C. Federation of Labor secretary-treasurer Len Guy and vice-president John Squire were to fly into Victoria this afternoon to talk to CUPE officials about the strike.

Season Open 2 Days: Five Boats Sunk

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

With the herring season only two days old five B.C. Packers Ltd. fish boats loaded with catches have already sunk.

The latest went down at 8:14 a.m. this morning about two miles off Bordelais Island in Barkley Sound.

The 33-foot seiner Chief Seegay, her holds full, was on her way home when she sank.

A Pacific Co-ordination Centre spokesman reported the men were spotted by the lifeboat crew as they were towing another herring boat the 55-foot gillnetter Seaforth into safety with her crew of five.

"She had been heading for Vancouver and had broken down south of Pachena Point," the spokesman said.

"They spotted the other boat foundering and saw the men getting into the liferaft. They went over and picked them up."

The spokesman said the weather was not severe at the time. The wind was blowing about 15 knots.

"The trouble is herring is like having a bunch of water aboard," he said, "It's not like salmon that you can pack tight. Herring slosh around."

The 95-foot Ernest Todd also sank today about 6 a.m. two miles off Pachena Point with a full load of herring aboard.

The five men aboard were rescued by two other fishing vessels in the area, the Cape Mark and the Cape Bathrust. Owned by Todd Fishing Co. of Vancouver, she was also fishing for B.C. Packers.

There is still no sign of the Steveston man and his two sons who have been missing since their fishing vessel the Lady Sylvia was found capsized four miles off Nootka Island. The vessel is now beached at Cachalot Inlet in Kyuquot Channel.

The first sinking occurred Monday shortly after the herring season opened at 2 p.m. Five men were rescued when the Vampe went down off the Queen Charlottes.

Five men were also rescued when the Royal Princess foundered in Barkley Sound Tuesday.

Mines Lose Round One

VANCOUVER (CP) A British Columbia Supreme Court judge dismissed an action Tuesday brought by 18 mining companies challenging the legality of the province's Mining Royalties Act because they sued the wrong party.

Mr. Justice D. R. Verchere said the proper defendant in the case was "Her Majesty the Queen in the right of the Province of British Columbia." The suit named the attorney-general, the minister of mines and petroleum resources, the administrator of mineral royalties and the assessor of the mineral land tax as defendants.

Three Escapers Guilty

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three prisoners who escaped custody Nov. 28 at Cassidy Airport near Nanaimo were convicted of three counts of attempted murder, wounding and forcible seizure Tuesday in B.C. supreme court.

Richard Dale Beeman, 25, Robert Moyse, 19 and Claire Daniel Wilson, 24, will be sentenced Friday by Mr. Justice A. B. MacFarlane.

After a nine-hour manhunt, the three men were caught when a police vthicle rammed the car the prisoners were riding in.

They were charged with attempted murder of deputy sheriff Gilbert Perry, RCMP constable Paul Cloutier and farmer Ben Dixon of Cassidy. They were also charged with wounding deputy sheriff Jerrold Ockey and with forcible seizure of Frances Dixon.

Record U.S. Deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States closed out last year with the biggest three month deficit on record for its basic balance of payments, the government reported Wednesday. The commerce department said the balance was in deficit by $5.9 billion in the last quarter of the year, a deterioration from $3.9 billion for the previous quarter.

Ottawa Holding Back On $1 Million Payout

Times News Services

Payment of more than $1 million in shipbuilding subsidies to a Quebec company is being withheld by Ottawa while legal officers study whether the payments should be made in light of the dredging scandal.

Payment to Marine Industires Ltd., will be held back until a legal opinion is received, Industry Minister Alastair Gillespie said Tuesday.

Marine Industries was among 13 companies charged last week with conspiracy to defraud through dredging contracts.

It also is charged with income tax evasion in Toronto and with tax conspiracy in connection with harbor dredging in Hamilton.

Gillespie thus came a long way from March 6 when he and Mitchell Sharp, acting prime minister, said there was no connection between subsidies and investigations into dredging contracts.

Jean Simard, relative of Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa, meanwhile appeared in an Ottawa court today to be indicted on five counts in connection with the dredging scandal.

Simard, cousin of Bourassa's wife, is vice-president of Marine Industries Ltd. of Sorel, Que. and a director of J. P. Porter Co. Ltd., two of the companies charged with conspiracy to defraud.

On his return to the Commons Tuesday, Labor Minister John Munro was not asked about the Hamilton affair, which has developed since 1972 from allegations of local corruption to charges last week that 13 companies and 14 individuals conspired to cheat taxpayers of more than $4 million on dredging contracts.

Questioning in the Commons Tuesday about the Hamilton harbor scandal or the dredging charges was the lightest it has been recently. Most of the questions involved Munro, although none were directed to him.

"In trying to clarify this matter I would like to ask the prime minister if he is confident that no minister of the government was aware of possible wrongdoing, or allegations or suspicions of fraud or irregularities regarding Marine Industries contracts prior to the complaints in the fall of 1972?" Nowlan asked.

He pointed out that Monday in the House the Prime Minister had been asked whether the government knew about a "possible massive fraud prior to the fall of 1972."

The reply by the Prime Minister Monday was "I am prepared to say that certainly no one in the cabinet knew."

Blaze in Chamber Fatal to Diver

The man, whose name RCMP have not released pending notification of next-of-kin, was employed by Can-Dive Services Ltd. of North Vancouver.

He had just surfaced after working at a depth of more than 200 feet repairing boyancy apparatus for a new effluent pipe being installed at MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. Harmac pulp mill.

Supervisor of the diving operation Phil Newton said decompression was normal and rouine after a dive of such a depth.

"We've done it thousands of time before without mishap."

He said the cause of the fire was still under investigation but conjectured it could have been set off by static electricity in the diver's clothing.

Girlie Show Ban Ogled

. . . studies law

The city of Victoria has the power to ban girlie shows if it wants to do so.

In its regular caucus session Tuesday, city council was given that advice by city solicitor Jakob de Villiers, and expressed keen interest in exploring the matter further.

De Villiers explained that under the city's private act of 1916 — an exclusive piece of legislation similar in some respects to Vancouver's city charter — it can "regulate the conduct of all businesses in the city," through licensing.

"You mean if we want to prohibit girlie shows we can do so?" asked Mayor Peter Pollen.

"But can we make it stand up in court?" inquired Ald. Clyde Savage.

Pollen, Savage and other council members criticized the topless dancing act at the Tally Ho tavern, and said such so-called entertainment has no place in Victoria.

The mayor read out to the meeting a letter from a young mother of two children who said she was married to an alcoholic, and was concerned that the proliferation of such forms of entertainment in drinking establishments would keep him away from home even longer hours.

"To have a 20-year-old pussy cat stalking around a dais like some caged lioness . . . is just deplorable," Pollen said.

The discussuion followed a meeting with Vic Woodland, general manager of the Liquor Administration Branch, in which the provincial official allayed council fears that the city might have no say in the approval of general liquor licences of neighborhood pubs, clubs and the like.

Aldermen pointed out that a branch circular issued last Nov. 1 clearly implied municipalities would have only zoning authority and no specific say in choosing "between sites and between individual applicants . . ."

But Woodland assured the meeting that that was not the intention.

"If you don't want them (pubs) there we're certainly not going to shove them down your throats," he said, adding that in Vancouver municipal rejection of a licence application automatically makes it "dead in the water" as far as the branch is concerned.

Council asked Woodland to put such guarantees in writing before it considers passing a resolution to give blanket approval in principle to the issue of general liquor licences.

Besides neighborhood pubs, hotels and clubs, the general licence would permit sale of liquor in private and publicly owned recreation centres, community centres and municipal or provincial cultural centres.

STRIHA

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

A survey of residents in Langford, Colwood and Metchosin on their health care needs shows the vast majority want a community health centre — with emergency care their first priority.

And in an open letter to the residents, John Striha, president of the Juan de Fuca Hospital Society, suggests the regional hospital board be given a few weeks to come up with "some positive plans and some deadlines for action."

Failing that, Striha said: ". . . if you really want some health facilities in this area, it would seem that the only course of action left for the residents is to organize and petition (Health Minister Dennis Cocke) for some action similar to what the residents of the North Saanich Peninsula had to do last year to get their replacement of the Rest Haven Hospital."

Striha said he hopes meetings and petitions won't prove necessary.

The survey was requested by the Juan de Fuca Hospital Society in January to determine how a cross-section of the Langford-Colwood-Metchosin population felt about development of a community health centre.

Those questioned were also asked what health facilities they thought were needed in the community.

The survey and the report it has produced were prepared by Dr. Stephen Webb from the department of sociology at the University of Victoria. A total of 415 people was questioned.

In his summary Webb said the survey showed there is widespread dissatisfaction with present health care facilities. Better than nine out of 10 favored establishhment of a new health centre.

While there was a wide range of opinion as to what services are needed almost everyone (96 per cent) said they feel emergency services should be included in the health centre.

There is no general hospital or first aid clinic in the area and accident victims are now brought to one of Victoria's two general hospitals downtown.

Almost seven in 10 of those questioned felt the need for emergency services was urgent.

Other facilities people favored, together with the percentage wanting them:

A day operating surgery (83 per cent)

Home nursing (80 per cent)

Geriatric care (79 per cent)

Laboratory and x-ray services (78 per cent)

On the need for longer term care, primarily for the chronically ill and aged, 81 per cent indicated a need for extended care facilities, 75 per cent for intermediate or convalescent and 59 per cent for "boarding home" care facilities.

The survey also asked people their preference on where a health centre should be located if one was built and Goldstream Avenue emerged as the clear preference among three suggestions.

Fifty-four per cent favored Goldstream over 21 per cent for the Island Highway and 17 per cent for Luxton. Eight per cent said they didn't know.

Those questioned were asked if they had suggestions for services to be included in the health centre beyond those mentioned by surveyors and dental services were mentioned by 25 people.

Youth counselling, a senior citizen drop-in centre, a youth drop-in centre and rehabilitation for the handicapped were others most frequently suggested.

In his letter Striha said the objectives of the Juan de Fuca Hospital Society, which was incorporated in January of 1970, are to see a new extended care hsopital built to replace the one at St. Mary's Priory and to press for other necessary health care such as emergency services.

The board has made suggestions to the regional hospital board and the health minister, including suggestions on sites for a hosptial and other care facilities, he said.

"We have only received many unfulfilled promises and no action."

The survey results confirmed "in very definite terms" that what the residnets want is exactly what the board has been pleading for since March of 1969, he said.

Player Found Guilty

Wayne Matherne, defensive halfback for the B.C. Lions, and Ivor Kidds of Burnaby were found guilty in provincial court Tuesday night of assaulting a B.C. Ferries patrolman at Swartz Bay Sept. 8.

"I think if these two men had been sober there would have been no incident. It's as simple as that," said Judge Harold Alder.

He fined them $100 each for common assault on patrolman John Anderson.

Anderson told the court both men "were drunk. They had had far more booze than they should have had out in the public."

He was directing traffic near the terminal when a van with two women and two men he identified in court as Matherne and Kidds tried to overtake the lineup of waiting vehicles.

The woman driver apologized and offered to go back but the two men told her not to. The van did go back, then returned in a few minutes trying to overtake waiting vehicles and this time Matherne was driving.

Later in the evening, the van arrived again, this time in the correct lineup position, with two women in it. Matherne and Kidds arrived walking a few minutes later.

After more profanities directed at Anderson, Kidds "stepped right into me." Anderson said he caught him, threw him to the ground between him and Matherne, and then Matherne was coming over the fallen Kidds at him.

Anderson grabbed Matherne, turned him over a car hood and tried unsuccessfully to get handcuffs on him. Meanwhile, Kidds got up and jumped on Anderson's back.

Another patrolman, Wilfred Hetman, said he saw Matherne attack Anderson and swung a fist at him. Hetman and a bystander pulled Kidds off Anderson's back and the fight ended.

Bus Drivers Book Off At Dockyard

Employees at HMC Dockyard in Esquimalt are walking, hitching or driving their own cars around the base today after bus drivers and other heavy equipment operators booked off work this morning.

The 31 drivers and operators, members of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, were pulled off work to bolster a picket line set up for the second day at the marine services institute in Pat Bay.

A Dockyard spokesman said all scheduled bus runs on the base had to be cancelled.

The heavy equipment operators include the bus drivers and lowbed, crane, bulldozer and front-end loader operators.

The walkout has also affected a sewer replacement program in the Belmont Park housing subdivision which will be delayed until the operators return to work.

Employees of two contracting firms, Fraser River Pile Driving and Wakeman and Trimble contractors an excavation company, refused to cross the PSAC picket line.

The picket line also prevented a Case Existological Laboratories crew from assembling equiment at the institute site which was to be used to refloat a $500,000 barge which sunk last week in Pat Bay.

The barge was a floating laboratory for the Controlled Ecosystem Pollution Experiment, a five-year, $10 million international experiment.

PSAC picket lines were continued today at the marine services base on Harbour Road and the Ogden Point grain elevator.

PSAC regional representative Tom Dalzell said the rotating strikes would be escalated.

PSAC employees at nine B.C. airports walked off the job today, but Ministry of transport spokesman Des Allard said operations were not affected.

Meanwhile, in Ottawa negotiations for the treasury board and 19,000 federal blue collar workers agreed to further mediation sessions today to try to settle the month long wage dispute without government intervention.

The wage clause is the only outstanding issue. A union spokesman said officially the two sides are less than three per cent apart while unofficially there is only a 1.25 per cent gap.

"Both sides are spinning their wheels, but we will meet again," said a spokesman for the Public Service Alliance of Canada, bargaining agent for the 19,000 member general labor and trades group.

In the Commons Tuesday, Prime Minister Trudeau told opposition questioners that the time had not yet come for intervention by Parliament in the dispute.

New Image Bid By Open Shops

The 75-member Vancouver Island Right to Work Association has changed its name to the Vancouver Island Independent Contractors and Businessmen's Association.

Newly-elected president Robert Gillespie said the association has always recognized that its support came from "open-shop contractors and businessmen and through the new name we hope to acknowledge that support."

The Right to Work Association was formed in 1972 in response to an organizing drive by building trades unions.

Right to work associations were first formed in the U.S. where some states still prohibit closed shop union agreements.

A newsletter published before the annual meeting Tuesday night, said members had earlier voted to adopt a less controversial name.

Gillespie said the concept of right-to-work is still important to the roganization and "we are proud of the volume of business done under that banner. With the new image, we expect to accomplish more."

Several independent movement groups will meet in Trail in April to form a province-wide association.

Five Stolen Cheques Already Cashed in Area

A young man who stole about $8,850 worth of American Express travellers cheques from Yorkshire Turst Tuesday afternoon has wasted no time getting rid of them.

Victoria police said today five of the cheques have already been cashed at Greater Victoria stores. All were passed by a man using the alias Christopher Bernard.

The theft occurred shortly after 4 p.m. when a young man wearing a dark blue suit and tie entered Yorkshire Trust at 737 Fort and told a teller he wanted to buy large amount of travellers cheques.

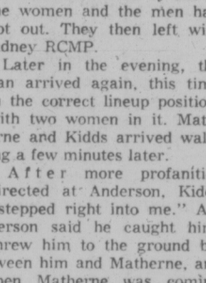

As the teller was processing the order her attention was distracted.

When she returned all the cheques she had left on the counter had disappeared and so had the man.

Police said the cheques were in denominations of $100, $50, $20 and $10.

He Keeps Them in the Picture

To someone from another land, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, at first, is Nelson Eddy, sitting astride a horse, singing Rose Marie.

And at second it's a guy tracking a scoundrel through the frozen north and, as always, getting his man.

But you're not in Canada long before you realize that the RCMP, as well as having a romantic past, is a modern peace-keeping force. And it's doing more modern things every day.

Take the new appointment for John Faux.

Faux (you pronounce it Fox) is the Nanaimo constable who has just been named as the first RCMP officer in the country ever to be given full-time official duties in the specialized post of composite-drawing expert.

I travelled to Nanaimo to meet John Faux and discovered a likeable young family man with a great talent.

Around the walls of his Colwood Road home are scenes in oils and portraits of children, with great depth and feeling. And down in the basement there's the almost-finished Aeronca Champion, a 30-year-old plane John is rebuilding.

Flying has been the big hobby for Faux, a pilot since he was 17 and in the Air Cadets. And this is the third plane he has taken as "a basket case" consisting of just old tubing and reconstructed the frame and covered it with dacron. He hopes to be flying this one by the summer.

Now 32, Faux was born in Sault Ste. Marie in Ontario and had his schooling there.

Right now, he has two children — five-year-old Jill and four-year-old Gregory — but it will be three by the time the family moves to the two-acre property just purchased in Metchosin. John's wife Pat is expecting their third child in mid-April and Faux starts his new job in Victoria on May 1.

Two small faces peep at the doorway as John and I spread out photographs and his charcoal drawings, made from witnesses' descriptions of suspects, on the carpet and compare likenesses.

"Most of them are, Greg," she answers.

"Are some of them like us, then?"

Most of them are, in fact, suspects in rape cases, says John, and that's where the great amount of his identification work lies.

It's strange, though, for a man making a success in his field, John Faux didn't particularly want to be an artist or a policeman.

As long as he can remember, he was always "mad" on drawing, took an art course at high school and later went to the Ontario College of Art in Toronto for two years. But he had "no desire to become a starving artist."

As a boy, the RCMP held no great attraction for him, either. But he became friends with a number of men on the force in Sault Ste. Marie and "they sort of talked me into joining," says John.

Now John has been in the RCMP for 11 years. He spent seven years on general duty in Manitoba, five of them in Selkirk, and then went to Ottawa for a year's special training in identification work. He has been almost three years in the Nanaimo detachment, where he has worked mainly as a photographer in the identification department.

As his talent with charcoal became more and more evident, though, John found more of his time was being spent sketching suspects. Last year he did about 40 or 50 drawings and had "a pretty good success rate."

John does freehand sketches from descriptions — a lot different from the old way of using a kit, where the officers show witnesses about 40 different noses and ask them to pick the one nearest to the suspect's nose, and so on.

"I only used a kit once," John says with a smile, "and it took me about four hours to get all the features together, and then they weren't in the right proportion. It took me a few minutes to do a freehand sketch and get the features right."

"The idea of the kit is that any officer can be called on to use it effectively," John explains. "But it doesn't really work as first you have to have talent, and second you have to have an interest."

"Because of the success I've had, they're giving me a chance to make a go of it or fall flat on my face," says John. But he believes that one day there won't be just one composite artist in Canada or even in B.C.

After all, it's a post that has been popular with police forces in the United States for years. You read about it in the papers and you see it all the time in those police shows on TV like Ironside, don't you?

"Oh sure," says John with a grin. "They've always got composite artists there whipping out the sketches in about 30 seconds.

"And I wonder what's wrong with me because it takes me about three or four hours to do the same thing . . ."

Gov't In CUPE Row

The provincial government's labor department has stepped into the municipal labor dispute.

Tom Smith, area representative for the Canadian Union of Public Employees was approached by a member of Labor Minister Bill King's department Tuesday and asked whether CUPE would consider the establishment of an industrial inquiry commission in an effort to settle the dispute.

Smith dispatched a reply to King by saying that CUPE would agree to a non-binding industrial inquiry.

His actions were ratified unanimously today by CUPE's bargaining committee.

In a bulletin sent out to all union members, the committee said that third-party assistance could be of great help in solving the situation.

It was up to management now to co-operate, the bulletin said.

All CUPE locals will hold general meetings within the next 48 hours.

CUPE spokesman John Marshall said if a one-man commission is appointed this could be done in two or three days and a report, with recommendations, be made available within seven to 10 days.

He said all CUPE members would be given the opportunity to vote on the commission's recommendations.

Jim Campbell, spokesman for the regional employers' bargaining group said King contacted him today and asked to meet the group at 2:30 p.m. today in King's office.

An hour later, however, King's secretary phoned and asked for the meeting to be delayed for 24 hours.

"We have no idea what King wants," Campbell said, "But I feel he should have approached both parties at the same time. All we know we get from CUPE."

Meanwhile Greater Victoria School Board chairman William Ross said today the board hopes to make an announcement soon that schools will return to a full-time basis.

He said the plans are being developed but the board has some serious problems to solve first before the schools can return to normal.

CITY PREPARING BYLAW

Firetraps Facing Axe

Victoria will strengthen its fire prevention bylaw to force owners of older hotels and rooming houses to upgrade their fire protection standards — even if that results in the closure of some buildings and the displacement of low-income tenants.

On Tuesday, city council instructed city solicitor Jakob de Villiers to prepare a bylaw amendment giving the beefed-up powers to the fire department.

At the in-camera meeting Fire Chief Eric Simmons gave council a list of buildings — 11 hotels and 15 apartments, all in the downtown area — requiring fire safety upgrading.

Under the amendment to be introduced at next week's council meeting, the fire chief will be able to enforce, through threat of closure, compliance with the fire safety requirements of the National Building Code.

The powers will embrace all multiple-occupancy buildings, including hotels, rooming houses, apartments, hostels and private hospitals.

Where any building does not conform to the code the fire chief will notify the owner to that effect in writing. The owner will be allowed six months to fix up the building, and the notice will warn him that if he hasn't done so by that time "no person shall use or occupy the building for any purpose."

De Villiers explained today that the owner can apply to council for an extension of the six-month period of grace, or alternatively the fire chief can apply to shorten the period if he deems it an emergency situation.

Simmons said some of the improvements that might be required would include provision of fire alarms with two power sources, to replace old battery alarms; direct egress to exits, so that occupants don't have to scramble through adjacent rooms to reach the fire escape; fire-separation floors; and in some cases sprinklers.

Ald. Malcolm Anderson, chairman of the fire prevention committee, said today there was no building in the list which was of an "absolutely must do right now situation," but another source put it differently.

He said some of the deficiencies mentioned "read like a horror story."

Anderson admitted the requirements of the fire chief could prove so expensive to some building owners that they would be tempted to close or demolish the buildings in question, thus displacing a number of tenants.

"But it's a risk we have to take, and it could be that we would find a way of relocating those people," he said.

Sources commenting on Tuesday's meeting said there was only one dissenting vote when council instructed the solicitor to prepare the bylaw.

"The consensus was this is an intolerable situation and council has a duty to act, regardless of the consequences," said one.

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Judging by their cheery hellos, goodbyes and see-you-tomorrows, almost every passenger on the bus seems to know everyone else.

Normally their conversation on the journey would concern the things commuters tend to chat about: the weather, the cost of living, kids, gardening, health, hobbies.

But these days there's really only one topic — the bus itself, and whether it will still be running next week between Victoria, Happy Valley, Metchosin and Rocky Point areas.

Mixed in with the speculation are roughly equal parts of optimism and pessimism, of indignation and concern.

But no one will know for sure what's going to happen until Friday at the earliest. That's when the B.C. Motor Carrier Commission holds a public hearing to consider the application by South West Coach Lines Ltd. to discontinue its service.

The commission's decision may be handed down that day or, if there's heavy public representation, it may be deferred a few days to allow commissioners to study the transcripts of all submissions.

One rural route less for bus driver Clar Thomas?

In either case it appears to be a foregone conclusion. In a series of Times interviews, all concerned expressed the view — company officials confidently, passengers resignedly—that the application will be approved and South West will be allowed to abandon the poorly-used rural route which it claims to be an economic disaster.

But in that case, will the NDP government, with its transit philosophy of service before profit, step in and direct B.C. Hydro to maintain the transportation link with the western community, as a logical extension of its capital region transit system?

If so, when? Could there be an interim period of irritation, inconvenience and even hardship for those who depend on the buses to get to work or to the stores, to see their doctor or visit friends?

Provincial officials either cannot or will not answer such questions — at least before Friday's hearing.

Victor Parker, head of the provincial bureau of transit, said any statement from him could well influence or prejudice the outcome of the commission's deliberations.

All he would add, cautiously, was: "In general terms it's fair to say the government is concerned wherever a loss of service is taking place."

But in fact, according to Leo Richards, president of South West's parent firm, Watson and Ash of Courtenay, discussions have been going on with Parker for almost a year on the possibility of handing over the "total transit operation" for integration in the Hydro network.

NEW FERRY DELAY

Transport Minister Bob Strachan admitted to the legislature Tuesday that specification changes have delayed the completion of three B.C. ferries under construction on the mainland.

He was responding to a charge from Oak Bay Tory Scott Wallace that construction has been held back by the government's decision to use a Seattle design for the two passenger vessels and a truck ferry.

The original designs failed to provide for heavy enough drive shafts and bearings in the new mid-engine ships, Wallace said.

The problems, said Strachan, were not noticed until after the ferries were put to tender and, "Yes, there is additional cost."

Wallace said he was disappointed in the minister for not answering a similar question two weeks ago. "Then he simply said no, there was no extra cost."

"We were told last year that we had to go to Seattle because ships of that design were already in existence and it would cut short the construction time," Wallace said outside the house.

But there's a basic problem in the design that can't be passed off as technical aberration, said Wallace, and the ships won't be ready until next spring.

Turner In Bribe Incident

HALIFAX (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner, then a minister without portfolio, was mentioned in an RCMP report on an allegation that a bribe was offered to a salvage company in connection with the Irving Whale which sank off Prince Edward Island in 1970, according to the CBC.

It says the report followed a complaint by a salvage company executive that he had been offered a $50,000 bribe to raise his firm's bid.

The CBC, in the Halifax television news program Here Today, said the RCMP report included a recommendation that a vice-president of Foundation Co. of Canada and a vice-president of Acres Consulting Services of Toronto be prosecuted for "conspiracy to commit a false pretence" in the alleged bribe.

The CBC says the report noted involvement of three politicans, including Turner, in efforts by two Canadian firms to secure the contract and says Turner had been involved in a previous incident which could have worked to the benefit of Foundation Co.

The RCMP report said the previous incident involved plans to salvage the vessel LeeCliffe Hall in 1965.

A tender was offered on this salvage job by a British firm by the name of Risdon Beazley, the report said.

The CBC quotes the report as saying:

"Other pressures were obviously applied and we see at one point that the Hon. John Turner, then minister without portfolio, took a great deal of interest in wanting to see the tender documents and, later, the possible exemption which might be granted a foreign vessel of Risdon Beazley's on the LeeCliffe Hall."

The CBC said federal authorities later ruled a foreign vessel could not handle the job on the LeeCliffe Hall.

Indians Slash Fishnets

Indian fishermen of the village of Yuquot at Friendly Cove, 80 miles northwest of Port Alberni slashed the nets of non-Indian commercial fishermen who entered the cove Tuesday.

Members of the west coast district council of the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs are meeting in Gold River today to plan what action to take to protect their traditional fishing rights.

(See Indians Seize B.C. Land Page 55).

UBCIC land claims director Philip Paul confirmed today that 30 non-Indian fishermen had entered Friendly Cove Tuesday, which for as long as Indians can remember has been their traditional gathering place for herring roe.

The UBCIC has sent a brief to Ottawa, requesting that the gathering of herring roe, on which the Nootka band at Friendly Cove depends, be protected.

A spokesman said today that they had not received any official reply to their brief but it had been intimated that granting of licences for gathering herring roe was at least a year away.

Instead, the fisheries department has started to issue licences this year.

Up until this year, he said, there had been no non-Indian commercial fishing for herring roe that is either naturally deposited on kelp or on artificial substates.

Saigon Crumbling . . . Peace Talks Rumored

SAIGON (UPI) — More than half a million refugees fled five South Vietnam provinces today in a desperate search for safety in a shrinking Vietnam. Two northern provinces near the border of North Vietnam appeared in danger, and there were reports in Manila that South Vietnam was seeking a cease-fire.

South Vietnamese Deputy Premier Phan Quang Dan appealed to Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos today to help bring about a cease-fire in Vietnam, the Philippines government announced in Manila. Dan is on a visit to Manila.

President Nguyen Van Thieu met with Premier Tran Thien Khiem and Gen. Cao Van Vien, chief of the joint general staff, in a lengthy session today. There were strong recurring rumors that South Vietnamese, Viet Cong and U.S. officials were involved in negotiations somewhere outside Vietnam.

Vietnamese political and military observers said there could be no other explanation for the sudden evacuation of five provinces without substantial government resistance. There were strong indications that a Communist guarantee of an unresisted passage for the refugees was still holding firm.

The government already had told 250,000 residents of the Central Highlands provinces of Kontum, Pleiku and Darlac to flee to the coast. More refugees were fleeing from Dalat, the capital of the Central Highlands province of Tuyen Duc, northeast of Saigon. Today officials urged more than 300,000 civilians to flee the former imperial capital of Hue, in Thua Thien province 400 miles north of Saigon.

President Nguyen Van Thieu already had stripped Da Nang of a division of paratroopers and ordered them flown to Saigon to bolster the defences of the capital. Government sources said he had done so also in case dissident generals opposed to abandonment of the Central Highlands took matters into their own hands.

Meanwhile, in Cambodia, government paratroopers and T-28 bomber planes today attacked Communist-led insurgents operating across the Mekong River from Phnom Penh in a new threat to the capital. In Phnom Penh, there was new opposition of President Lon Nol from students and young politicians and generals.

Filed reports said Hue radia Tuesday broadcast a first appeal to the people to flee, and that thousands of civilians began moving down Highway 1—the blood-stained road the French called The Street Without Joy.

Canadian Envoy Shot

BEIRUT (Reuter) — A Canadian diplomat and a woman companion were injured by machine-gun fire as they were driving in the suburb of Hazmiyeh early this morning, police sources said.

They said Michel Adrian Ritchie and Claire Albert Hayte were taken to hospital.

ANDERSON 'SNOB'

The opposition attack on Resources Minister Norman Levi for accepting a $200 political contribution flared again Tuesday in the legislature.

Several times Premier Barrett got into angry exchanges with government critics and in one outburst called Liberal Leader David Anderson "an insufferable snob." He later withdrew the remark.

Socred Hugh Curtis offered "new evidence" to the House a letter from Joe Hargitt, donor of the $200, to Gary Bannerman, the Vancouver talk show moderator who first aired the transaction.

Barrett dismissed Curtis' evidence as "nothing new."

$200M Needed For B.C. Courts

The provincial government will have to spend $200 million within the next five years to provide adequate court facilities in B.C., the attorney-general's department annual report says.

Only 7 per cent of court facilities in the province were considered suitable in 1974 and an estimated 27 per cent of the space could be renovated, says the report tabled in the legislature Tuesday.

Last year the courts were hearing cases in 125 facilities at 82 locations, and occasionally at another 40 locations.

But the space shortage is expected to be compounded within the next three to five years because most of the municipalities require the space occupied by the courts for other uses.

The provincial government, since it assumed total responsibility for courts, will be required to replace nearly all of the municipal court offices.

Priorities in the replacement include a provision that all courts where possible be housed in the same facility, separate from police and other government offices, and at locations assuring equal access to the public.

"It is estimated that 64 new buildings, 17 courthouse renovations and 16 other renovations at a total cost of some $140 million would be required. In addition to this amount $60 million is to be spent on the new Vancouver courthouse."

The document, which outlines in depth all areas under the attorney-general's jurisdiction, also reports a decline in the ability of provincial courts to resolve claims and administer justice which is hindering the efforts of police and corrections facilities.

"The public and corporate and union clients become discouraged from relying on the courts to resolve their cases."

It notes a flagging public respect, particularly among those who have been exposed to the criminal court system, either as accused or witnesses.

"Unless the courts are given the resources necessary to provide adequate justice services, more people will seek alternative means of resolving conflict and respect for law will be reduced."

Gov't Zeroes In on Shoddy Big Business

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Fly-by-night operators are the first target of the provincial Trade Practices Act but some of the largest companies in British Columbia will be next to face charges, says Bill Neilson, deputy minister of the department of consumer services.

He said the department is beginning investigations into a wide range of practices by big companies and it would press charges where violations occur.

"We are giving advance warning that we intend to be fair — but we intend to be tough," he said.

He said there has been a high level of co-operation from businessmen generally during the early stages when small operators engaged in dubious practices were under the gun.

"It remains to be seen how much co-operation we will receive when we go after the big companies. However, we will not let that deter us."

The department was hopeful the high level of co-operation would continue.

He said the main aim of Consumer Affairs Minister Phyllis Young is to get the active co-operation of businessmen so the Trade Practices Act could be enforced without going to court.

At the heart of the program is the agreement of voluntary compliance, Neilson said.

This is similar to the consent order common in the United States but new to Canadian court actions.

In the event a company appears to be violating the Trade Practices Act, the department will press charges. However, the charges are dropped if the company agrees to sign an agreement of voluntary compliance.

By signing the agreement, the company does not confess to any guilt but says it will amend its actions in future and make any restitution agreed upon between the department and the company.

The advantages, says Neilson, are many. The deceptive practice is halted immediately, it will not be repeated and victims receive immediate redress.

The alternative is further court action. This could take months or even years to resolve. Sometimes it is impossible to get an injunction to halt the practice pending the trial.

And the adversary action in court is not the best way to get active co-operation from businessmen.

While preparing cases against large companies, the department at the same time is carrying out a massive education program so merchants will become fully aware of the requirements under the Trade Practices Act, Neilson said.

Meetings are under way with merchants, individually and in groups. A series of seminars on the act is being conducted by University of B.C. commerce department and sponsored by the department of consumer services.

Gov't In CUPE Row

The provincial government's labor department has stepped into the municipal labor dispute.

Tom Smith, area representative for the Canadian Union of Public Employees was approached by a member of Labor Minister Bill King's department Tuesday and asked whether CUPE would consider the establishment of an industrial inquiry commission in an effort to settle the dispute.

Smith dispatched a reply to King by had saying that CUPE would agree to a non-binding industrial inquiry.

His actions were ratified unanimously today by CUPE's bargaining committee.

In a bulletin sent out to all union members, the committee said that third-party assistance could be of great help in solving the situation.

It was up to management now to co-operate, the bulletin said.

All CUPE locals will hold general meetings within the next 48 hours.

CUPE spokesman John Marshall said if a one-man commission is appointed this could be done in two or three days and a report, with recommendations, be made available within seven to 10 days.

He said all CUPE members would be given the opportunity to vote on the commission's recommendations.

Jim Campbell, spokesman for the regional employers' bargaining group said King contacted him today and asked to meet the group at 2:30 p.m. today in King's office.

An hour later, however, King's secretary phoned and asked for the meeting to be delayed for 24 hours.

"We have no idea what King wants," Campbell said, "But I feel he should have approached both parties at the same time. All we know we get from CUPE."

Meanwhile Greater Victoria School Board chairman William Ross said today the board hopes to make an announcement soon that schools will return to a full-time basis.

He said the plans are being developed but the board has some serious problems to solve first before the schools can return to normal.

CITY PREPARING BYLAW

Firetraps Facing Axe

Victoria will strengthen its fire prevention bylaw to force owners of older hotels and rooming houses to upgrade their fire protection standards — even if that results in the closure of some buildings and the displacement of low-income tenants.

On Tuesday, city council instructed city solicitor Jakob de Villiers to prepare a bylaw amendment giving the beefed-up powers to the fire department.

At the in-camera meeting Fire Chief Eric Simmons gave council a list of buildings — 11 hotels and 15 apartments, all in the downtown area — requiring fire safety upgrading.

Under the amendment to be introduced at next week's council meeting, the fire chief will be able to enforce, through threat of closure, compliance with the fire safety requirements of the National Building Code.

The powers will embrace all multiple-occupancy buildings, including hotels, rooming houses, apartments, hostels and private hospitals.

Where any building does not conform to the code the fire chief will notify the owner to that effect in writing. The owner will be allowed six months to fix up the building, and the notice will warn him that if he hasn't done so by that time "no person shall use or occupy the building for any purpose."

De Villiers explained today that the owner can apply to council for an extension of the six-month period of grace, or alternatively the fire chief can apply to shorten the period if he deems it an emergency situation.

Simmons said some of the improvements that might be required would include provision of fire alarms with two power sources, to replace old battery alarms; direct egress to exits, so that occupants don't have to scramble through adjacent rooms to reach the fire escape; fire-separation floors; and in some cases sprinklers.

Ald. Malcolm Anderson, chairman of the fire prevention committee, said today there was no building in the list which was of an "absolutely must do right now situation," but another source put it differently.

He said some of the deficiencies mentioned "read like a horror story."

Anderson admitted the requirements of the fire chief could prove so expensive to some building owners that they would be tempted to close or demolish the buildings in question, thus displacing a number of tenants.

"But it's a risk we have to take, and it could be that we would find a way of relocating those people," he said.

Sources commenting on Tuesday's meeting said there was only one dissenting vote when council instructed the solicitor to prepare the bylaw.

"The consensus was this is an intolerable situation and council has a duty to act, regardless of the consequences," said one.

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Judging by their cheery hellos, goodbyes and see-you-tomorrows, almost every passenger on the bus seems to know everyone else.

Normally their conversation on the journey would concern the things commuters tend to chat about: the weather, the cost of living, kids, gardening, health, hobbies.

But these days there's really only one topic — the bus itself, and whether it will still be running next week between Victoria, Happy Valley, Metchosin and Rocky Point areas.

Mixed in with the speculation are roughly equal parts of optimism and pessimism, of indignation and concern.

But no one will know for sure what's going to happen until Friday at the earliest. That's when the B.C. Motor Carrier Commission holds a public hearing to consider the application by South West Coach Lines Ltd. to discontinue its service.

The commission's decision may be handed down that day or, if there's heavy public representation, it may be deferred a few days to allow commissioners to study the transcripts of all submissions.

One rural route less for bus driver Clar Thomas?

In either case it appears to be a foregone conclusion. In a series of Times interviews, all concerned expressed the view — company officials confidently, passengers resignedly—that the application will be approved and South West will be allowed to abandon the poorly-used rural route which it claims to be an economic disaster.

But in that case, will the NDP government, with its transit philosophy of service before profit, step in and direct B.C. Hydro to maintain the transportation link with the western community, as a logical extension of its capital region transit system?

If so, when? Could there be an interim period of irritation, inconvenience and even hardship for those who depend on the buses to get to work or to the stores, to see their doctor or visit friends?

Provincial officials either cannot or will not answer such questions — at least before Friday's hearing.

Victor Parker, head of the provincial bureau of transit, said any statement from him could well influence or prejudice the outcome of the commission's deliberations.

All he would add, cautiously, was: "In general terms it's fair to say the government is concerned wherever a loss of service is taking place."

But in fact, according to Leo Richards, president of South West's parent firm, Watson and Ash of Courtenay, discussions have been going on with Parker for almost a year on the possibility of handing over the "total transit operation" for integration in the Hydro network.

NEW FERRY DELAY

Transport Minister Bob Strachan admitted to the legislature Tuesday that specification changes have delayed the completion of three B.C. ferries under construction on the mainland.

He was responding to a charge from Oak Bay Tory Scott Wallace that construction has been held back by the government's decision to use a Seattle design for the two passenger vessels and a truck ferry.

The original designs failed to provide for heavy enough drive shafts and bearings in the new mid-engine ships, Wallace said.

The problems, said Strachan, were not noticed until after the ferries were put to tender and, "Yes, there is additional cost."

Wallace said he was disappointed in the minister for not answering a similar question two weeks ago. "Then he simply said no, there was no extra cost."

"We were told last year that we had to go to Seattle because ships of that design were already in existence and it would cut short the construction time," Wallace said outside the house.

But there's a basic problem in the design that can't be passed off as technical aberration, said Wallace, and the ships won't be ready until next spring.

Indians Slash Fishnets

Indian fishermen of the village of Yuquot at Friendly Cove, 80 miles northwest of Port Alberni slashed the nets of non-Indian commercial fishermen who entered the cove Tuesday.

Members of the west coast district council of the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs are meeting in Gold River today to plan what action to take to protect their traditional fishing rights.

(See Indians Seize B.C. Land Page 55).

UBCIC land claims director Philip Paul confirmed today that 30 non-Indian fishermen had entered Friendly Cove Tuesday, which for as long as Indians can remember has been their traditional gathering place for herring roe.

The UBCIC has sent a brief to Ottawa, requesting that the gathering of herring roe, on which the Nootka band at Friendly Cove depends, be protected.

A spokesman said today that they had not received any official reply to their brief but it had been intimated that granting of licences for gathering herring roe was at least a year away.

Instead, the fisheries department has started to issue licences this year.

Up until this year, he said, there had been no non-Indian commercial fishing for herring roe that is either naturally deposited on kelp or on artificial substates.

Saigon Crumbling . . . Peace Talks Rumored

SAIGON (UPI) — More than half a million refugees fled five South Vietnam provinces today in a desperate search for safety in a shrinking Vietnam. Two northern provinces near the border of North Vietnam appeared in danger, and there were reports in Manila that South Vietnam was seeking a cease-fire.

South Vietnamese Deputy Premier Phan Quang Dan appealed to Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos today to help bring about a cease-fire in Vietnam, the Philippines government announced in Manila. Dan is on a visit to Manila.

President Nguyen Van Thieu met with Premier Tran Thien Khiem and Gen. Cao Van Vien, chief of the joint general staff, in a lengthy session today. There were strong recurring rumors that South Vietnamese, Viet Cong and U.S. officials were involved in negotiations somewhere outside Vietnam.

Vietnamese political and military observers said there could be no other explanation for the sudden evacuation of five provinces without substantial government resistance. There were strong indications that a Communist guarantee of an unresisted passage for the refugees was still holding firm.

The government already had told 250,000 residents of the Central Highlands provinces of Kontum, Pleiku and Darlac to flee to the coast. More refugees were fleeing from Dalat, the capital of the Central Highlands province of Tuyen Duc, northeast of Saigon. Today officials urged more than 300,000 civilians to flee the former imperial capital of Hue, in Thua Thien province 400 miles north of Saigon.

President Nguyen Van Thieu already had stripped Da Nang of a division of paratroopers and ordered them flown to Saigon to bolster the defences of the capital. Government sources said he had done so also in case dissident generals opposed to abandonment of the Central Highlands took matters into their own hands.

Meanwhile, in Cambodia, government paratroopers and T-28 bomber planes today attacked Communist-led insurgents operating across the Mekong River from Phnom Penh in a new threat to the capital. In Phnom Penh, there was new opposition ot President Lon Nol from students and young politicians and generals.

Filed reports said Hue radia Tuesday broadcast a first appeal to the people to flee, and that thousands of civilians began moving down Highway 1—the blood-stained road the French called The Street Without Joy.

Canadian Envoy Shot

BEIRUT (Reuter) — A Canadian diplomat and a woman companion were injured by machine-gun fire as they were driving in the suburb of Hazmiyeh early this morning, police sources said.

They said Michel Adrian Ritchie and Claire Albert Hayte were taken to hospital.

ANDERSON 'SNOB'

The opposition attack on Resources Minister Norman Levi for accepting a $200 political contribution flared again Tuesday in the legislature.

Several times Premier Barrett got into angry exchanges with government critics and in one outburst called Liberal Leader David Anderson "an insufferable snob." He later withdrew the remark.

Socred Hugh Curtis offered "new evidence" to the House — a letter from Joe Hargitt, donor of the $200, to Gary Bannerman, the Vancouver talk show moderator who first aired the transaction.

Barrett dismissed Curtis' evidence as "nothing new."

Turner In Bribe Incident

HALIFAX (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner, then a minister without portfolio, was mentioned in an RCMP report on an allegation that a bribe was offered to a salvage company in connection with the Irving Whale which sank off Prince Edward Island in 1970, according to the CBC.

It says the report followed a complaint by a salvage company executive that he had been offered a $50,000 bribe to raise his firm's bid.

The CBC, in the Halifax television news program Here Today, said the RCMP report included a recommendation that a vice-president of Foundation Co. of Canada and a vice-president of Acres Consulting Services of Toronto be prosecuted for "conspiracy to commit a false pretence" in the alleged bribe.

The CBC says the report noted involvement of three politicans, including Turner, in efforts by two Canadian firms to secure the contract and says Turner had been involved in a previous incident which could have worked to the benefit of Foundation Co.

The RCMP report said the previous incident involved plans to salvage the vessel LeeCliffe Hall in 1965.

A tender was offered on this salvage job by a British firm by the name of Risdon Beazley, the report said.

The CBC quotes the report as saying:

"Other pressures were obviously applied and we see at one point that the Hon. John Turner, then minister without portfolio, took a great deal of interest in wanting to see the tender documents and, later, the possible exemption which might be granted a foreign vessel of Risdon Beazley's on the LeeCliffe Hall."

The CBC said federal authorities later ruled a foreign vessel could not handle the job on the LeeCliffe Hall.

$200M Needed For B.C. Courts

The provincial government will have to spend $200 million within the next five years to provide adequate court facilities in B.C., the attorney-general's department annual report says.

Only 7 per cent of court facilities in the province were considered suitable in 1974 and an estimated 27 per cent of the space could be renovated, says the report tabled in the legislature Tuesday.

Last year the courts were hearing cases in 125 facilities at 82 locations, and occasionally at another 40 locations.

But the space shortage is expected to be compounded within the next three to five years because most of the municipalities require the space occupied by the courts for other uses.

The provincial government, since it assumed total responsibility for courts, will be required to replace nearly all of the municipal court offices.

Priorities in the replacement include a provision that all courts where possible be housed in the same facility, separate from police and other government offices, and at locations assuring equal access to the public.

"It is estimated that 64 new buildings, 17 courthouse renovations and 16 other renovations at a total cost of some $140 million would be required. In addition to this amount $60 million is to be spent on the new Vancouver courthouse."

The document, which outlines in depth all areas under the attorney-general's jurisdiction, also reports a decline in the ability of provincial courts to resolve claims and administer justice which is hindering the efforts of police and corrections facilities.

"The public and corporate and union clients become discouraged from relying on the courts to resolve their cases."

It notes a flagging public respect, particularly among those who have been exposed to the criminal court system, either as accused or witnesses.

"Unless the courts are given the resources necessary to provide adequate justice services, more people will seek alternative means of resolving conflict and respect for law will be reduced."

Gov't Zeroes In on Shoddy Big Business

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Fly-by-night operators are the first target of the provincial Trade Practices Act but some of the largest companies in British Columbia will be next to face charges, says Bill Neilson, deputy minister of the department of consumer services.

He said the department is beginning investigations into a wide range of practices by big companies and it would press charges where violations occur.

"We are giving advance warning that we intend to be fair — but we intend to be tough," he said.

He said there has been a high level of co-operation from businessmen generally during the early stages when small operators engaged in dubious practices were under the gun.

"It remains to be seen how much co-operation we will receive when we go after the big companies. However, we will not let that deter us."

The department was hopeful the high level of co-operation would continue.

He said the main aim of Consumer Affairs Minister Phyllis Young is to get the active co-operation of businessmen so the Trade Practices Act could be enforced without going to court.

At the heart of the program is the agreement of voluntary compliance, Neilson said.

This is similar to the consent order common in the United States but new to Canadian court actions.

In the event a company appears to be violating the Trade Practices Act, the department will press charges. However, the charges are dropped if the company agrees to sign an agreement of voluntary compliance.

By signing the agreement, the company does not confess to any guilt but says it will amend its actions in future and make any restitution agreed upon between the department and the company.

The advantages, says Neilson, are many. The deceptive practice is halted immediately, it will not be repeated and victims receive immediate redress.

The alternative is further court action. This could take months or even years to resolve. Sometimes it is impossible to get an injunction to halt the practice pending the trial.

And the adversary action in court is not the best way to get active co-operation from businessmen.

While preparing cases against large companies, the department at the same time is carrying out a massive education program so merchants will become fully aware of the requirements under the Trade Practices Act, Neilson said.

Meetings are under way with merchants, individually and in groups. A series of seminars on the act is being conducted by University of B.C. commerce department and sponsored by the department of consumer services.
